There is no necessity, neither really is there time, for a preacher to devote to the constant discussion of a hobby. The blessed Bible is full of more useful themes than we have ability, learning, or time exhaustively to consider and develop in our brief earthly ministry. Of course, I can not name all these; but suffer us to mention a few: The practical consideration of each of the attributes of God as he has been pleased to reveal them, the Ten Commandments, all the various graces of Christian character, all the fruits of the Spirit; all the great evangelical doctrines that bear directly on our personal salvation: depravity, redemption, repentance, saving faith, regeneration, witness of the Spirit, continual spiritual growth; the divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, the divinity of the Holy Spirit; the external, internal, and collateral evidences of the divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures; the miracles and the parables of our Lord; the vast body of most wonderful and instructive biography scattered all through the pages of the blessed Book. We submit that all these themes, and countless more that grow out of the individual experiences and peculiarities of men, and of our various and ever-changing human lot, furnish room and verge enough for the largest ability, widest learning, and longest life. No need to be a hobbyist, nor run into ruts. If we will improve our time; if we desire to interest, instruct, and draw men to God, we can find the largest and richest variety of materials in the Bible and in human life with which to do this work. We need not fear we shall exhaust the material and the suggestions of the Bible. No more danger of it than there is of exhausting the sunlight or the atmosphere.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: We are still having much to encourage us in our work in this part of Japan. There has been no outbreak of opposition and hatred in any of the places we occupy; but there are places in Japan where the opposition of the Buddhists is most marked and severe. I received a letter this morning from Dr. Worden, of the M. E. Church in Nagoya, half-way between this and Tokyo, giving a short account of the violent opposition of the Buddhists in that city. I will quote from his letter: "We are still alive and trusting in the Lord. Your telegram came at a very opportune time. We were greatly encouraged by it. We are having blinds and wooden shutters made to protect us from stones. A policeman in citizens' clothes is now stationed at our house, to watch day and night, and to accompany us whenever we go out for a walk, or to ride. Another policeman patrols in front of the house. Saito, the ringleader of the opposition, has been put in prison for calling the chief of police a traitor. The police are called just what the soshi have named the Christians, 'kokuzoku' (rebels)." The soshi, I might explain here, are the class of young men, sons of the former samurai (or soldier class), who have no occupation, and are doing all they can against any forward movement of their country. Mr. Worden goes on to say: "Others have been arrested for interfering with Christian speakers. The Buddhists, in connection with the owners of houses of ill-fame, are holding mass meetings every night to determine what to do to drive Christianity out of the city. Thousands attend these meetings. A few nights ago the electric wires were cut, and immediately all was darkness, when the Buddhists began to throw everything they could get at the police, who were present watching proceedings. The speaker had been very violent in his language, and the chief of police, being present, told him he should not use such language, and at once the mob made an attack upon the police force. The fight is going on, and, in my opinion, will not be over soon. A new recruit has come to the opposition. He is just released from prison. The police have spies in all parts of the city, and the plans of the soshi are known to them. A plan to visit each preaching-place simultaneously was frustrated by the arrest of Saito. The police are very anxious for us. They fear the soshi will use dynamite bombs. Bro. N. preached here last Sunday night, and aroused the anger of the Buddhists to a high degree."

You see by this letter, which is the second one I have had from him, that the opposition to Christianity in that city is very violent. It is a great Buddhist centre, and they fear an overturning of their faith and doctrine. But Bro. Worden wrote me in his first note, "We are here to stay." We are praying for them, and for all Christian workers in that city. Let all Christians remember them in prayer before the throne of grace, that God may avert the danger, and bring good out of evil. Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

Mexico City.

MR. EDITOR: While in bed with an attack of fever, a few days since, I received a letter from our good Bro. Mitchel, the business manager of the ADVOCATE, enclosing fifteen dollars from McNair, Miss., for Refugio de Cruz. I asked her what she would serve us for as Bible woman in our new church. She said, to give all her time, her all, and risk her life, as she felt she must, she could not take the place for less than $15 per month. She is poor, and alone; has to rent a room and board herself, and says she can not undertake the work for less in that part of the city. She has waited on me two months, hoping I could arrange to employ her; but has accepted a position in a Catholic family as nurse or companion to another invalid, who expects to take a trip to the United States; but I feel sure she would leave any day to serve the church, if I could secure her support, and I would employ her to-morrow if I felt secure of other help. I will see her in a day or two, and see if I can arrange something definite.

I feel awfully restless now. The funeral cars, with their black crosses, are passing constantly, telling us that another Catholic soul has gone to the city of the dead, with no better preparation than the anointing of the priest. The soldiers, too, are marching to the notes of the funeral dirge, following a fallen comrade to his narrow bed. I feel so sad to see them going without God and without hope. Oh! for the power to tell those yet living of that Savior who alone can forgive sins! If I could, I would fill the country with Bible women, to tell of the crucified One whose blood will redeem from stains of guilt. The world and its treasures are the Lord's, and I pray that our Christian women will put native women in this field to sing of Jesus and his love, and recount the old, old story in burning words, that may reach poor, desolate hearts. Our women of Mexico need the comforts of religion; and who can feel for them in their sorrow and degradation as loving woman can? Oh! can not the dear women of my country realize that these people, so near your doors, are dying in heathen ignorance? Look at the pictures of these Mexican women. There is no light of hope in those sad faces. The little children know little of the joys of childhood that your little ones feel. The sunless homes, the sad, hopeless lives make my heart ache. There are many things to try and discourage us, but we know there is One who has power to make our work effective, and he can touch your hearts and fill them with burning zeal for Mexico and her needs. May God bless the sisters in McNair, and Bro. Mitchel for his kindly words and interest in Mexico! And I trust many others may feel a deep interest in placing another Bible woman in Mexico City. We now have two employed in this Mission—one in Toluca, supported by three of my friends in Alabama, and one here in the city working for San Andres Church. She has done a noble work, and suffered much persecution. She is supported by a Sabbath-school in Greenville, Texas, and I am sure that Sunday-school has reason to rejoice that through their efforts Mexican souls are brought to Christ. That letter, with the money for Refugio de Cruz, was a tonic to my sick body. God bless you all!

In Memoriam.

Rev. J. D. Hays was born in Twiggs county, Ga., Nov. 4, 1827, and died in Terry, Hinds county, Miss., Dec. 29, 1890. In the year 1828 his parents removed from Georgia, and settled in Marengo county, Ala.; and in 1836 they came to Lauderdale county, Miss., where the subject of this sketch spent the early part of his life.

He was converted and joined the Methodist Church in November, 1844, under the ministry of Rev. C. C. Calloway, and was baptized and received into full connection in October, 1845, by Rev. Wilson Wier, the father of Dr. T. C. Wier, of the North Mississippi Conference. He soon developed a call to the ministry, and, though blind—being a man of thorough devotion to God and of decided ability—he was licensed to preach Oct. 11, 1849, by Rev. William A. Smythe. The next two years were spent at school. After this he continued a local preacher, being employed the year 1857 on the DeKalb circuit, then in the Alabama Conference, as a supply, until the latter part of the year 1861, when he was received on trial in the Mississippi Conference. In due course of time he was received into full connection, graduated in the course of study, and developed into one of the ablest and most successful ministers of our Conference. For twenty-nine years he continued a worthy member of this body, doing acceptable and efficient work in every field to which he was appointed, and had received his thirtieth appointment when the Master said to him, "It is enough; come up higher." His appointments were as follows: Westville circuit, 1862–1864; Garlandsville circuit, 1865; Paulding circuit, 1866; Mt. Olivet circuit, 1867–1869; Newton circuit, 1870; Forest and Morton, 1871, 1872; Enterprise, 1873; Spring Hill, 1874; Lake circuit, 1875; Forest and Morton, 1876; Hickory circuit, 1877; Lake circuit, 1878, 1879; Fannin, 1880; Georgetown, 1881; Bayou Pierre, 1882; Terry, 1883, 1884; Pearlington, 1885, 1886; Scranton, 1887, and Poplarville, 1888 1890. For 1891 he was appointed to Covington; but his work was finished. His last text was I. Thess. ii, 11, 12—an appropriate conclusion of a long and faithful ministry.

Bro. Hays was a man of pure heart, tender sympathies, unblemished reputation, and fervent zeal. He had a fine command of language, a strong voice, a logical mind, with great powers of persuasion, and the Lord crowned his ministry with abundant success. His devoted friend, Rev. J. M. Gann, writes of him: "I knew him as a popular preacher, in demand at protracted and camp meetings. I have witnessed wonderful displays of divine power under his ministry. His appeals on those occasions were overpowering, and the effects were visible through the vast crowds that waited upon his ministry. He was a man of strong analytical mind, with excellent descriptive powers, and a memory seldom equaled. Better than all, he was a uniform Christian. He recommended religion both by precept and example. I am not surprised that his end was peace."

Bro. Hays was not able to attend our last Conference. He came to Jackson, but, being so unwell from a severe cold, which proved to be la grippe, he went down to Terry, and took his bed. Soon after Conference adjourned news reached us that he was in a critical condition, and then came the sad intelligence that he was dead. On the night of Dec. 28 he conversed for some time about the late Conference, asking many questions about the preachers, and expressing satisfaction at many of the appointments. We thought he was better; but during the night he began to sink rapidly, and early next morning, without a struggle, and with a heavenly smile on his face, he breathed his last. Very remarkable was that smile! It came like a sunbeam just as he ceased to breathe, as if he had opened his eyes in glory and was enraptured by the vision of his Lord.

Bro. Hays leaves an affectionate wife, to whom he was happily married in 1882, to mourn his loss. She was Miss Martha Barnes, of Copiah county, Miss. She was, indeed, an helpmeet to him, and contributed largely to his happiness and usefulness during the latter part of his ministry. May the Lord comfort her in her great sorrow!

The Reason.

MR. EDITOR: You have a paragraph which asks how it is that the Methodist Sunday-schools of Louisiana have fallen away in every particular.

In my humble opinion, a main reason is to be found in that legislation which took away from the teachers and officers of the Sunday-school their time-honored right of electing their superintendent. Of course, women, who furnish four-fifths of the working force of a Sunday-school, are now entirely shut out from even an indirect participation in the selection of a superintendent.

Human nature acts in a Sunday-school as elsewhere. Take from volunteers the election of their officers, and you immediately destroy the courage, efficiency and, perhaps, the useful existence of their organization. American citizens are not accustomed to work cheerfully as volunteers where they are denied the choice of who shall be their leader. Yours,

EDW. BOOTH.

Felicity Street Sunday-School.

MR. EDITOR: That was, indeed, a pleasant and profitable gathering in the basement of Felicity Street Church on last Friday night. It was the occasion of the first quarterly missionary meeting of the Sabbath-school. The recitations by the little folks and the singing by the Sunday-school choir were highly appreciated by the audience. The address by Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens, D. D., was very instructive, and the collection following was a good one. The Felicity Street Sunday-school, under the superintendency of Bro. N. B. Sligh, is constantly growing in numbers and spiritual interest. This may be said as well of that live branch, Felicity Street Mission School, at No. 700 Annunciation Street. Rev. Thomas Carter, assisted by a devoted corps of consecrated young Christians, is doing splendid and, we believe, solid work for the Master.

Notice.

Those having subscribed to the Indian Mission (in Mississippi), and not having paid the first payment, please send it to me at once, to Barlow, Copiah county, Miss., in registered letter, and also write me when you send it, so if it should get lost, we will know it. Now, brethren and sisters, please do not delay.

Any that have not subscribed please send what you are willing, and may the Lord help everyone to do something in this great work.

THE VALLEY OF SILENCE.

BY WILLIAM T. DUMAS.

I would walk down the Valley of Silence,
I would I could walk there alone,
With outposts to seize and to throttle
Each meddler resembling a tone.

For my heart it grows weary of clamor,
Of laughter, of song, and of jest,
Of the din, the commotion, the bustle,
And longs for some haven of rest.

So I'd walk down the Valley of Silence,
A place of such wondrous repose,
That ichor scarce dareth to pulse in
The slumbering heart of the rose:

A place of such marvelous silence
That tiptoe the zephyrs go round,
And tempests are robbed of their thunder,
And all things are robbed of their sound.

There is balm in that magical valley
For nerves all a-quiver with pain;
There is calm for the heart that is fretting,
And peace for the turbulent brain.

Thro' the shades of that mystical valley
Flit dreams that no mortal can reach,
And thoughts there may ripen in silence
Until they are ready for speech.

So I'd walk down the Valley of Silence—
I would I could walk there alone—
Apart from the jangle of traffic,
Afar from the jar of a tone.

Bishop Keener—Prayer and Devotion.

I am not a preacher, but I was privileged to attend the preachers' meeting in New Orleans, recently, and hear Bishop Keener make some remarks, which I wish every preacher could have heard. Coming fresh from the altar of renewed consecration and protracted prayer on the occasion of his seventy-second birthday, and after having spent fifty-odd years in the ministry, he gave valuable advice from so ripe a Christian experience.

He stressed the importance, the indispensableness of prayer, earnest and importunate. He told the preachers they must strive. "Strive is the word," he said, to enter in themselves, and agonize for the salvation of others. Said they had powerful resources at their command, and tremendous responsibilities rested upon them for the proper use of them. But "prayer," he said, "is the secret place of thunder;" and the Word of God, the exact form of which the Holy Spirit had guarded and preserved, must be accepted as it is, studied and used with the power of the Spirit, he insisted.

That was not the first time I heard that deeply spiritual man emphasize the necessity and efficacy of prayer. About a quarter of a century ago I witnessed it worshipping with him at the family altar (his and mine), and thought then children brought up under such holy influences would be saved; they could hardly break over such earnest prayers and be lost. And I heard him illustrate prayer in the pulpit by using the figure of the sparrow and the eagle. He said: "While the one flits with feeble wing about the ground, the other, mounting up on strong pinions, beats the air untiringly, and soars away above the clouds and bathes in the bright sunshine, and breathes a pure atmosphere." And he earnestly exhorted the congregation to imitate the untiring energy of the eagle in their prayers. And he also then spoke of the great and saintly Mr. Fletcher; said the very wall was mildewed where he was accustomed to kneel off and long, earnestly breathing out devout prayer. And the other day the Bishop stated it as a fact, that all men who have ever been eminent for greatness and piety and usefulness, have also been noted for their frequency, earnestness and persistency in prayer. And how could it be otherwise? We have nothing that we have not received, we are nothing and can do nothing of ourselves; but "we can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth us." And the Savior has told us to ask, and assured us we shall receive. Then the more we ask, the more we will receive, and, vice versa, the less we ask, the less we receive. And if we want to be constantly receiving we must be constantly asking. But "let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord" who is not fixed in good purposes, and who asks not in faith. Surely God's blessings are all worth the asking and living continually for them. And if we would be filled with the fullness of God, we must "pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks." And the more we do it, the less averse the heart becomes to it. It becomes a pleasure instead of a task; a joy instead of a burden. We don't commune with God earnestly and often enough to get into the real merits of devotion and derive the full benefits of it, is the reason why so many of us are, sparrow-like, wasting our time down on the ground gathering a few worms, instead of mounting up on the strong wings of unfaltering faith, and, eagle-like, soaring away from earth to heaven in prayer, and renewing our spiritual strength and filling our joy at the fountain-head. How few have regular hours and take the necessary time to study the Scriptures and commune often and long with God in prayer? What success would a lawyer or a doctor, a merchant or a farmer, or anybody else have, if he devoted no more time nor thought nor effort to his business than the average church member does to the welfare of his soul? He would certainly fail and come to nothing. For if a man undertakes any business whatever, he must be intensely in earnest and persevere energetically to succeed worth anything. And why should not the same laws of success and failure obtain in the most important of all business—that of making the only preparation that can render us happy in this life and the next? They certainly do. And we must just make it our chief concern and life-business to live for God. We must learn to "love him and keep his commandments," to be really happy while living here, and get to heaven when we die. It is folly to make any other calculation, or resort to any other expedient. All else must ultimate in disappointment and grief.

It is true, sin does afford pleasures, and some of them are exquisite, but they are short-lived, and leave the painful sting of death behind them; whereas, righteousness and true holiness are full of comfort and joy all the time. "Their ways are ways of pleasantness, and all their paths are peace." And "godliness is profitable unto all things, being the promise of the life that now is, as well as the life to come." The unmixed service of God is full of unmixed peace and consolation, pleasure and happiness, incomparably superior to the pleasures of sin which are full of disappointment and disaster, sorrow and ruin. "The wages of sin is death," eternal death. Let us all take a new start for heaven. With some of us

"Much of our time has run to waste,
And we, perhaps, are near our home;
But the Lord will forgive our follies past,
And give us grace and strength for days to come."

And may those who have not yet wasted much time profit by our experience, and be assured that there is more real, true and lasting happiness in living for God than for the devil. But, as in all other undertakings, we ought to arrange and prepare, properly and conveniently, for serving God in earnest, and as becomes the vastness of the importance of it.

The Savior said, expressly and positively, "When thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father, which is in secret; and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly." Is not that as positive and important command as any in the Bible? And yet how many have a "closet" in which to retire and commune with God? How remarkable and unfortunate that that emphatic command of the Savior has been overlooked or neglected all these eighteen hundred years? Has not the lack of that "secret place" for studying the Word of God and communing with him in prayer been a great cause of the spiritual poverty and want of power in the church of Christ? Had she "dwelt in the secret place of the Most High, would she not have abode under the shadow of the Almighty" more peacefully and prosperously?

The lawyer and the doctor and the merchant, and others, have found offices in which to meet their clients and transact business, and they are considered, not only convenient, but indispensable. But the so-called Christian has no "closet," or "secret place," expressly and suitably prepared in which to meet the Lord and commune with him, although the Savior, when he was here on earth, did not merely suggest, but expressly commanded that he should do so. Then how can he receive and entertain the Lord in a becoming and profitable manner, or "pray to his Father in secret and he rewarded openly," as the Savior desires? Christ certainly was not merely making idle suggestions, and leaving them optionary with us. He must have meant just what he said. And we must do just as he directed us, or we need not expect to be "rewarded openly," if at all. When we build houses, we have finished off nicely and furnished elegantly parlors and guest chambers for the reception and entertainment of our friends, except for the best one of all, the Savior who died and intercedes for us, and our Father who created and preserves us, and the Holy Spirit who comes often to help our infirmities and comforts us.

Every household ought to have a "closet," a private room set apart specially for devotion, and it ought to be suitable and comfortable. And every individual ought to resort to a "secret place" at stated hours to "search the Scriptures" and commune with God in prayer earnestly. And we ought not suffer our thoughts to be interrupted with our temporal affairs while in that secret retreat, nor should we hurry through our devotions there uninterestedly to go out and lose sight of God in secular business.

Many years ago I was at the succession sale of an aged widow. And while going through the house with the auctioneer selling the furniture, we came to a retired room in which was a "devotional;" for kneeling upon there was a low, short cushioned bench, at the ends of which were two uprights of the proper height for supporting a book-board. And we may judge how often and long the devout woman was accustomed to kneel there in prayer and read (I wish I could say the Bible) from the fact then stated that a pair of horses and a carriage (sold on that same occasion) had not missed a day for twenty years to convey her to the Catholic Church. What an example of earnest devotion! Shall we Protestants be less devout? Will we not have a "closet" and a "devotional" for studying the Word of God and communing with him in prayer?

Our holy Bro. Manley tells me that his mother used to retire regularly three times a day into a private room to worship, with reading, prayer and meditation. When he left home, a young man, then going blind, forty-odd years ago, with a negro man to lead and wait on him, his mother gave him a Testament with her parting blessing. And he found in it a slip of paper containing the following precious testimony in her handwriting:

"A Gift from Your Mother.

"My Son: I have read this little Testament through eight times on my knees. The blotches you see upon the leaves are made by the tear-drops that fell from your mother's eyes while upon her knees praying for the salvation of her first-born son."

And her prayers are answered, for he is now happy all the time, living in constant, close and peaceful communion with the Holy Spirit; still successfully instructing others in the way of truth and leading them into the joys of salvation.

And I, too, had a saintly mother who lived rejoicing every day, and directed us children to heaven, and now awaits us there. There is nothing that pays as well as true religion does.

D. W. FOSTER.

Plaisance, La.

Two-Gallused Boys.

Because of several very strong and unqualified statements that were made by Bro. W. N. Lewis in an article called 'One-Gallus Boys," published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of Feb. 26, we reply to said article. We are afraid that some "worthy young preacher" may be injured or discouraged by his statements, unsubstantial as they are, and by the whole trend of his article. In the first place, we are not misanthropes. We believe that there are "worthy young men," especially young preachers, who are all ablaze with manhood, noble, self-denying consecrated manhood, who are worthy of sympathy and worthy of honor and worthy of pecuniary aid for their intellectual advancement, and we believe and know also that many of these young men have worn two suspenders ever since they put on "long pants." What magical virtue "one-gallus" can have we don't see, though Bro. L. gives it the power of fate. Now, we think that Bro. L., in looking at the extraordinary flights his "one-gallus boy" has made, has forgotten a few things. He has forgotten that there are hundreds of thousands of "one-gallus boys" born in the woods, that grow up and become "one-gallus" men, and live in the woods and die in the woods, and the world never knows that they were in the woods. He has forgotten that the "woods are full" of "one-gallus" preachers who never had any teachers but "flowers, birds," etc., and who are bound and shackled by their ignorance to a narrow sphere and a narrow influence. We say he has forgotten these things, for they are facts, and he did not mention them. It is all very poetical to talk about the "rocks and streams and starry heavens" as teachers; but such teachers alone never can help a preacher to read Greek, to sound the depths of religious philosophy, to formulate an argument or make a powerful literary discourse. What the young men who are to stand as leaders in God's temple want is education; the refinement and schooling of their intellects, the cultivation of every talent, the "friction of young mind upon young mind," that they may gain at college, and almost only there. Oftentimes circumstances and expediency demand almost that the young preacher should be helped to an education by the church. Bro. Lewis, speaking of pecuniary help given to a young preacher that he might go to college, says, "Anybody with a spark of true manhood in him would scorn such proffered help."

We are glad the brother told us he did not help the young man in question. We understand his strong opinions better. Nobody can talk more against foreign missions than the man who gave nothing either to foreign or home mission work. But the brother wants everybody to be independent. We thought all organized society was founded for the purpose of mutual help; but Bro. L. says: "No; let's be independent. Let's give back our college endowments to the donors. Let's shut up our public libraries and parks. Let's put down all public humanitarian institutions. Let's dam up all streams of beneficence and philanthropy, and then move out in the woods for fear somebody will help us or encourage us. Let's be independent, or nothing." We are forced to differ with Bro. Lewis in spite of the fact that he has "read history and biography truly." We know that this spirit of mutual help should prevail, especially in the church. And is not the preacher at college a mutual helper? He is working long hours of toilsome study for the good of the church at large. He is fitting himself for a broad, powerful work. Work for whom? For himself? No; work for the people who are paying his way in college. The people simply advance the price of an article, in this case a sermon, in order that it may be better when delivered. Let us look at a homely analogy.

A contractor is building. Does he not pay the workmen while they are sharpening the tools? Certainly. Is it not honorable for them to receive such pay? Most assuredly. Just so it is honorable for a young preacher to receive pay while he is sharpening his tools that he may cut broader swathes in the enemy's ranks or build up religion more readily in a community. Thank God there are enough living arguments in Conferences and colleges to disprove all slurs, and establish the fact, it is right and expedient to help young preachers to an education. There is a vast army of young preachers, "two-gallused" boys and "one-gallus" boys, who are being helped now in college, who in their lives shall make the serried hosts of iniquity tremble, shall put infidelity and skepticism to flight, shall instruct thousands in the way of righteousness, and be wafted home at last to enjoy rest after labor, peace after battling, happiness after sacrifice and sorrow.

A CITY BOY.

The Conference Board of Missions.

The Discipline creates this Board, and when organized under its sanction, it has a legal existence (Dis., p. 196). As a law, it remains in force until repealed.

ITS POWERS.

The law which creates this Board confers upon it certain powers, of which it can not be divested. The powers are clearly defined. The Discipline, on page 196, says: "It shall appoint its own officers and regulate its own affairs, and have absolute control of the missions it may establish, with the consent of the president of the Conference, within its own bounds, and of the funds raised for their support." Art. VI., of the Conference Board, is as follows: "The Board shall regulate its own affairs. It shall have absolute control of the missions it may establish, with the consent of the president of the Conference, and within its own bounds, and of the funds raised for their support." There is no mistaking the meaning of these words by any ordinary mind. In the exercise of these defined powers we may ask, Have they been transcended?

It is conceded that this Board can use the domestic mission money as a sustentation fund to help needy districts, circuits and stations; but this is questionable. Money collected for missions must be applied in that way, and in none other. The law of the church does not allow it to be diverted from this purpose to any other, except with the consent of those who give it. If, outside of the Conference missions, the Board has used the money to aid needy circuits and stations, it is because it believed it had a right to do so. The sanction of the Conference is implied in not passing any resolution condemning it. But is it wise to take this money, and give it to aid circuits and stations which are able to meet their own liabilities, and leave the mission, or missions, with little or nothing to aid the missionary? This has been done in years gone by, and is still practiced. The Board has a right to check this, and will do it if left untrammelled. After the wants of the missions are met, then, if they have any surplus on hand, no one would object to using it in that way.

In 1889 the Mission Board appended to their report this resolution: "It was resolved that in consequence of much dissatisfaction expressed—and because of a better business system—that hereafter the treasurer of the Board will, on order drawn by president or secretary, pay the salaries of our home missionaries quarterly in advance. The presiding elders, in case of unfaithfulness, duly notifying the president or secretary of the Board." This was adopted by the Conference, and still stands upon the Minutes of the Conference. This is a better business system than the former one, and out of it no dissatisfaction can arise. These two features of the resolution are specially to be commended. But the resolution has not been enforced, but practically ignored. The Board stood by it as long as prudence dictated; but such a pressure was brought to bear upon it by the Bishop and presiding elders that it had to conform to it. Why is this? Is it not worthy of a trial? It is certainly a better plan than putting the money in the hands of the presiding elders. Whilst they are, as a general thing, godly men, yet they have their failings. Suppose, for instance, that one of them uses the money with the intention of replacing it when his collections come in, but, in the meantime, he dies, who will pay it back? Again: He puts it in bank, credited to his own account, but he dies before it is drawn. The amount must go in with the assets of his estate, and a whole year must elapse before the money can be reached. Suppose he invests it for the time being, and he fails, how can the money be collected out of him? There is seemingly no reason why he should not use it, provided he replaces it in due time; but the use of it saves him eight per cent., which he would have to pay should he borrow money for his private purposes. When he has three or four hundred dollars in hand, this would become quite an item. But he may hold the money for months after it is due, as instances can be shown, and the missionary be compelled to ask for it more than once, in order to get it. If the money is held three or four months, the laborer should have the per cent., as in cases where money is borrowed; but he does not get it. It should remain in the hands of the treasurer, where it belongs, and the Board of Missions wants it, and then it can be reached at the right time, and in the right way. After this action of the Board, is it prudent, is it wise for the Bishop to order this money paid over to the presiding elders? Does it harmonize with the action of the Conference, and would it be considerate, upon the part of the presiding elders, to insist on the treasurer paying them the money, when he is only doing the bidding of the Board? It has the right idea, and should not deviate from the law to please anyone. The Conference will sustain it, because it is sustaining its own action.

The right to make appropriations is rightfully vested in the Board, and in nothing else. It does not belong to the Bishop presiding, nor to the presiding elders, nor to both combined. The presiding officer, with the counsel of the presiding elders, asks for certain sums needed for the several missions; but he can go no further. If the Board finds that it can comply with his request, it would do it gladly and cheerfully. If the Bishop and the Board differ, and it refuses to grant his request, he has no recourse whatever but to submit. In this matter the Board is above censure; its course is to be commended.

With all its authority, the Board of Missions has not been able to meet the wants of the mission field. It is a source of the deepest regret that it can not, when there are so many calls for mission work. How it would inspire the membership of the church if it could! How it would exalt their views of the claims of the gospel! What zeal it would impart to their devotions! But it will not cease to do what it can to send the gospel to the dark and neglected places, and the "regions beyond."

J. F. SCURLOCK.

Daleville, Miss.

Quite a number of our brethren are sending to you items from their new charges; how they have been received, and what the prospects are for the future. Some one, in a recent issue of the ADVOCATE, censured them somewhat for these communications, there being more of them than they were notices of revivals. I suppose reports of revivals in their several charges will follow in due time, as they now feel so much encouraged. We have a paper for the purpose, in part, of intercommunication, and by which we may learn how our brethren are getting along, and how the work of the church in different portions of the Conference is progressing. I am glad to hear from my brethren through our Conference organ, and I am always pleased to learn of their prosperity, either in material or spiritual things. And I think the people whom we serve ought to have due credit for all they are doing for the cause of Christ, not in the spirit of self-adulation, but as a matter of encouragement in a common cause. I hope the brethren will continue to inform the church of what is being done throughout our borders, of all items of interest, and give the people proper credit for all they do.

Having written the above, it may be expected that I pen a few lines concerning my own work. Sometimes I write from a sense of duty, as I am seldom attacked with cacoethes scribendi.

My work last year was hard on the physical man, owing to the long rides over rough roads, both in attending my appointments and in pastoral visiting. But I accepted it as of the Lord, and it was made to me of great benefit in restoring my health and in invigorating my constitution. I met with kind friends and made acquaintances, the aroma of whose friendship will long remain to gladden the memory. I can not say how much good was accomplished, but I have reason to believe that my labors were not in vain. I always endeavor to do my duty, leaving the results to be taken care of by the Lord. Sunday-School Lesson — March 15.

GEHAZI PUNISHED.

II. Kings v, 15-27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Be sure your sin will find you out."—Num. xxxii, 23.

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. The Gratitude of Naaman (vs. 15-19). II. The Sin of Gehazi and Its Punishment (vs. 20-27).

MEMORY VERSES.—25, 27.

REFERENCE WORD.—"Punishment."

LESSON HYMN.—No. 478.

TIME.—894 B. C.

PLACE.—Samaria and its vicinity.

INTRODUCTORY.

At the close of our last lesson we saw Naaman coming up out of Jordan completely cured of his vile disease. As great as had been his bodily change, that of his mind and heart had been greater. After his seventh descent into the turbid stream he was, indeed, a new creature." A powerful conviction seized him. He knew a wonderful work had been wrought in his behalf, and he was not slow to divine its true cause. He realized that the power was not in the waters before him, nor yet in the word of the prophet, but resided in the prophet's God alone. As in another instance, this leper returned to give thanks to his benefactor. The grateful Syrian did not allow the extra travel to deter him from his laudable purpose. So always true gratitude never counts the cost of its expression. He would delay his long-wished-for meeting with loved ones at home, waiting anxiously the result of his quest; he would even retrace a good part of his journey in order to show his gratitude and make restitution for his former ill treatment of Elisha.

I.—THE GRATITUDE OF NAAMAN.

Verse 15. No doubt the return of this great retinue presented quite a contrast to its first approach to the prophet's home. Then he demanded that he might receive a blessing; now he prayed that he might bestow one. "Take, I pray thee, a blessing of thy servant." Elisha's answer to this natural request on the part of Naaman was worthy of himself and the cause he represented. The Syrian was to be taught a lesson in theology. The actions of heathen priests were to be contrasted with those of the representatives of Jehovah under similar circumstances. He was to be taught that the God of Israel works through the channel of "free grace;" that heaven's blessings are not quoted as to their market value—not, indeed, because they have no worth, but because they are invaluable. Men can not remunerate God for his mercies, but must always remain in the attitude of poor beggars around the table of his bounty. So Naaman. Not only did he fail to donate a gift to Elisha; but, on the other hand, he was forced to accept one himself. God gives us everything in order that we may have a claim on anything. "Not of works, lest any man should boast."

Verse 17. This action of the prophet had its desired effect on Naaman. It overthrew his idolatrous notions. Conscious of his miraculous cure, he was led to exclaim, "Now, I know that there is no God in all the earth, but in Israel." "From this time forth I shall offer sacrifice to none other. Let me have a memorial—some of this country's earth—as an attestation of my new faith." In the next place, it made his conscience tender. This great change brought him into new relations. To these he must adjust himself. He asked the prophet's advice, and the reply elicited was, in respect to true sympathy for him in his heart troubles, in advance of some who would guide others by a line of their own Bible making. Naaman explained his motive satisfactorily, and Elisha could not withhold from him the farewell words, "Go in peace." The first meeting of these two men did not presage such an affecting parting; but God's Spirit works marvels.

II.—THE SIN AND PUNISHMENT OF GEHAZI.

If there is anything that makes the sin of this man more heinous, and its punishment more merited, it is the record of it in this connection. Study the two characters here presented: Gehazi, an Israelite, one that had all the advantages of a religious environment, belonging to a people to whom had been "committed the oracles of God." More than this—he had enjoyed the privilege of constant intercourse with the man of God, Elisha; he had had all opportunities for emulating his master's example and forming a character, in turn, worthy of imitation; but, alas! in spite of all these advantages, he failed most signally. This man who failed to make use of such possibilities is quite a contrast to the other than general. Gehazi could conscientiously speak of Naaman as "this Syrian;" but unfortunately he could not live with the despised Infidel in moral characteristics. Gehazi's sin had its origin in covetousness—truly, a most fruitful source. He had seen the immense treasure that Elisha refused, and his heart's desire was to obtain "somewhat of it." He waited until his master had gone into his house; then, with all speed, "followed after Naaman." In no other respect is the principle of evolution so fully illustrated as in this thing of sin. The interview with Naaman was very short; but in that time Gehazi had profaned the name of the Lord in his hypocritical oath—"As the Lord liveth;" had told a most outrageous lie; he had dishonored his master. In the highway of sin the first step is hardly ever the last. After we have broken the Tenth Commandment, the Ninth and Eighth quickly lose their restraining influence. Strange that a companion of Elisha should turn out such a depraved character!—yet we have more than a parallel. Judas, though one of "the twelve," enjoying the blessed teachings and holy influence of the Savior, became "a devil." A fearful lesson here for us to learn is this: we do not allow ourselves to be led to a higher plane by good associations, we are liable to be thrown into a state of fixed resistance to all their influences. The plausible lie easily deceived Naaman. He was willing to do anything for Gehazi in the name of his master. He sent his servants bearing double the value of Gehazi's request. Now was the calculation seemingly successful. The covetous idolater got his ill-gotten gains safely stowed away in his tower, and began to form plans for its sure investment. The ancients believed in the "irony of fate:" whom the gods desired to visit with extreme penalties, these were first allowed a season of unsurpassed prosperity in order that when their fall did come, it would be the greater. "I saw the wicked spreading himself like a green bay tree;.... but I passed by, and lo! he was not." Such was the observation of David, and it tallies well with our experience. "Be sure your sin will find you out." This sin did not, nor will any sin, form an exception to the inexorable disclosure. Sin bears in itself the elements of its own discovery, and, sooner or later, the fearful revelation will surely come. Sin always commits blunders. Gehazi was so blinded by the dazzling hopes that his wealth brought him that he failed to consider that he had to deal with Elisha—a man in whom dwelt the omniscient Spirit. He could deceive Naaman; but it was useless to deny the charge that his master made against him. The "heart of Elisha" had been with him throughout the whole transaction! Oh, Gehazi! learn the folly of sin! You failed to profit by repeated warnings; now your knowledge will avail you nothing. No time to receive money; no time to think of vineyards, and sheep and oxen; no time to paint bright pictures of a life of ease and luxury: but all hopes dashed to the ground; no future but one of prolonged and intense agony. Your sin has found you out. "The leprosy shall cleave unto thee and unto thy seed forever." A fearful picture, but faint indeed compared to the awful scene at the judgment-seat when your sins will find you out.

Modern Miracles.

A singer for breath was distressed,
And the doctors all said she must rest,
But she took G. M. D.
For her weak lungs, you see,
And now she can sing with the best.

An athlete gave out on a run,
And he feared his career was quite done;
G. M. D., pray observe,
Gave back his lost nerve,
And now he can lift half a ton.

A writer who wrote for a prize
Had headaches, and pains in the eyes;
G. M. D. was the spell
That made him quite well,
And glory before him now lies.

These are only examples of the daily triumphs of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in restoring health and reviving wasted vitality. Sold by all druggists.

Mississippi Items.

The Mississippi State Medical Association will hold its next session at Meridian, April 15, 16 and 17.

At an election held in Port Gibson recently, as to whether the city should have water works, the proposition was defeated by one vote.

The Mississippi Manufacturing Company, of Crystal Springs, has closed a contract for all the hickory spokes, of three grades, it can make.

The Ladies' Confederate Monument Association, besides inviting the public at large, have invited all the widows and orphans of Confederate soldiers to be present at the unveiling of the monument in Jackson.

The Meridian, Brookhaven and Natchez Railroad Company has been organized at Brookhaven. It has secured the eight miles of road already built on the line to Meridian, which it will furnish with rolling stock and operate with a view to its early extension to Pearl river, and ultimately to both Meridian and Natchez.

The Winston Signal hoists this danger signal:

Liquor is occasionally being brought to town by unscrupulous persons and sold, and, we are sorry to say, to some of our citizens who should blush to have it known that they encourage such baseness. If this business is not stopped, it is going to bring trouble to our community. Citizens of Louisville who have boys, mark the prediction. This thing can be stopped if the proper steps are taken.

Here is a straw blown this way by the Columbus Dispatch:

The afternoon meetings of the busy men's Bible class in the Odd Fellows' Building have been so crowded, that the afternoon meeting next Sunday will be held in the Methodist Sunday-school room, through the invitation of the pastor of the Methodist Church, Rev. J. S. Oakley.

The large and large-hearted Englishman is always ready with a warm welcome.

The Clark County Times, published at Enterprise, has this bit of Methodist news that is gratifying:

Our Methodist people intend to turn their attention now to rebuilding their church. A strong pull, a long pull and a pull altogether will put our Methodist friends fully abreast with the times in the important matter of church building. We trust that the community at large will respond cheerfully and liberally to the appeals which will soon be made through the duly authorized building committee.

The Magnolia Gazette has this notice of a "friend of ours:"

There was a small, but appreciative audience to hear Dr. West's lecture—"Man, a Struggler"—last Tuesday evening. The Doctor showed that man was made for struggle, that every excellence came by struggling, man was not satisfied, if he could not struggle, and yet he did not like to struggle—all of which was illustrated by many historical facts.

And we suppose the struggling lecturer struggled through that struggle by struggling to prove to a struggling audience that was going through that particular struggle with no particular struggle on his part. We doubt if he did, though.

Vicksburg is to have an infirmary for horses. The Herald says:

The Vicksburg hospital will certainly achieve a wide-spread reputation in this portion of the Mississippi Valley, especially since its accommodations will be second to no institution of the kind in the South, and will undoubtedly save many valuable animals for their owners.

Louisiana Notes.

A new steam laundry will go into operation in Alexandria, March 15.

The safe of the postoffice in Bastrop was robbed, last week, of $300 or $400.

Lake Charles expects to have her streets lighted by electricity in about thirty days.

The Mechanics' and Traders' Exchange and the Teche Club, of New Iberia, have consolidated.

The artesian well of the Plaquemine Ice and Cold Storage Company furnishes an abundant flow of clear cold water.

The comptroller of the currency has authorized the Peoples' Bank, at New Iberia, to begin business with a capital of $50,000.

Bishop Vincent, Dr. Talmage and Bishop Haygood are expected to be present at the dedication of the Ruston Chautauqua Tabernacle in July.

A destructive fire occurred recently in Clinton, by which the Hartner block of buildings was completely destroyed. The Patriot-Democrat office was destroyed.

The firm of Wellman, Hall & Co., of Boston, Mass., and Providence, R. I., have contracted with the Plaquemine Lumber and Improvement Company for 400,000 feet of lumber, to be shipped by schooner.

The Monroe Times has this:

Rev. J. E. Riddle and wife have arrived at West Monroe, and are now occupying the parsonage. The good people of that town gave them a cordial reception and are glad to have them in their midst.

The Rapides Mechanical and Agricultural Fair Association has been organized at Alexandria with a capital of $25,000, with privilege to increase the same. The time for the Fair is fixed for October 6-10.

The North Louisiana Agricultural Society held its monthly meeting, last week, at the Experimental Station at Calhoun. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, there was a good attendance and an interesting discussion on "Potato Culture in North Louisiana."

The Planters' Purchasing Agency has been organized at Joanneretto. It is an association for the purpose of purchasing plantation and refinery supplies. It has been arranged to purchase immediately $200,000 of supplies. The agency is composed of substantial and extensive sugar growers.

The Way to Solve It.

If those Christian people who are eating their hearts out by worrying over problems of life, and "modern thought," and the "church of the future," and the demands of the age, and higher thought, and "keeping abreast of the age," and the new forms of infidelity (which are only old forms with a new wig on)—if they would be free from the most of this botheration and vexation of spirit, let them get up out of their easy-chairs, or their study-chairs, and go to work to bring practical sinners to a knowledge of Christ in the gospel. Melancholy breeds in sedentary souls, as tyrotoxicon is formed in milk that is allowed to stand. While you are musing on these great problems, the fire of sin is burning. Instead of analyzing the manna of yesterday, go out and gather a certain rate of new manna to-day. The former is already breeding worms of unbelief in your mind, and is nigh unto stinking. We think that those preachers, especially, who are very eager about being esteemed intellectual, et cetera, would greatly sweeten the scum-covered waters of their minds if they would move about more among the sinful, and the poor, and the sick. If they would each make six visits a day to people who eat with their knives, and would read the Scriptures and pray with them, life would become to them a much more solid thing. Jump out of your droshky, where you are yourself freezing, and lay hold on some brother, fallen in the snow.

When the ancient sophist proved by a syllogism that motion is impossible, one of his hearers dissolved the mental cloud of that reasoning by getting up and moving about—"Solvitur ambulando."—The Watchman.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw, Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last, became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1891.

Briefs.

Immigration has undergone a very marked change in the last few years. Until recently about fifty per cent. of the foreigners landing at New York was Irish, and thirty per cent. German. Last year developed the fact that the Irish occupy the sixth place as regards the number of emigrants. The roll now stands thus: Germans, Italians, Austrians, Russians, Swedes, Irish, English, Danes, Swiss, French, Hollanders, Belgians, etc. Nearly two-thirds of all who land in New York settle in the cities and towns of the Middle States.

The total number of books published in the United States last year, 1890, was 4,559. This is an increase of 545 over 1889. Of the number published 1,118 were novels. Just think of three novels published every week-day in the year! The next highest number was 467—books on religion and theology. Books on law come next, and then books on education. Solomon said, "of making books there is no end," but what would he have said if in his time twelve books had been made every day in the year?

The evil results of leniency towards contumacious law-breakers have a good illustration in the case of the concert saloons in this city. These places have been allowed to ply their wicked business contrary to law, and this has grown into defiance. They kept open beyond the time set by the law. The police did not interfere. Then they refused to pay the license, and when the collector endeavors to make them, they get out a writ of mandamus to compel the collector to let them alone. All this simply because the police refused to make them comply with the law in the first instance. Leniency toward willful law-breakers results in smashing all law.

The Fifty-first Congress closed its labors March 4. In some respects this has been a remarkable Congress. The time occupied in its sittings was unusually long. The mortality among its members was greater than in any previous Congress, fourteen members having died.

The most important bills that have been added to the statute book during the last two years are the McKinley Tariff act, Customs Administration act, Courts of Appeal act, Copyright act, Direct Tax Refunding act, Dependent Pension act, Anti-Lottery act, Postal Subsidy act, Regulation of Immigration act, Financial act increasing the purchase of silver, with others of minor significance.

Of the important bills introduced, but failing of passage, we mention: The Free Coinage bill, the Pure Food bill, the Eight-Hour bill, the Educational bill and the Force bill.

The closing hours witnessed the usual scenes, but rather intensified by the lingering hate of partisan politics. The Democrats took their last shot at Speaker Reed by voting solidly against a resolution of thanks.

Speaker Reed, in a short address, referred himself and his Republican colleagues to posterity for an impartial verdict on the wisdom of their acts, and then declared the Fifty-first Congress adjourned sine die.

The center of population in our country has been discovered by the Census Bureau to be about twenty miles east of Columbus, Ind., near Greensburg, the county seat of Decatur county.

Church Work among the Children in New Orleans.

That there are many earnest workers in the Christian churches in this city will not be denied by anyone who has even a slight acquaintance with the subject. That much valuable work has been done in the past is a fact recorded plainly in the pages of the history of the churches in New Orleans. The Episcopal Church began its work in this city at an early day, and has done as fairly well here as elsewhere. The Presbyterians, beginning a little later, have grown unto comely proportions, and to-day rejoice in several very large congregations. The Methodists, after years of fruitless endeavor, finally succeeded in planting themselves firmly in this cosmopolitan city. Their work here has been most fruitful in the production of preachers of the gospel. We know of no place in American Methodism which has produced so many preachers in proportion to the Methodist population! The Baptists seem not to have flourished here as in other cities, but still they have done something, and to-day have several growing congregations. The Lutherans are here in respectable numbers, and the Roman Catholics outnumber all the Protestant denominations. It is thought and said by many that this is a Catholic city; but after a residence here of ten years, and the observation of those years, we have come to the conclusion that such an opinion is not true. Our deliberate conviction is that this is not a Catholic city.

It is an interesting question to ask anywhere, What are the churches doing for the religious instruction and development of the young people? It is interesting, because, in the nature of things and in the course of time, the young people will acquire the rights and incur the obligations, and thus fill the places of the grown people of to-day. In twenty-five years the whole complexion of the church and society will be changed, because those who are now in their teens will be the leaders and rulers. This one fact demonstrates that the church can not afford to relegate the question to the consideration of the future. The young mind must be developed now, the young heart must be converted now, the young affections must be trained toward God now, in order that the church of the future may be filled with earnest and godly men and women. This is a matter that will not admit of a postponement. Postponement means a dying church. Dereliction in duty to the young of to-day means a harvest of ignorance and wickedness in the future. We suppose that no one who thinks at all on this question, looks upon it as unimportant. We do not see how he could do so. But not everyone who considers a matter important is influenced to action by its importance. Thousands of people consider the religious instruction of children a thing of prime importance, and yet they never do anything to foster such instruction. One of the great difficulties in our Sunday-school work is in procuring workers. The real fact of the case is, the faith is too weak to prompt earnest work. These two invariably go together, and the faith is correctly judged by the work. This being the case, we come to the conclusion that the Christian people in New Orleans don't believe very heartily in the religious instruction of the young people.

Now, let us see. The superintendent of the public schools in this city says there are over 70,000 children, white and colored, between the ages of six and eighteen years. One-fourth of these are colored, which leaves 52,500 white children in this city. We have been at some pains to get the number of children who are under direct religious instruction in the various churches in this city. We have the official figures in every case, except one. We are aware of the fact that statistics are not always correct and may be made to support almost any theory and prove it true; still they are of value and can not be ignored. Now, according to our figures, the number of children under religious instruction do not amount to 20,000. The Roman Catholic parochial schools contain 8,595 children. The various Sunday-schools contain as follows: Presbyterian, 3,042; Episcopal, 2,263; Methodist, 1,925; Lutheran (estimated), 2,000; Baptist, 625; making in all 18,450. So then there are 34,050 children in this city who have no religious instruction from the churches. The Roman Catholics have 8,595 children under direct religious tuition, and the Protestant denominations have 9,855. That is, the Protestants have 1,260 more children in their Sunday-schools than the Romanists have in their church schools. That shows that this is not a Catholic city. Neither does it show that it is a Protestant city. It, however, brings out the appalling fact that in this city of 176,285 white people, there are 34,050 white children growing up in ignorance of God and his law and their duties to him and to one another and to the State. When all the churches only reach one-third of the children of school age with their religious influence, can it be said that the churches are doing their whole duty in the matter?

When only one out of three children is brought under religious instruction, have we not cause to say that "the Christian people in New Orleans don't believe very heartily in the religious instruction of the young people?" We know there are people claiming to be Christians, who will "pooh-pooh" at the statements made here; but 34,000 lambs running wildly to destruction, while only 18,000 are folded, is enough to make every Christian man and woman in the town cry out in humiliation and shame at our miserable failure to meet our obligations. We regard this matter as a very serious one, and hope that these facts will move the readers of the ADVOCATE in this city to consider the subject in a most earnest and prayerful way.

The Day of Printed Sermons.

This is certainly the day in which the printed sermon greatly flourishes. Thousands of newspapers are printing a sermon every week. There are weekly periodicals devoted exclusively to publishing sermons from the ablest preachers in the land. There are many monthly magazines devoted solely to homiletics, and in which the full-grown sermon plays a conspicuous part. Almost every day a fresh book of sermons comes from the press. Besides these agencies for publishing the matured thoughts of the sermon-makers of the past and present age, there are thousands of sermons published in tract form and scattered broadcast over all lands. Societies for sermon distribution are at busy work in many places sowing down the good seed of the kingdom. One of these has had several years of successful operation in Germany. When it first began, it began with a modest edition of 600 copies of sermons weekly. It was a success from the beginning, and its edition grew in numbers from week to week, until now it publishes 120,000 sermons a week, and scatters them all through the German empire. In Berlin alone 17,000 are distributed every week. They are sold at a penny apiece, and are thus brought within the reach of the means of the poor.

If we were to listen to the enemies of our holy religion, we would surely be surprised at these facts in regard to the weekly publication of so many sermons. Those enemies tell us that Christianity is so old-fashioned and superstitious, and so full of myths and errors, that very few people now-a-days believe it, and the great majority reject it altogether. This dictum can not be reconciled with the facts we have stated. One fact will overturn ten thousand conjectures and theories. The one fact, known to every man who reads a wide-awake newspaper, that sermons from Spurgeon and Talmage, and others, are read by tens of thousands of people every week proves that this ridiculed and old-fashioned Christianity, whose power is perpetuated by the preached and printed sermon, has not yet lost its grip upon the human heart and conscience. The fact that these sermons find ready publishers, men who do not publish them merely for "the good of the cause," but because they will sell and bring in "handsome profits," shows that those men of business do not consider Christianity either as dead or dying. People do not buy that in which they are not interested. And as the number of sermons published increases month by month, and year by year, it is a demonstration that the interest in the gospel and its blessed truths and hopes is increasing with a like ratio.

Under such circumstances, it is absurd for anybody to be talking about "preaching and sermons having lost their power." If that were true, such a condition of things as we see about us could not possibly exist. Indeed, the opposite fact is the exact truth. Preaching—the delivered and the printed sermon—has more power to-day than ever before! It is drawing more men and women away from sin and bringing them closer to God and one another, and showing them the way of righteousness more clearly, than ever before!

The printed sermon has some advantages over the preached one, and these advantages are being more and more appreciated by a large body of people who are debarred by peculiar circumstances from attendance upon church services. The printed sermon comes to them in their homes, by their firesides of sorrow, on their beds of pain, as they walk down the last decline, and gives its message of hope and consolation. The preached sermon is soon forgotten and can rarely be recalled, but the printed sermon is ready at hand to be read and re-read until its lesson sinks in the soul and produces blessed fruit in the outward life and kindles a perpetual joy in "the inner man of the heart." We rejoice that this is the day of the printed sermon.

The "Throat" Matter

is incidental only. I have had a bout with bronchitis, and expect to get well of it. If this were all, I would have found a sanitarium in Georgia. I have published a little card; it should be enough. This shorter one because several kind editors—"explaining" my movements to "Dr. Parkhurst"—have concentrated attention on my "throat"

I go to Los Angeles on my own motion, because I think I ought. Long time I have been preaching "Go;" it seemed time to be going.

ATTICUS G. HAYGOOD.

It is reported that Dr John Hall, of New York, makes looking into a shop window a means of grace. He looks in and thanks the Lord for the number of things he sees in the window he can do without. We know some women who would be overhurdened with spiritual riches if they could do that!

Columbus District.

The first round of my fourth year on Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, has just been finished. Nineteen quarterly meetings in eleven weeks! Most of the travel has been done in the saddle. The season has been rainy, requiring the traveler often to take long and short trips in rain and mud and to dare swollen streams. This district is cut by the Tombeckbee and Big Black rivers, and the head-waters of the Noxubee and Pearl rivers take their rise in its territory. Pearl river is formed by the junction of Talehaga and Nannewyyeh creeks. These creeks get their head-waters in Winston county and unite in Neshoba. Most of the preachers went quickly from Conference to their respective fields of labor; some were delayed. All at their posts, a faithful band of earnest workers. With the unpropitious weather, the influenza, called la grippe, has joined to hinder seriously the progress of the preachers' work. The preachers themselves and their families have shared in the sickness. Still every post has been held and forces are arranged for progress. Pastors are planning and praying for revivals—greatly needed. We need a quickened, bounding spiritual pulse. Some new churches were built last year, others are in building now, and yet others in the purposes and pockets of the people. How we need houses of worship, respectable and comfortable, as places for divine service! The financial pulse is much too low. It is true, however, that the people in this part of the State have been greatly straitened by three poor crops in succession. Yet not all is done that can be for the Lord's cause. The noble few do what they can; the many do less, and not a few do nothing. We have some very excellent Sunday-schools; some choice, spiritual prayer meetings, and here and there a precious class meeting. The cheerful face of the good ADVOCATE, giving words of instruction and comfort, is greeted in every charge, and its worthy claims will be urged for a much larger circulation in this district.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

A "Holy Show of Himself."

The following from the Memphis Commercial is according to our way of thinking. Such performance excites derision. How any minister of the gospel in our country, where simplicity of manners is a national characteristic, could lend himself to such a "holy show" because he happened to be away from home, is beyond our ken. For the sake of the great church this pretentious prelate represents, we are glad the secular papers are thus rigorously protesting. It smacks very much of what Dr. Phillips Brooks aptly called "impotent impudence." We commend the Commercial's comments.

Bishop Doane, of Albany, a very high churchman, is at present on a visit to Berlin, where he has attracted a great deal of attention by appearing in knee-breeches and silk stockings and a corded hat, such as is affected by the bishops of the English Church. Undoubtedly a great divine, this uniform, so much to the European taste, is un-American and is not at all necessary to the Bishop's dignity. It is a departure from the simplicity of the American clergymen of almost every church and can only be accounted for in him by his leaning to everything that savors of formalism. But it is all unsavory. It is not by silk-stocking and knee-breeched bishops that reforms are to be won in the interest of the people. Christ, the Master and the Founder of the church, did not resort to any similar devices to make his ministry effective. It was not necessary in his day and time and it is not necessary in this. Bishop Doane is merely making a "holy show of himself" and bringing ridicule upon the church.

Notes.

The late James Redpath is said to have been the originator of the "newspaper interview," and some people are so ungracious as to say that he originated what has come to be an unmitigated nuisance.

There are in this country, according to the late census, 12,132,048 Protestants. Of these only 423,605 believe in the dogma of apostolical succession, and yet these few want the 11,708,443 to join with them in its acceptance. Ecclesiastical impudence is the word sort.

Dr. A. T. Pierson says that not one-fifth of the population of Philadelphia is in habitual attendance upon church services; and if the people should take a notion to go to church, not one-fourth of them could be accommodated with seats. And yet that city contains seven hundred churches.

Listen to these words of wisdom from Archbishop Ireland: "The great cause of social crime is drink. The great cause of poverty is drink. When I hear of a family broken up and ask the cause—drink. If I go to the gallows and ask its victim the cause, the answer—drink. Then I ask myself in perfect wonderment, Why do not men put a stop to this thing?"

The great river is threatening at many places. The continued rains have not only kept the streams rising and pouring into the Mississippi; but they have interfered with levee building and damaged the new work to a considerable extent. The water is at the "danger line" in some places, and grave apprehensions are entertained as to another overflow. A few days fair weather will be of the greatest service.

A brother of the Mississippi Conference who was assigned to a new work this year reported in this office, last week, that not one steward on the work was a subscriber to the ADVOCATE. That is very strange, considering that his predecessor on that work served for three years! Do some preachers ever do anything to circulate the paper? How can a man be a consistent Christian and not keep the work up and support the institutions of the church?

It seems to us that the Apostle Paul very effectually disposes of the doctrine of some modern teachers in regard to the inspiration of the Scriptures. He clearly held to the verbal inspiration, for he says, speaking of what God has done, "which things we also speak, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghost teacheth." If this does not mean that the Holy Ghost teacheth the words, then what does it mean? Surely Paul is on the side of verbal inspiration.

There is among the good signs of the day no better sign than the fact that the old notion that the preacher must do all the church work is not as heartily accepted as formerly. Laymen and women are coming forward everywhere and taking hold of the work and in many instances doing it better than the preachers can do it. This is a good omen. Our Lord's ideal of his kingdom is given in one short sentence—"To every man his work." The preachers are the leaders of the forces. What they specially need under these circumstances is wisdom in leadership. And the Word says: "If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given."

A good deal of complaint is being made about the meagerness of the salaries of preachers. There is a side to this question which very few people seem to have seen. A large salary is one of the many things which serve to alienate the common people from the minister and the church. Ministerial influence is largely based on identification with the common people, and whatever hinders or destroys this identity is fatal to the progress of church work. So, then, the small salaries of the preachers may be an expression of the wisdom of Providence in keeping the preacher in contact with the people. If so, then the preacher who is promised a small salary, and receives a smaller, may rejoice that the hand of Providence is in it all.

We think many people of this day commit a grave mistake in supposing that the evils which afflict the world have their origin in the "imperfections of society." No douht, society is very imperfect, hut that imperfectness, instead of being the origin of present-day evils, is the result of those evils. All the evils the world ever had come out of individual hearts. The human heart is the awful fountain of evil. This is the express teaching of Jesus Christ, put forth in words that cannot be misunderstood. Then to invent schemes for the reconstruction and reorganization of society will not banish the evils that afflict it. But let the human heart be reconstructed and regenerated by the Spirit of God, and that will banish the evils from the heart and society, too. The gospel must be preached to every creature, not to the multitudes.

Personal and Otherwise.

Merrett L. Fernald, sixteen years of age, has been called to be assistant botanist and herbalist in Harvard University.

Rev. G. D. Anders, our pastor at Amite City, gave us a pleasant call last week. Surgical aid for a crippled daughter was the occasion of his visit to town.

We have good reports through private sources of the work of our new pastors in Shreveport. They are both moving off well, and the cause is extending in a gratifying way.

A Sunday-school Normal Institute, for the benefit of Sabbath-school workers in South Mississippi, was conducted in Brookhaven, last week, by William Reynolds, of Illinois.

Dr. John Hannon, of San Francisco, passed through our city last week en route to Montgomery, Ala., to see his aged mother who is quite ill. We are sorry we did not see the Doctor.

Last week's Independent was dedicated to Methodism. It contained twenty-one articles by eminent men on the various phases of Methodism. It is a good number to preserve for future use.

From Dr. Lambuth's letter, on another page, the reader will see what the missionaries are called to endure just now in some parts of Japan. Prayer for their deliverance should go up unceasingly.

We understand that the Sam Jones Camp Meeting Association is already devising ways and means to make their annual meeting a greater success than ever. Among other improvements, a new hotel is contemplated.

Rev. C. McDonald, presiding elder of the Woodville district, passed through the city last week en route to Covington, La., to hold Quarterly Conference. Affairs on his district are in good shape and promise well.

The New Orleans District Conference convenes this morning (Thursday), at nine o'clock, in Louisiana Avenue Church, Bishop Haygood presiding. The Bishop will preach in Carrollton, next Sunday, at half-past three P. M.

The periodicals now published in this country number 16,310. Of these 12 206 are weeklies, 1,500 are dailies, 200 are semi-weeklies, 62 bi-weeklies, 36 bi-monthlies, 228 semi-monthlies, 125 quarterlies, and 38 tri-weeklies. What power all these make!

The first number of the Pacific Methodist Advocate is at hand sparkling with gems. Bro. Duhose hows himself gracefully before the public, and says: "The best that God gives us, that will we give." We welcome the Methodist Advocate, and pray for its success in its important field.

Unprecedented rain and hail-storms, the first of this week, visited many places in Mississippi, destroying the fruit crop prospects, damaging buildings and swelling the streams to the destruction of many bridges. The like has not occurred in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Dr. Cuyler has been visiting Florida. After service at a negro church, which he attended, referring to a hymn sung, he says: "That hymn was worth a journey to Jacksonville, and as we came away I was more than ever impressed with the Scotchman's remark that 'the ideal church would have Presbyterian preaching, Methodist praying and negro singing.'"

"Don't feel well," and yet you are not sick enough to consult a doctor—we will tell you just what you need. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which will lift you out of that uncertain, uncomfortable, dangerous condition, into a state of good health, confidence and cheerfulness.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. R. M. Blooker writes from Plaquemine Brulee, La.: "I have recently collected $50 on 'Confcronco collections' of unpaid subscriptions on last year's assessments."

—Rev. D. C. Foust writes: "In my postal card report from West circuit, in ADVOCATE, of March 5, the amount raised for Conference collections should read $50, instead of $150."

[You wrote it $150.—EDITOR.]

—Rev. B. F. Jones writes from Port Gibson, Miss.: "I am serving an appreciative people. We are organized for the year, and hope for gratifying results. This is a town of churches and schools; hence we have both piety and culture. Send us your daughters; we have the school for them."

—Rev. L. W. Wood, China Grove, Miss., writes: "The first Quarterly Conference of the China Grove circuit, Brookhaven district, will be held at Waterhole, March 14 and 15. Services: Saturday, eleven A. M.; preaching; dinner on the ground. Conference business after dinner. Sunday, eleven A. M., preaching and sacrament of Lord's Supper. Dinner on the ground. Experience meeting at two P. M., and preaching at three P. M. We are anticipating a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Pray for us."

—Rev. E. S. Lowis writes: "Our work on the Dublin and Brooklyn charge is progressing. The bad roads, high waters and continuous rains have hindered us, but we are still living. We have received three members since Conference, and hope to receive many more. I send you a new subscriber for the ADVOCATE, and I hope to secure several more."

—Rev. H. S. Johns writes: "Bros. Sawyer and Clay have the thanks of the Conference for their work in getting out the Minutes. But a few errors have crept in. In regard to Algiers' report: 1. The Minutes report us as having a parsonage, when, in fact, we have none. (We only wish the report was true.) 2. This church sent up $8 for Bible cause. Though I reported it, as Bro. Clay admitted to me, there is no mention made of it in the Minutes. These items were first reported to the secretary, who, in turn, reported to the assistant secretary, but no announcements made to the public impels me to this."

—Rev. A. D. Miller writes from Barlow, Miss.: "Our first quarterly meeting for Bowerton circuit, Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference, has come and gone, and with it came our beloved presiding elder, Rev. R. S. Woodward. Bro. Woodward preached us two fine sermons and made a very fine impression. We think he is the right man for the place. Our stewards made a very fine showing for the first quarter, paying considerably in advance of the quarter. May God abundantly bless them and the good people that help them to make such a fine report. We are doing finely on this work, as I think—that is, the people. Pray for us."

—Rev. B. H. Sheppard, Pine Ridge, La., writes: "We have been kindly received by the good people of Saline circuit, and are now hard at work preparing for a harvest of souls this year. We have held our first Quarterly Conference. The presiding elder, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, was with us and made glad the hearts of his hearers by his deep spiritual preaching. We have had a great deal of sickness on our work, and, therefore, have not been able to accomplish much as yet; but we have our army of 200 members drawn out in battle array, and are ready to spend and be spent for the Master. Pray for us, that our labor may be fruitful of good works."

—Rev. Jas. G. Cammack writes from Carthage, Mississippi Conference: "Our first Quarterly Conference convened Saturday and Sunday. Though the roads and streams were almost impassable, on account of successive rains, our undaunted presiding elder was on hand with many good things. Although the weather and roads were very bad, every church was represented. The Board of Stewards made a liberal assessment for the preacher. Though we have had rain, and grip, and commerce is much confused, yet we have undertaken to do more for the Lord this year than ever, and the outlook grows brighter every day. Had three additions to the church this year; two new subscribers this week. Brethren, pray for a revival this year."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis, writing from Spring Ridge, Mississippi Conference, says: "Spring Ridge charge is a very compact little work in a healthy spot of the old Mississippi Conference. We have on this work the Cooper's Well and the Mississippi Springs. While my people seem to be very moral, they are not much religious, and I have never met a more hospitable people. We have good country schools, and the Baptist college near us (Clinton), and in Jackson, Miss., we have fine schools, and some village schools on the railroads, and, perhaps, the Millsaps College will be located near us, in Jackson, Miss. I have four very good church-houses. We have three Sunday-schools just revived, and hope to soon organize two or three more. We have a very fine Sunday-school that ran through the winter-quarters; but it is not conducted at the church, it being a side appointment. Our congregations are not as good as they should be, but I am happy to observe a constant increase. My stewards located me with a first-class family near Raymond. My postoffice will be Raymond instead of Byram, Miss. Brethren, pray for us. We need your prayers."

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MR. EDITOR: Please announce in the ADVOCATE that we have our depository, 316 West Capital street, in few doors of depot. Bro. B. F. Lewis will be in charge in my absence. I desire that the superintendents of Sunday-schools will make all their orders through me. W. D. DOMINICK.

Supt. Colportage, Miss. Conf.
Jackson, Miss.

There will be a meeting of the Woman's Department of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference, held in First Church, Jackson, Miss., March 25, 1891, for the purpose of filling vacancies in offices caused by resignations. All officers will please be present. As we purpose formulating a plan of work, we request all auxiliaries to send delegates, and cordially invite all ladies in the Conference interested in our work to meet with us.

MRS. B. F. LEWIS, Rec. Sec.
Jackson, Miss.

The parsonage and home mission workers of the North Mississippi Conference are requested to meet in Winona, Thursday, March 19, at eleven A.M., for the purpose of organization under our new Constitution and By-laws. Every district secretary is earnestly requested to be present. Each auxiliary already organized should by all means send a delegate, and each pastor is requested to try and send some lady from his charge as a visitor to learn of the work and go home and endeavor to enthuse others. Every person expecting to attend should send in her name to Rev. J. D. Cameron, Winona, so provision can be made for entertaining all. Ministers are also invited. The meeting will consume only one day; two sessions will be held—at eleven A. M. and two P. M.

Respectfully,

MRS. T. B. HARGROVE.
Sec. P. and H. M. Work, North Miss. Conf.

To the Subscribers to Dr. Morrison's Special Mission Collection, North Mississippi Conference:

Brethren: I have received this day a letter from Dr. I. G. John, of Nashville, requesting me to collect your subscriptions and send to the treasurer at Nashville by the thirty-first, at farthest. Please send me your subscription at Brooksville, Miss., by money order or registered letter, and I will send you receipt. If you have forgotten the amount, send me a postal, and I will send you the amount. I have your names on my book.

J. W. LUTER, Treas.

Brooksville, Miss.

To the Presid'ng Elders of the North Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: By referring to the Discipline, Page 183, ¶ 313, you will see that the money collected for the support of our Bishops is to be sent to the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance, to be remitted by him at once to the Book Agent at Nashville, Tenn., in order that he may pay the Bishops their salaries in monthly installments.

This notice is to call your attention to the fact that, although three months have elapsed since the session of our Conference, I have received nothing on this fund. I have been informed by one of their number that there was quite a large deficit on the salaries of our Bishops last year, and some of them are now needing money. Will you please give this matter your immediate attention, as the Book Agent is not authorized to pay these salaries out of any other fund save that which is collected for that purpose.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Trustees' Meeting, Seashore Camp Ground.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground on the grounds, on the eighteenth instant, at 7:30 P. M., in Follolty Hall, and on the nineteenth instant, at 9 A. M., same place. All the members of the Board are urged to be present, as arrangements will then be made for holding our annual camp meeting. Steps have been taken to get the usual reduced rates from the railroad company. The keeper of the grounds will be prepared to entertain the members of the Board during their stay on the grounds. Brethren, let us have a full and prompt attendance.

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, Inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps its only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery glides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well rattled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

Mission Work.

MR. EDITOR: I send to you for publication in the ADVOCATE a very interesting letter from our faithful and devoted missionary in Central Mexico, Bro. J. M. Weems. His suggestion about the various juvenile societies of our Conference uniting in the special work of sending the gospel to Mexico is an admirable one. It has been much in my heart for months past. I have the full assent and endorsement of our Missionary Secretary, Dr. John, for such a plan. Of course, the work undertaken must be directly under the control of the Parent Board, in order to avoid the possibility of friction. The funds go up to Nashville through the regular channels, and are credited on the assessments of the charges within whose borders these juvenile societies are located. I sincerely hope the brethren will take hold on this plan with zeal and alacrity. Two most laudable ends will be reached by such a course. Our children will be more fully stirred in their interest for the cause by having a definite object in their view—and that object so near the heart of all loyal Methodists of the Mississippi Conference—the sustaining of one of our own brothers, laboring in an adjacent republic; and to this same republic some of these same children are likely to be carried by the fortunes of our progressive age and changeful country. Again: the hearts of our missionaries naturally long for just such tokens of specific interest in them and their work. I am persuaded that a feeling of isolation, and forgetfulness on the part of the home friends, is among the hardest of the many trials which beset the pathway of those who act as our substitutes in this war of conquest for Christ. Let Bro. Weems' letter speak to every young heart. Brethren, let us up and at it with enthusiasm.

Cordially, J. P. DRAKE.

To the Juvenile Missionary Society of Shubuta, Miss.—

Dear Young Friends: Our hearts were made glad last night by a letter from your esteemed pastor, telling us of your remembrance of, and labors of love, for us. There are few things in life so sweet or comforting to the human heart as is the knowledge of the fact that those whom we love and have trusted think of us when we are away, and there are few offenses so hard to forgive as that of forgetful neglect. And did you ever think of the fact that our hearts and feelings were fashioned after the great heart and feelings of God? Yet it is so; for hear his words: "A son honoreth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honor? and if I be a master, where is my fear?" And just before our Lord left this world he said to his disciples: "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him."

And now Bro. Drake writes me that you are keeping Christ's great and last commandment to take the gospel into all the world, and that you thought of me and sent the money to Bro. T. B. Holt, at Nashville, to pay my salary. I know God loves you for obeying his word, and that I love you for thinking of me. If all the Sunday-schools in the Mississippi Conference would do as well as you did last year, they would more than pay the salary of a missionary in the field. Then the missionary would feel so happy to know that the children were working and praying for him. Then at the last day when the tired, toiling missionary came to the throne of God with the souls that had been couverted under his ministry, he will gladly divide the honors with the children who have worked and prayed for him. Oh! that would be glorious!

Now, suppose we organize and go regularly and systematically to work to save Mexico for Christ. The first thing is a name for us, and I suggest the following: "The Friends of the Mexicans." In Spanish the name will be, "Los Amegos de los Mexicanos." Your name in Spanish will be, "Los Amegos de los Mexicanos de Shubuta." The English of this, "The Friends of the Mexicans of Shubuta." Then we will need a Conference secretary, and I know of no one so well fitted for this place as your esteemed pastor and our dear brother, the Rev. J. P. Drake. Then Bro. T. B. Holt, of Nashville, will gladly act as our treasurer, and see that our money goes as we direct it; and I know good Bro. Chambers will give us a column in the statistical table, that the church and the world may see what we are doing for Christ.

Our plan of action will be as follows: The pastors will send all money collected to Mr. T. B. Holt, Nashville, Tenn., and will send monthly reports to Bro. Drake, and he will give the ADVOCATE a summary report each month. Then at the Annual Conference the pastors will make a report of our work and credit their missionary assessments with what we pay, and I will write a letter each month for the ADVOCATE telling you what we are doing in Mexico,

Now, if we are going to support the Lord's cause, we must be busy bees and work with our own mind and hands for the money. Some years ago I was pastor in Moss Point, and I organized a missionary society among the children, and required each one to work for the money given, and to roll the money carefully in a note telling how they made it. I have a great many of those notes now, and I often take them out and read them, and live over again the happy days spent with these children. I will give you a copy of some of the notes, but will withhold the names, as some of them are quite large now. "I made this money by catching a log." (I expect this boy is now helping his father in the sawmill.) "I made this money by learning my letters and putting up papa's slippers." (This little girl's papa is in heaven, and I know she is glad she was kind to him.) "I made my money by cleaning the lamps for mother." (She helped her mother and the cause of Christ at the same time.) "I made this money by dusting the chairs for mother." (There is another who served mother and Christ by the same act.) "I made this by sweeping." (This dear child has gone to heaven, and I was made sad in my mission home when I read of her death. But she is with her mother and her Lord for whom she worked.) "I made this by sweeping the yards." (This little girl is almost or quite grown now, and I know when she has a home of her own it will be kept nice.) "I am a little girl, and I made this money by bringing papa's slippers when he came home from work at night." (Tired papa was glad of the thoughtful kindness of his little girl, and the Lord will reward her for it.) "This is ———'s money which he made by keeping the calf off for his grandmama. And do you reckon the Chinese children keep off the calves for their grandmamas? Get a Bible for a little Chinaman about as big as me." (This little boy's dear grandmama is in heaven now, and I hope she will meet the little boy and his Chinaman there.)

Now, children, what can you do to make your money? Bro. Drake asked me to write you about my work in Mexico, but I will have to write another letter, as this one is now very long. Mrs. Weems is going home very soon after our daughter and will bring her to Mexico. I hope she may be able to visit you all while in the States and look on the grave of our sweet Bessie, who died while we were with you. This leaves us well. Pray for us and give our love to all the dear friends. We are so much obliged to you for thinking and working for us, and to Bro. Drake for writing us about it. Let us hear from you all again. Yours truly,

J. M. WEEMS.

Advertising is a gear in the machine of a well-regulated store. It can not sell the goods itself; it only delivers the customer, as it were.—Milford (Mass.) Journal.

I, A. C. Haflefinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

SAY "NO."

In the battle of life you have started, my boy,
And it lies with yourself to succeed;
You can be what you will if you only resolve
To ask for advice and take heed;
There are foes to resist; there are tempters to shun;
These will meet you wherever you go;
But conquests are made, and life's triumphs are won,
By boys who have strength to say, "No."

There are billows to breast, there are tempests to brave,
There are crosses and hardens to bear;
On highway and by-way the unwary feet
Are prisoned by pitfall and snare.
So many have perished who started aright,
Allured by earth's glitter and show;
But the conquering heroes who stood in their might
Were those who could firmly say "No."

Then choose at the onset, and write while you may
The record no hand can efface;
Your name may be wreathed with a garland of bay
Or blotted with shame and disgrace.
Be warned by the thousands who stumble and fall;
Be watchful, wherever you go,
And when you reply to the tempter's low call,
Have courage, my boy, to say "No."

Praying in Half a Room.

In a large and respectable school near Boston, two boys—from different States and strangers to each other—were compelled by circumstances to room together. It was the beginning of the term, and the two students spent the day in arranging their room and getting acquainted. When night came the younger of the boys asked the other if he did not think it a good idea to close the day with a short reading from the Bible and a prayer. The request was modestly made, without any whining or cant of any kind. The other boy, however, bluntly refused to listen to the proposal.

"Then you will have no objection if I pray by myself, I suppose?" said the younger. "It has been my custom, and I wish to keep it up."

"I don't want any praying in this room, and won't have it!" retorted his companion.

The younger boy rose slowly, walking to the middle of the room, and standing on a scam in the carpet which divided the room nearly equally, said quietly:

"Half of this room is mine. I pay for it. You may choose which half you will have. I will take the other, and I will pray in that half or get another room. But pray I must and will, whether you consent or refuse."

The other boy was instantly conquered. To this day he admires the sturdy independence which claimed as a right what he had boorishly denied as a privilege. A Christian might as well ask leave to breathe as to ask permission to pray. There is a false sentiment connected with Christian actions which interferes with their free exercise. If there is anything to be admired, it is the manliness that knows the right and dares to do it without asking any one's permission.

A Funny Problem.

It was a warm, sleepy afternoon, and the scholars in Miss Plummer's school looked and acted as if they wished four o'clock would hurry along.

The class in mental arithmetic were lazily droning through their lesson, when Deacon Day popped his cheery face in at the door. All the children loved him, and were glad when he came to visit the school.

Perhaps he saw they needed something to wake them up, so when the class was through with the lesson, he gave them this problem:

"If eighteen cows were going through a narrow gate where only one could pass at a time, which cow would look back, and say: 'There are eleven pairs of horns behind me?'"

The class thought busily for a minute; then up came Tommy Tuft's hand.

"Which one, Tommy?" asked the deacon.

"The seventh."

"No."

Another minute of study, then Celia Brown put up her hand.

"What do you think, Celia?"

"I think it might be the eighth, for when the cow turned her head to look back, her own horns would be behind her, wouldn't they?"

"No; it isn't the eight," the deacon said.

About this time little Johnnie Hartshorn, on the front seat, began to snicker.

"What are you laughing at, Johnny?" asked Miss Plummer.

"Cows—can't talk!" giggled Johnny.

Deacon Day laughed, too, then. "Johnny has answered it;" he said. "None of the cows could do it, of course."

Then all the scholars laughed and woke up for the rest of the day, and Deacon Day bowed himself out.—Companion.

MR. EDITOR: I am a reader of your dear old paper. I love to read the letters of the young folks very much. As I have never written a letter to your paper, I will try to write one. I go to Sunday-school and church every Sunday. Rev. N. B. Harmon is our pastor; we all like him very much. Mr. O. H. Smith is our superintendent, and Mr. Cox is my teacher. Miss Mamie Lucy is our secretary. We have a nice library in our Sunday-school. On the fourth Sunday of every month Mr. Harmon preaches to the children, and so this Sunday will be our Sunday. He is going to give a prize to the child which gives him the best statement of his sermon. Mr. Harmon also preaches once a month, a few miles from here, in the evening. Hoping my letter will escape the waste-basket, I will close by answering Ella E. Griggs' question: "Death in the pot," is found in II. Kings iv, 40. I will also ask one: On which side of Jezreel was Naboth's vineyard? Your reader,

LILLIE SAUNDERS.

Meridian, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a good little boy—not so very good, either. Bro. West is our preacher. He is pretty good; he is not proud much, but he rides in a buggy. His wife goes to see poor folks. Capt. Oliver is the biggest man here. Dr. Sexton is next. Miss Mira and Miss Lilly play the organ. I belong to the Wesson Lillies. Willie West is the president. Mr. Rembert and Mr. Lindrose are Sunday-school superintendents. Mr. Lindrose sometimes blows on a crooked horn in the choir. We all like that. I did not think it was any use to show mama this letter; but I asked her how to spell the words.

Yours truly,

I. SMITH.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years of age. My papa takes your paper, and I like to read the young people's letters very much. I enjoyed reading the nice piece of poetry headed "The Straight and Narrow Way," in your paper dated Feb. 12. I am going to school every day, and my studies are grammar, geography, philosophy, arithmetic and dictionary. Will some of the little writers answer this question: How many verses and letters in the New Testament? Please be so kind as to publish this letter, as it is my first one.

Your little friend,

JANIE BLACKWELL.

Kemper County, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Having read in your paper many interesting letters from children, I am tempted to write. I live in Meridian, Miss., and am the youngest son of Rev. C. G. Andrews. Papa has organized an Epworth League. We have a flourishing Sunday-school. Our church organist, Mrs. Malone, is very kind in teaching the children to sing; and we have delightful sacred concerts. Papa takes numbers of Advocates; but I think the NEW ORLEANS is the most interesting. Hoping that this letter will be published, I am, Your friend,

C. G. ANDREWS.

STARK—Bro. W. L. STARK, a veteran member of Sweet Water Society, Black Hawk circuit, North Mississippi Conference, left us and went home to heaven, Jan. 3, 1891.

I am not prepared with the dates of birth, conversion, etc.; but what difference does that make when a man has lived a long while—lived to purpose, and has gotten safe home? Bro. Stark will never be older; "but breezes fresh with love and truth shall brace his frame with an immortal youth." He was past eighty; had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for long years, and an active steward until the weight of years somewhat retarded him in his official capacity. At the fourth quarterly meeting last year some one suggested that a younger man ought to take Bro. Stark's place as steward at Sweet Water; but we thought best to retain him and let him lay off the harness he had worn so long only when the Master called him.

Everybody loved and reverenced Bro. Stark, and the whole community sympathize with his widow who for years and years had accompanied him in life's toils and responsibilities. May God bless and comfort her! Bro. Stark had no child of his own; only an adopted daughter who, with her husband and children, share the sorrow with Sister Stark. I think one of the greatest compliments I ever heard paid to the memory of anyone who had left this world was paid to Bro. Stark. It was related to me by Bro. B. S. Rayner, of this Conference. Bro. Rayner was in Lexington (near Bro. Stark's home) the day after Bro. Stark was called home. Some one asked Bro. Rayner if he had heard of Bro. Stark's death. When answered in the negative, he then said, "Yes, he is gone, and when he got to the gates of heaven they said to him, 'Walk in,' and never asked him one question." I tell this to show the estimate placed on our brother by people in his neighborhood. We will miss him sadly at old Sweet Water. Peace to his ashes!

B. F. PHILLIPS.

MASSEY—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!" Mrs. A. M. MASSEY was born in Alabama, June 29, 1826; professed faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church when about eighteen years of age, and was ever afterward an active member and faithful Christian. She was married to Mr. A. W. Massey, Dec. 5, 1848, and they moved at once to Leake county, Miss., and thence in 1866 to Panola county. Here her husband and one daughter died, leaving her with ten children, all sick. She moved in 1867 to Yalobusha county, where she died Aug. 25, 1890.

The writer was acquainted with her from January, 1890, till her death, during all of which time she was a sufferer. She always seemed glad to see her pastor, and would have the Word of God brought and request prayer. She prayed much to be resigned to her sufferings. She expressed a willingness to die some weeks before she died. She was a devoted and loving mother, always willing to do anything for her children's good and pleasure, and tried to teach them to trust in God under any and all circumstances.

Sister Massey's life reveals more than an ordinary character. Her success in bringing up her children—being left a widow with so many, amid adverse circumstances—should encourage all Christian mothers, left widows, to trust in God and make the effort.

HER PASTOR.

FRANKLIN—Rev. THOS. FRANKLIN died at his home in Vernon parish, La., on Anacoco, Feb. 3, 1891. He was born January 8, 1826. He was married to Martha Ann Davis, December 15, 1853, and joined the church in 1854; was licensed to exhort in 1854, and also to preach in 1855, and was ordained deacon in 1870. He worked and preached as long as his health would permit. The church has lost a friend, and the children a father, and the wife a husband. We weep not as those that have no hope.

J. C. CARNLINE, P. C.

McCOY—Another hero has fallen, another father in Israel has been called from labor to refreshment, from suffering to glory.

Rev. GILBERT McCOY finished a long and useful career on earth, Sept. 27, 1890, at his home in Bienville parish, La., at half-past four P. M. He was born in South Carolina, July 25, 1816; moved to Cook county, Tenn., where he lived until he was eighteen years of age, when he left his parents and returned to Edgefield, S. C., to visit a sister. He was married to Miss Margret Boddie, July 18, 1838; joined the M. E. Church in 1839; was converted in 1840, after which he was licensed to exhort. Leaving South Carolina in 1857, he reached Louisiana, Jan. 29, 1858, where he lived until his death. In 1865 was licensed to preach, and at the Annual Conference, at Monroe, in 1872, he was ordained deacon, Jan. 7, by Bishop Kavanaugh, in which capacity he served the church the rest of his life.

His influence was great in the neighborhood and surrounding country where he lived. He wielded the sword to the last. At our camp meeting, last Fall, on the Sparta circuit, he gave us quite an extended experience, in love-feast speaking of his wife as instrumental in his conversion. He begged us not to become weary; that in all probability it was his last, concluding with something like this language: "I know I can't stay long. I am ready to go when the summons come." The camp meeting closed on Wednesday. He left the camp ground that morning quite sick. The following Wednesday we preached his funeral and buried him at the same camp ground, near the tabernacle.

Thus passed away a grand old minister of the gospel. The church has lost a strong pillar, the community a wise counsellor, his family of children and grandchildren a kind and good parent. We all miss him.

R. A. DAVIS.

CARRADINE—Mrs. MARY CAROLINE CARRADINE (nee Hewitt), was born in Washington, D. C., in 1817, and removed to Mississippi in her childhood, and with her parents lived near Benton. She was a schoolmate and intimate friend of Mrs. Judge McGehee at Elizabeth Academy, Washington, Miss., the oldest chartered institution for girls in America.

In her young womanhood she was remarkable for her beauty, and was greatly admired for her sweet disposition, engaging manners, literary accomplishments, and almost unrivalled conversational gifts. Her family was one of the oldest and most influential in Mississippi. She was a life-long Methodist, and was tutored under the ministry of Drs. Winans and Drake. She married Mr. Frank Carradine, in Yazoo county, 1835, and, until her son became pastor of our church at St. Louis, never removed from there. In Yazoo City she and her husband became the fast friends of the father of the writer.

Of nine children she was permitted to raise but four, and only two survive her. Besides these, however, she raised four of her grandchildren, and they were blessed, indeed, in having such an example of intelligent, cheerful and consecrated womanhood to open and train their minds and hearts.

Sister Carradine was for several years a great sufferer, and for more than a year past her death would not have surprised us at any moment; but she loved the Savior, enjoyed his presence and rejoiced in his consolations. She laid her burdens at his feet in all the years, and finally rested her life there, in St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 8, 1891.

CHAS. F. EVANS.

BRIDGES—The subject of this sketch—HUGH FRANKLIN BRIDGES—was born Nov. 25, 1805. He became a Christian and joined the Methodist Church in early life. Was married to Miss Margaret Smith, who walked with him in the right ways of the Lord during a long life, and preceded him to glory by several years. He developed a strong Christian character, and maintained to the end an unblemished reputation.

A successful farmer, he lived for many years on his estate near Holmesville, Miss. His home was one of those lovely abodes where ministers were often welcomed. An efficient steward of the church, he was liberal with his own means in supporting the gospel and helping the poor. His hearing became bad, and grew worse with age; but he still loved the house of God, often standing by the pulpit during the sermon that he might hear. When he became entirely deaf he would still sometimes go to church. In his declining years he lived with his daughter, Mrs. Martha Catchings, near Georgetown, Miss., where he spent a serene old age, and where he breathed his last, Nov. 4, 1890.

Bro. Bridges was a man of more than ordinary force of character. He served his generation well, and left to his posterity the heritage of a good name.

W. B. LEWIS.

Solomon's Confession of Ignorance.

"In former times there were seven wise men: now you can scarce find so many fools." This was written long before our time, and the number of wise men, to say nothing of fools, has greatly increased. Now, we boast that we have "weighed the stars," and there are several hypotheses, all more or less "nebular" as to their origin. There are also numerous theories as to the causes of most natural phenomena. We can take our choice. After all, the wisest of men frankly acknowledged that there were, at least, "four things" that he did not know. Another wise man says: "It is better to sit down in modest ignorance, than buy the uncertain knowledge of this life with sweat and vexation, which death gives every fool gratis."

Yet, in spite of the unreliability of what we call knowledge, men continue to seek it, wearing out their lives and health in its pursuit. For such there is relief in Compound Oxygen. And we can furnish abundant evidence of the truth of this statement, proof enough to convince the most sceptical. If you wish to verify our assertion, send for our treatise on Compound Oxygen, giving a full account of this wonderful vitalizer, with records of cases cured, hundreds of testimonials. No other genuine. Book sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

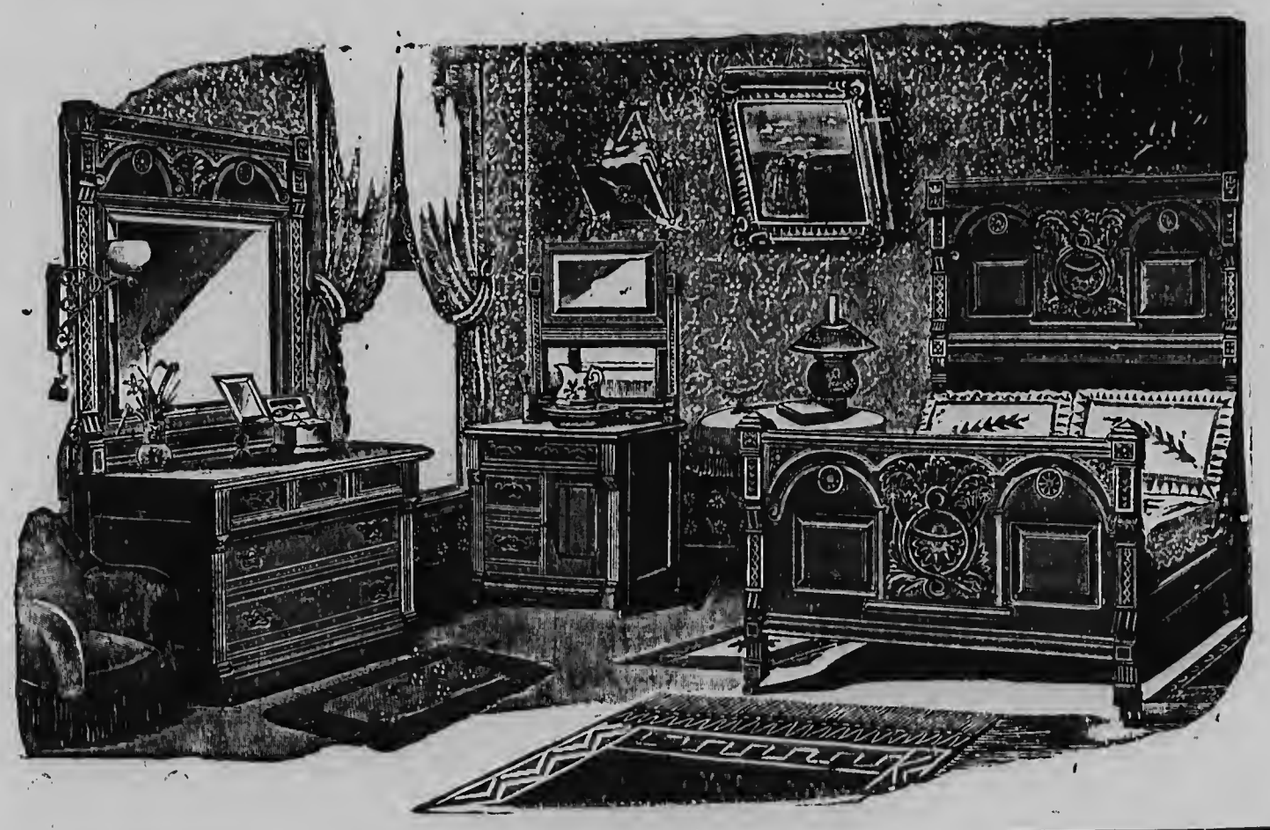
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

ROBT. J. HARP, P. E.

That brassy ringing cough means a croupy night. Give Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never swaps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and antipyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

GARMENTS GUARANTEED TO FIT PERFECT WITHOUT TRYING ON.

by return mail full descriptive circulars of MOODY'S NEW TAILOR SYSTEM OF DRESS CUTTING. Any lady of ordinary intelligence can easily and quickly learn to cut and make any garment, in any style to any measure for lady or child. Address MOODY & CO. CINCINNATI, O.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Careful estimates of the appropriations show that the Congress which has just adjourned appropriated over $1,000,000,000, as against $813,000,000 for the Fiftieth Congress.

A raid upon the moonshiners of south Alabama and northern Florida has just been completed, and resulted in thirty arrests being made and forty-nine stills captured and destroyed.

The Executive Committee of the World's Fair directory has practically agreed to concede the demand of organized labor in the city for an 8-hour day and the appointment of a board of arbitration.

Near Cleveland, Tenn., the work of a prehistoric race has been discovered in the shape of a wall now underground. It is five feet high and has been traced 100 yards. The top stones have on their inside faces inscriptions in hieroglyphic characters.

The severest rain-storm for many years swept over Mississippi on March 8, and lasted twenty-four hours. Railroad beds were washed away in many directions. Reports from Yazoo City, West Point, Meridian, Greenville, and other places, indicate much loss to property.

The Emerald branch of the Irish Land League, of Louisville, met on March 8, and adopted a resolution that they would give no money or other aid to either of the factions of the national party in Great Britain. They recommend that all other branches of the league in the United States, Canada and Australia take similar action.

The long strike of the coal miners in the Monongahela Valley has ended in a complete victory for the men. On March 6 the operators met and decided to concede the demands of the strikers for an advance in the mining rate of ½ cent per bushel and resume work on Monday. The strike was one of the longest and most determined ever known in that section. It lasted ten weeks and the 6,000 men lost in wages alone over $1,000,000.

The race question is assuming a serious phase in Oklahoma Territory, and the continued agitation which the subject is raising is more than likely to result in a collision between the whites and blacks. When this territory was thrown open to settlement a large number of negroes settled in Guthrie, but their presence excited no serious remonstrance. During the last six weeks, however, negroes from the South have swarmed into Oklahoma by the hundreds in response to inducements thrown out in a glittering prospectus, which was scattered broadcast in communities thickly settled by "blacks."

FOREIGN.

The Right-Rev. Wm. Reeves, D. D., bishop of the united diocese of Down and Connor and Dromore, has issued a letter amounting practically to an excommunication of the Catholics who support Mr. Parnell.

The anti-opium convention, to be held in London, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next, promises to be a great success, especially as it concerns the leading clergymen of all denominations in great Britain and Ireland, who will be present.

By his personal influence Emperor William has succeeded in preventing the defeat in the Reichstag of the government on the proposed addition to the navy, but this has only been done by inducing some of the members to abstain from voting.

While speaking from the window of a railroad carriage to a crowd which had assembled at the Drogheda station, while he was en route to Newry, Mr. Parnell vehemently threatened to drive the seceders from his ranks out of Parliament and out of the country.

A case of outrageous treatment of an American citizen by Italian customs officials at the French frontier has been reported to the American consulate at Rome. He was arrested, assaulted and tried for an imaginary offense. He was finally acquitted, and now seeks redress.

Information received from official sources shows that the Chilian insurgents are short of ammunition, and that they, therefore, refrain from making an attack upon the capital, Santiago de Chili, where the troops are well armed and prepared to make a vigorous defense.

The great tariff debate occurring in the French Chamber of Deputies next week will probably last until midsummer. During a long conversation on the subject M. Ferry said: "We shall impose low duties on the products of countries whose tariffs favor us. If the United States reduces its scale it will be the gainer in its trade with France."

A number of leading Jews in Germany have addressed a communication to Baron Hirsch, thanking him for his magnificent gift to promote the emigration of Polish and Russian Jews to the United states. Large numbers of these people have succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the Cossack cavalry who guard the Russian frontier, and have made their way into Austria and Germany, and are now awaiting transportation to America.

The result of the Austrian elections is a severe blow to the government. The German element had just been rejoicing over the retirement of M. De Dunajowski, the advocate of individual nationality for the various races inhabiting the empire, as against German supremacy, when the Bohemian elections resulted in a triumph for the Bohemian party, which most emphatically voices anti-German sentiment and policy.

"The Blood Is the Life,"

Runs the old saying, and everything that ever makes part of any organ of the body must reach its place therein through the blood. Therefore, if the blood is purified and kept in good condition by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, it necessarily follows that the benefit of the medicine is imparted to every organ of the body. Can anything be simpler than the method by which this excellent medicine gives good health to all who will try it fairly and patiently?

A Grand Opportunity.

The great piano house of Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, La., is now offering astounding inducements in pianos and organs. Mr. Werlein deserves great credit for the mammoth business he has built for himself. This fact is due to his giving his customers the best possible advantages and selling them instruments lower than could be purchased from any other music house in the South. Mr. Werlein is soliciting correspondence from everyone, and prices and catalogue will be mailed to you with great pleasure.

Undoubtedly now is the time to secure a grand bargain, and Mr. Philip Werlein will give you such a low price and such easy terms as will astonish you. Remember the place and number—Philip Werlein, 135 Canal St., New Orleans La.

To Property Holders.

The Passenger Department of the Q & C. Route will publish an edition of fifty thousand of a pamphlet describing all Timber Lands, Coal and Mineral Lands, Improved and Unimproved FARMS that are for sale on or near the line of the road. The entire expense of this publication will be borne by the R. R. Co., and we ask FARMERS and Land owners having property for sale to send accurate description of same, giving location, character of soil, nature of improvements if any, price and terms, to the undersigned at earliest possible moment in order not to delay publication of the work. Supplements will be issued from time to time, but we want the first number at complete as possible. Answer by mail to F. S. MORGAN, Commissioner of Immigration, care D. G. EDWARDS, G. P. and T. A.

Queen & Crescent Route, Cincinnati, O.

Trade between Germany and the Australian colonies is growing in a way that surprises Great Britain. Nearly a hundred German vessels now carry on traffic with Melbourne.

A Large Dose of MAGUIRE'S CUNDURANGO taken in the morning, one hour before breakfast, prevents indigestion and headache, removes costiveness and regulates the liver.

WINTER HUMORS

Cold, raw winds of winter fan to fury itching, burning, and scaly humors and diseases of the skin, scalp, and blood. No pen can describe their severity, no language can exaggerate the suffering of those afflicted, especially of little babies, whose tender skins are literally on fire. Winter is the best time to effect a permanent cure. Cuticura Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times, are absolutely pure, and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success. CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, heals raw and irritated surfaces, cleanses the scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the Cuticura Remedies cure every humor of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, when the best physicians fail.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN AND BLOOD" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Pimply Skin, red, rough hands, painful finger-ends and shapeless nails are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants and children. Young Preachers—No. 8.

BY AN OLD MINISTER.

VISITING.

The great apostle went from house to house, and to do the people spiritual good. A shepherd should know his flock, and, therefore, should mingle with them. We know a man and a family better when we know something of their home-life. We get nearer to them, and in their homes there is more of the natural and less of the conventional; and, knowing their immediate surroundings, we are more in sympathy with them, and they are more in sympathy with us. When we are in the house of God, and in the sacred desk, we appear before our people as the ambassadors of God, clothed with the authority of our holy office, discussing the solemn themes of salvation; the people look at us, and think of us as something more than mere men, and something different from themselves. There is, to a certain extent, a social gulf between us. But when we are in their domestic circle, around their firesides and hospitable boards, then we are as they are. After such intercourse we can preach to them better, and they hear us more profitably. Know your people and their spiritual needs, and let them feel that they know you. Win their hearts, and when you have done that, you have them in the best sense, and may instrumentally win them for Christ; and to "present every man," with whom you may be pastorally associated, "perfect in Christ Jesus," is your one great work in life.

In this work, as well as all other, you must counsel with propriety and common sense. Take into account that poor and socially obscure people are tempted to think they will be slighted and neglected because they are poor. The rich man realizes the strength and elevation of his position, and never imagines anybody is going to slight him. When you go to your new field, see the poor and the sensitive first of all; it will be a source of pleasurable gratification to them, for you, perhaps, are the most important person, socially, that ever enters their doors, and they will attach a special importance to your visit. The more elevated and better informed class will understand this, and appreciate you all the more.

If you are fond of books, and fond of your pen, it will often be an act of no small self-denial to lay these aside, and walk a mile to see some who, from a worldly standpoint, can be of little interest to you. They have never had time to read or travel; have but little colloquial power. You must furnish the least and flow of soul; but you, as a minister of Christ, will remember that your Savior is their Savior, and that he bought them with his precious blood, and that it is your honored privilege, as well as your bounden duty, to help them on to God.

Visit all your people. Let no family in your charge say, "Our pastor has never visited us." Visit them, and you shall swell your congregation, build them up in holiness, and widen the field on which to sow the seed of life. In these visits, while they talk the incidents of home and family, and you take a courteous and kindly interest in it, see to it the time is not engrossed with "the things that are seen;" have a word, as you talk, "concerning Jesus of Nazareth;" and if circumstances at all allow of it, have a short, a tender and gracious word of prayer.

Of course, you must be a student, giving "yourself to reading and studying, to show yourself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." We do not advise you to live on the streets, or to make your visits so long that all your time will be consumed. Give your mornings, as far as may be, to useful reading, and the discipline of your pen. When a rainy day confines you to your room, appreciate it as a precious opportunity for reading, meditation and prayer. As often as you can, share the hospitality and break bread with your people; but don't consume any more time than propriety demands. In these visits be cheerful, be sunshine in the circle, and all shall realize, by your unmurmuring and cheerful spirit, that God's service is to you a happy service.

I have found visiting a precious means of grace. The self-denial, the uncomplaining resignation in suffering, in bereavement and straitened condition, has often strengthened my faith, and rebuked some temptation to murmur at some seemingly hard condition of my lot. Remember Christ commends those that visit the sick and those in prison.

Millsaps College Scholarships.

The endowment fund of Millsaps College ought to be indefinitely increased by the endowing of scholarships, by means of which young men, who can not pay their own way, could be educated free of charge. A twofold advantage will follow from the establishment of these scholarships, for not only will they enable many a young man to gain an education, which, without such aid, would be beyond his reach; but it will also give to our people an opportunity of paying a compliment to the living, or of erecting a memorial of their dead. A child, whose father had spent a life of self-denying labor for the cause of God, could offer no more appropriate memorial of the sainted dead than to endow a scholarship in his name, so that for all time those who come within the influence of the college should become familiar with the name, and a vested interest be possessed in every young man who becomes a partaker of its benefits. So a parent may perpetuate the name of a child, and in that child's name become a co-worker with Him who "went about doing good." So a congregation may preserve the name of a loved pastor, and add to the volume of influence by which "he, being dead, yet speaketh." So a church may rear a monument to some hero or heroine of the cross, and thus pay grateful tribute to the spirit that beautified the character and adorned the life.

The annals of Mississippi Methodism are illustrious with the names of mighty men of God, and these names ought to be connected with the college of Mississippi Methodists, and perpetuated there by scholarships, just as in Westminster Abbey memorial tablets perpetuate the names of England's illustrious dead.

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College have suggested the endowment of two kinds of scholarships—one costing $2,500, which will pay the board and tuition of the beneficiary, and the other costing $1,000, which will entitle the beneficiary to free tuition. These scholarships will be named by the persons endowing them, and the funds will be controlled by the Board.

Bishop Galloway, during the last session of the Mississippi Conference, suggested that our first scholarship should be named for Miss Clara Chrisman, and that its beneficiaries should be young men who were preparing for the foreign mission work. This scholarship is growing finely, and already between seven and eight hundred dollars have been subscribed toward it.

A contribution ought to be made for this cause in every congregation, Sunday-school and missionary society in Mississippi.

Scholarships have also been suggested which shall bear the names of Dr. C. K. Marshall and Dr. T. A. S. Adams.

It is to be hoped that our pastors will call the attention of their people to these scholarships, and that contributions for these and others will be sent by many.

A. F. WATKINS.

Was It Wise?

The recent discussion between Mr. Henry Ware, et al., on the question of constitutional prohibition, has voiced the warm sentiments of many of the friends of the worthy cause. We say that the treatment received by prohibition at the hands of the late Constitutional Convention was a sad disappointment and a great surprise to a large per cent. of the warmest advocates the cause has had in the State of Mississippi. It was confidently expected that the cause of temperance would be one of the most interesting and important features of that august body. It was understood that a number of the members were elected on that issue. But, with a backhanded slap in the face, the cause so dear to thousands of homes of this generation was thrown out, wounded and weakened to an extent from which it can not survive under the present order of things for a generation. Many had come to rest in the delusive thought that the promised deliverance was nigh, and that they had seen its star in the East. For not less than ten years the friends of prohibition have been fighting to the death the arch-enemy of the human race, and had won many signal victories; but the laws that had been formulated rendered it a constant dread, from the fact that they were liable to have to fight over the same ground every two years, and pass through the same fearful excitement and demoralizing conflict. There was no power to kill the enemy and make him stay dead. Every two years he would burst his tomb, and shake his bones, and draw a long breath for battle.

There has ever been division of opinion on the method to suppress the liquor traffic. Some have fought prohibition as the enemy of rights, and have held to the moral suasion theory. Prohibitionists have been divided among themselves; some holding to local option, and others to constitutional prohibition.

But what was the ground of the action of the late convention? The password was, "The people are not ready for constitutional prohibition." Who said this? From what source did it originate? From the enemies of prohibition? It would seem so. We can hardly conceive of a prohibitionist, standing with power in his hand to stamp out the curse of liquor from the State for good and for all, making the plea that the people are not ready for it. But, nevertheless, it is even so.

A member from East Mississippi has always opposed prohibition by local option, rather favoring constitutional prohibition. When the convention came to a vote on the report on prohibition, this man voted against it, and when asked why he changed his principles, said that a certain very high church dignitary and great prohibitionist said it would not do—the people were not ready for constitutional prohibition. This has become the shibboleth of the enemy. They have captured our ensign, and Samson has been shorn of his locks. This has disheartened the church and the friends of the good cause, with comparatively a few exceptions. They say, What is the use trying to wrestle with this untiagging, undying enemy? Many a time have I heard men say: I would be glad if we could strike at the root of this question, and be rid of this periodical turmoil.

But I believe this reason is invalid. First, because it is hardly possible that those who have favored local option should turn and favor whisky, rather than have it in the Constitution. This course would not be rational nor sincere. If they can vote for the blessings of local option, how could they oppose the higher benediction of a universal dead-shot in the Constitution? It is not like voting on stock laws. These exist for the people as necessity creates the demand. But this liquor question is one of social and moral import. It is the enemy of all social and moral purity. It is universal, and is to be treated exactly on a level with the Lottery issue. Why should we be so strenuous in the agitation trying to obtain an iron-bound constitutional enactment to crush it out? We tithe mint, anise and cummin, and neglect the weightier matters. These ought we to have done, and not to leave the other undone.

In the second place, we believe that the reason is invalid because it is not the policy of the gospel, nor the custom in the management of public affairs, to wait for public sentiment in inaugurating reforms. All reform laws have been made in the face of the most bitter protest and prosecution. The only question for reformers is, "Is it right?" Suppose this compromising spirit were to regulate the movements of the Anti-Lottery League? Suppose the people in Louisiana were to wait for the development of anti-Lottery sentiment strong enough to amend the Constitution without opposition? We would wait until the judgment. The cause must voice itself in law and create sentiment. Now, I am speaking of the actions of conventions, not of popular vote. Suppose the new Constitution should have been submitted to the people for ratification? How much of it would remain intact? Hence the builders dared not to submit it, and determined to take it out of the clutches of a mongrel populace. Why should they be so over-scrupulous of obtaining the public's consent to give the devil a blow? But no, he must be consulted; and he chuckles at the influence of dignitaries in his favor.

"We had trusted that this was He who should redeem Israel." By the manner in which the matter has been disposed of, the hopes of the good people of the black counties are blighted for a century. However much our neighbors are enjoying the blessings of local option, the people of these black counties must submit to the domination of the rum traffic in all its degraded phases and associations; their children must grow up in the midst of all its concomitant corruptions. This country is, physically, an Eden, compared with the moral aspects of the situation. If salvation from without does not come, this section of country must be buried a dozen times, at least, before those who hold the key in their hand are sufficiently elevated to rid the country of whisky and its consorts. The negro race here stand about four to one, and, so far as popular vote is concerned, we will be at the mercy of the devil and his allies. Newspaper men, politicians, and many professional men give their support to the traffic, and thus we are at the mercy of the Philistines.

When the Israelites came to the Jordan, two and one-half tribes chose their possessions on the opposite Canaan. But Joshua would not allow them to stop until they had gone over and helped their brethren conquer the promised land. But prohibition has conquered the eastern portion of the State, and divided it off in counties and towns for its inheritance; but, as for us across Jordan, they care not. We may suffer and wait. We again ask the question, Was it wise?

ALEXIS BOWMAN.

Notes from Brookhaven.

Dr. D. C. Kelley has been invited, and accepted the invitation to deliver the sermon before the State W. C. T. U. Convention, which will be held here the first days in May. Dr. Kelley's prominence in matters concerning prohibition, with his known abilities otherwise, make his selection for this occasion a wise and very interesting one. The Convention will most likely be well attended, and our ladies are actively at work to render it a pleasant one.

Bro. Woodward has made his place, and is fitting it in admirable fashion. The district parsonage, for some time a misty castle-in-Spain arrangement, is taking shape and being pushed towards completion. A $300 lot is bought and paid for, the contract is let, lumber on the ground, and the workmen are busy with it. The house, with slight variation, will be the same as the pastor's new and elegant parsonage, which is, doubtless, the most complete and comfortable one in the district. This is not contradicting Bro. Cooper's late remarks about his Hazlehurst parsonage; it is correcting them. Bro. Cooper has not seen the preacher's home at Brookhaven. With characteristic energy, our presiding elder has kept the matter astir, and will, consequently, in a few weeks be "at home" to his friends.

Brookhaven opened the year's menu, as to public matters, with State Sunday-school Institutes, begun with the evening of the second instant, and closed with the evening of the fourth. Mr. Reynolds, of Illinois, ex-president International Sunday-school Commission, conducted the three daily services. This gentleman made a profound impression upon us. He is a rare man. Leaving his business, said to be extensive, he came to the State for the single purpose of advancing the Sunday-school interests. A broad experience, extending over twenty-five or more years, equips him splendidly; and the cream and riches of this wide experience he gave to us. I would like to say something of his methods, plans, hopes, and happy suggestions; but will not have much time here. He moved me and many as we have not been moved in many a day; spoke so naturally, so heartily of God and heaven, with calm and happy confidence in the promises and encouragements of him he serves. With powerful reasoning, simple and clear, he presented the Sunday-school as the great factor in evangelizing the world; showed that the promises of God are mainly to the young; "before the evil days come," is the time to remember the Creator; and those joining church after maturity, said he, "do not, as a rule, amount to much." His message was not to, so much as in behalf of the children; he addressed himself to the hearts of the elders. And he was surpassingly convincing and forcible. I do not think any shot missed. Illustrations strongly imaged the points he made, and we listened as to one sent and enriched with sufficient wisdom from the Lord. We are bettered for his coming, as the active Sunday-school organization, new-sprung under his direction, attests. And more, all hearts are warmed by nobler purposes and more earnest desires to rise and dwell upon the plane so happily presented, and so tenderly urged, in the Master's name, upon our parents and elder people. Mr. Reynolds kindly and unaffectedly declined to receive recompense of any kind when a collection was ordered and taken at the close of the last service. If he had done good, he was very glad, he said; but we were welcome to his service. Then, with affectionate and eloquent expressions of admiration and fellowship from our President Fitzhugh, Rev. J. H. Gambrell, and others, the choir sang, "God be with you," and one of the most interesting and useful series of service I have seen finished its preliminaries. The work and the result can not be shown now. They depend. They lie out before the Christians of our county like a land of fair prospect and promise. We will go up and possess it. Officers and Executive Committee were elected—all fit and willing for work.

Mr. Reynolds went to Meridian to do there what he did here. The Lord will bless his work. Thinking of it and him, this sort of reflection passed through the mind: I have often seen men, drunk and wretched, brought very low. While looking upon them, I have thought that man was not the marvel and crown to creation he is credited with being. Taking him, by and large, a little lower than the angels in the scale of workmanship, does not magnify the angels much. Much, very much lower than the angels makes a brighter background for them, contrastively. But to see men like this one who was here, leaving his affairs for the Lord's affairs, going long and cheerful journeys, holding up God's work as the only work of real account; a layman giving heart, brain and means in heavenly service; shining, without and within, upon the bright basis of faith and spirit light—seeing this, makes sudden change of the reflective current; a happy change. Every Christian, growing spiritually, higher, broadening, mellowing, shining, is a revelation of the magnificence of the Almighty's last and crowning creation. Growing towards him shows bright, inspiring glimpses of man God-made—not of man devil-marred.

A man who was here a week with tent and canes and rings, to teach our boys to gamble, came a nuisance and left a happy riddance.

The man of God stayed not three days, and left us with fervent hand-pressures and earnest God-speeds. Left us better, lifted us higher, and showed us nobler things.

Our presiding elder, despite rains and toothache pains, goes his rounds unstopped by difficulties. I suppose his preachers are doing well, to judge from the hearty manner in which he speaks of them and their people.

My own membership is kind and sympathetic towards their preacher and family. I have not loved them before as I love them now. We are praying and breaking ground for a strong, thorough, permanent implanting and growth of grace in the little city of Brookhaven; and we look to God, who giveth the increase.

W. H. HUNTLEY.

To the Pastors of Churches in Mississippi.

DEAR BROTHER: The fifth Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Mississippi will be held in Natchez, Miss., April 23, next, lasting four days.

We desire to make this the most interesting convention we have ever held, and in order to do this we must have the support and encouragement of the Christian people.

Will you please call the attention of your congregation, or congregations (if you have a charge), to the approaching convention, and bespeak for it their prayers and sympathy?

If there is no organization of the Y. M. C. A. in your community, we would be glad to have one or more representatives from your congregation.

All Christian men are invited to attend and take part in the proceedings. Perhaps there is some gentleman, or lady, in your congregation who is able, and would be willing, to pay the way of some Christian young man, and give him the opportunity of attending this interesting and instructive meeting of Christian young men. The delegates will all be entertained free of charge by the hospitable people of Natchez.

I will be glad to have you read that part of this circular to your congregation, and ask if anyone will volunteer to meet the expenses of such a delegate. We do not care how many you send.

I will be glad to have a card from you, and to know that you can attend and bring one or more young men with you.

The young men need every help that can be given them to get them under the influence of the divine life.

Hoping you will do what you can to get your congregation interested in this good work, and that I can hear from you soon, I am,

Yours fraternally,

J. R. DOBYNS,
Chairman State Committee.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

BIBLE READINGS FOR THE RESPONSIVE SERVICE. By Rev. G. C. Lorimer, D. D., and Rev. H. M. Sanders. A. S. Barnes and Co., New York.

The readings are arranged by subjects. Some of these are, Worship, God, Jesus Christ, The Holy Spirit, Christian Life, The Church, Occasional, etc. This book will please those who like to use a responsive service.

THE DANGER SIGNAL. By Rev. L. L. Pickett. Published by L. L. Pickett, Columbia, S. C. Price, $1.

This is a book on Romanism, consisting of two parts: Part I., Romanism; Part II., Romanism of To Day. The author seems to have ransacked pretty much every writer on this fruitful subject, and presents an appalling picture of wickedness and crime within the walls of what claims to be a holy church. Get it and read for yourself.

THE BUSY MAN'S BIBLE. By George W. Cable.

THE AMAZONS. By Virna Woods.

These are very beautiful little volumes published by Flood and Vincent, Meadville, Penn. Price, seventy-five cents a volume. In the first Mr. Cable gives his views as to how to study and teach the Bible. The second is a "dramatic narrative, reciting the episode of Achilles and Penthesilea, queen of the Amazons, whose duel before the walls of Troy is mentioned in the Iliad." It is in smooth and regular blank verse, with rhymed choral passages.

ALEPH, THE CHALDEAN; OR, THE MESSIAH AS SEEN FROM ALEXANDRIA. By E. F. Burr, D. D., LL.D. Cloth, 416 pages. Price, $1 75. Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 2 Cooper Union, New York.

Among the books eminently interesting, and which will awaken wide and possibly universal attention and comment, is "Aleph, the Chaldean," by the fertile pen of the scholarly and skillful Dr. E. F. Burr, whose power to produce strong and wholesome works is proverbial. The present work bids fair to achieve a popularity equal to Wallace's "Ben Hur." It carries with it the charm of romance, the exquisite touch of tenderness, the beauty of a perfected story, the imperious logic of a great and well-designed plan to unfold sublime truths. That it will be a book sought after, and secure unusually large sales, can be safely prophesied.

THE SERMON OF ST. FRANCIS.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

Up soared the lark into the air,
A shaft of song, a winged prayer,
As if a soul, released from pain,
Were flying back to heaven again.

St. Francis heard; it was to him
An emblem of the seraphim;
The upward motion of the fire,
The light, the heat, the heart's desire.

Around Assisi's convent gate
The birds, God's poor who can not wait,
From moor and mere and darksome wood
Come flocking for their dole of food.

"Oh, brother birds," St. Francis said,
"Ye come to me and ask for bread,
But not with bread alone to-day
Shall ye be fed and sent away.

"Ye shall be fed, ye happy birds,
With manna of celestial words.
Not mine, though mine they seem to be;
Not mine, though they be spoke by me.

"Oh, doubly are ye bound to praise
The great Creator in your lays:
He giveth you your plumes of down,
Your crimson hoods, your cloaks of brown.

"He giveth you your wings to fly
And breathe a freer air on high,
And careth for you everywhere,
Who for yourselves so little care!"

With flutter of swift wings and songs,
Together rose the feathered throngs,
And singing, scattered far apart;
Deep peace was in St. Francis' heart.

He knew not if the brotherhood
His homily had understood;
He only knew that to one ear
The meaning of his words was clear.

Dr. Abbey's Reply.

This writer has nothing but the profoundest respect and reverence for Dr. Abbey, and shall always be among those who shall thank God for his long and useful life. Not one word of my former article can he understood to derogate from his worth as an author, nor was so intended. I wanted simply to correct a false impression he had concerning other authors. The first three paragraphs of his reply merit no reply from me; they stand for themselves. They are only the emanation from the safety-valve; they have no connection with the discussion. I stated also that I did not seek a controversy on the subject; I only wished to make a correction. I shall answer at length.

1. I said: "He creates the impression that he, principally, and two other minor lights are all that are to be found in all Episcopal Methodism who have embodied in brochure-form the idea that Christ and his apostles never ordained nor instituted a stereotyped form of ecclesiastical polity." The Doctor asks to quote and prove. In the issue of the Nashville Advocate, of Jan. 31, he says: "Of all the Methodist books published in Nashville or New York, in all time past, how many have attempted to set forth this doctrine as stated by you? Besides a few bearing my own name, I am now able to mention but two, viz: one by Rev. J. A. Parker, and a pamphlet...by Rev. Dr. H. M. Ford." This is evidence so plain that he that runneth may read, and yet the Doctor seems to doubt. He can't believe his own pen. Let it be understood that the discussion is not on the theory, but on the facts of authorship. On theory we are agreed.

2. But Dr. Abbey says my quotation from Dr. Ralston proves that his charges against him are true; that Dr. R. is unsound on the subject. I stated that Dr. R. did not advocate a cast-iron theory on polity. Dr. Abbey aligns his doctrine along with "any and all forms of High Churchism." So he quotes a part of my own quotation from Dr. R. to prove that it confirms his allegation. Doctor, did your book fail? or why was it you did not see the remainder of the quotation contained in the very next six lines? Why didn't you quote all? You intimate that you quote from me. The readers of the ADVOCATE can find the quotation made by me in the issue of Feb. 12. But I will quote it again for convenience and for the benefit of Dr. Abbey. "The Scriptures do set forth, so far as some leading foundation principles are concerned, a form of church government; and thus far all churches should be conformed to the Scripture model.

"In much of the detail pertaining to church polity, the Scriptures give no specific instructions, and, in relation to all such matters, churches are left to be guided by the principles of reason and expediency." (Divinity, p. 858.)

Now, these are two distinct propositions quoted by me to faithfully represent Dr. R. But Dr. Abbey sees fit to quote only the first half of the extract, and then talks as if he had given the whole. Even the first proposition does not sustain him in his charge, and he must distort the plain meaning of that. "The Scriptures do set forth a form of church government." Dr. R. does not say so. "So far as certain foundation principles are concerned," is what Dr. R. says. But Dr. Abbey has set out to impeach him at any event.

3. I did not say that our editors and authors "knew it all." I merely said that to arraign the editors of the Methodist Church, North and South, as Dr. Abbey did, demanded a good degree of certitude.

Dr. Abbey says: "Bro. Bowman can give us a dozen or two, or even a less number, of distinct and explicit teachings of our books and editors to that effect—not inferential, but explicit." Now, Dr. Abbey does not see proper to notice my very plain statement on this subject. I said: "I am not as old as Dr. Abbey, and have not read all the issues of the church press for sixty years, and can not assert that there has been a single editor during that time, in all our realm, who has advanced this view by a single short utterance; and I do think before Dr. Abbey makes such a heavy arraignment of our church again, he will try to plant his assertion on fact." My recollection does not take in so broad a range, and I could not positively affirm the positive or negative. It would seem that mere memory is too treacherous to warrant such dogmatic statement. If Dr. Abbey will be kind enough to produce a few extracts from our church press to confirm his charges, or a single advocate of the cast-iron theory, we would be glad for him to do so—excepting, for his sake, Dr. Ralston.

4. As to the author referred to, the word "Meander" is a misprint. It should have been "Neander." And in regard to the subject in hand, I do refer to Neander and Jacobs. Dr. Abbey has no knowledge of such an author as Dr. Jacobs. It should be supposed that an author who has read and written so much on this one thing would have seen something of such a work as Jacobs' Ecclesiastical Polity. G. A. Jacobs, D. D., is the author of the above work, and it is a reference book in the Conference course of study for our young preachers. Neander was used as a text author in this course during my four years, and, I think, continued until last May. So was Ralston. I do not know why Dr. Abbey's works were not put in the course.

5. But Dr. Abbey says I overstate his compliment to Dr. Hoss. Let us see. "After reading the Methodist papers pretty closely for the last sixty years, you are the only editor I call to mind who has in terms stated the true doctrine." I said: "He gives Dr. Hoss the credit of being the only editor of the Episcopal Methodist press for sixty years who has advanced this view." What is the difference? A possible lapse of memory is all.

6. I do not wish, nor would I if it were in my power, rob Dr. Abbey of a single ray of his worthily won glory in the field of ecclesiastical polemics. We are proud that we have such a man for our defense. But we are ready to accord due honor to all our scholars, and want to see them crowned.

Why does Dr. Abbey confine his critical reply, in regard to the authors alluded to by me, to Dr. Ralston, Neander and Jacobs? Why has he ignored Dr. Summers? From his Systematic Theology I quoted at length to show that he was an unmistakable advocate of the doctrine referred to. But Dr. Abbey will stand to it; "the mule is sixteen feet" high. He and Dr. Parker and Dr. Ford, he said, were the only defenders of the faith among Episcopal Methodists. He will not retract it. At least, they are all who have written books on the subjects.

Now, in reference to Drs. Parker and Ford and Dr. Abbey, I mean nothing personal against their works. Dr. Abbey turns loose some of his sarcasm. He asks, Cui bono? How could my article benefit the church? He calls it hypercriticism, and makes the sneer that it was maliciously or, at least, enviously written. I will ask Dr. Abbey what good to the church was there in his article in the Nashville. What was in it but self-complacence and a tirade stultifying the writers of our church press? If there was anything sweet for anyone outside of a narrow circle I am unable to find it. Cui bono? As I stated before, I sought no controversy; and, so far as I am concerned, this closes my part in the discussion.

ALEXIS BOWMAN.

A Layman's Opinion.

I am neither a theologian, nor the son of a theologian, but theological discussions have always had a peculiar charm for me, and have exerted a strong influence over my fancy. I have often vainly attempted to follow Dr. Bledsoe, and as often read with interest the writings of Dr. Abbey.

In your issue of March 5 I read an article on "Hypostatic Union," by Rev. D. M. Geddie, that interested me very much, and enlightened me much upon a subject on which I have often dwelt. I am thankful to the brother for it; but there is one assumption in the article which is not satisfactory to my mind. Although it does no violence to any principle of the Christian religion, and stands in the way of no man's salvation, yet, to my mind, it is contradictory to God's omniscience. I do not intend to discuss the matter; but if I provoke a short explanation, I hereby acknowledge myself the debtor. I quote from Bro. Geddie's article (italics mine):

"The two natures were united in one person, that the divine might participate in all the temptations and sufferings of the human and become acquainted by an actual human experience with all the environments and needs of our race. By this union divinity was brought into absolute and eternal sympathy with man in all his sufferings."

I have heard this doctrine from more than one pulpit; but it never arrested my attention as it did while reading the article by Bro. Geddie. I tremble as I meditate upon it; I shall tremble more as I do it; but I shall paraphrase the above quotation to suit an humble layman's opinion, privately entertained and only this once publicly expressed. (Italics mine.) "The two natures were united in one person, the divine participating in all the temptations and sufferings of our race, that the human might thereby become acquainted with the divine, and learn by actual intercourse and experience the source and power of an endless life, and of help in every time of need." By this union the human was brought into the absolute and eternal sympathy of God with man in all his sufferings."

I can not conceive how God could need to become acquainted with man or need to be brought into sympathy with him. From the beginning he has been familiar with the nature, condition and necessities of the human race and gave his only begotten Son in attestation of his sympathy and love.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: In the issue of March 5, referring to the recent convention of the Students' Volunteer movement, you stated that there are now five hundred students who have signified their willingness to become foreign missionaries. I wish to correct that statement. There are over six thousand students in the various universities and colleges of the United States who belong to this movement, and who have thereby pledged themselves to go to the foreign missionary field, if not providentially hindered. Over three hundred of these volunteers are already in the field. This movement originated in the North, and most of its members are from that section; but the South has an encouraging representation. We should not be behind at all in this, the greatest and most promising movement in the missionary work in this century. What does it mean? It means that the noblest young men of America are preparing to enter the missionary field. That means the best where there is the greatest need. With the present prospects, it means five thousand educated young men, consecrated men, in the field in the next four years. With this force increasing yearly, it means the evangelization of the world in this generation. The thought thrills me. It can be done! It will be done!

[In our note we intended to say five thousand instead of five hundred. We are glad that the number has grown to six thousand. We thank Bro. Rowlett for the correct information.—ED.]

Capt. Samuel Henderson.

Capt. Samuel Henderson was born in Madison county, Tenn., August 6, 1823, and died suddenly, Feb. 26, 1891, in New Orleans, La. During his early life he belonged to the Episcopalian Church, which was that of his parents, but subsequently he became a Methodist, and in the whole-hearted way characteristic of the man and his actions. He came to New Orleans early in the "forties," or at the first blush of young manhood, and engaged in business, meeting with unqualified success for a number of years. One of his first acts upon establishing his domicile here, was to connect himself with the Carondelet Street (then Poydras Street) Methodist Church, in which his intelligence and piety made him prominent, and for many years he was one of the most efficient and best known of its official Board. Afterward circumstances decreed his connection with other churches in the city, where he held similar stations of prominence, being thus for nearly half a century officially connected with the history of Methodism in this city. As a church officer, in connection with more common traits, he was especially noted for fidelity and industry, and to his special labors, with a view to that end, is due much of the financial prosperity enjoyed by the churches where he held his membership. He was most constant in his attendance upon all the public means of grace, including the preaching of the Word and the weekly prayer meeting, and was always ready to give a reason of the hope that was in him. His attachments ordinarily were strong, but especially were they so for ministers of the gospel and for all the appurtenances of that Zion whose holy hill had been his Mecca from boyhood. A doorkeeper's place in the house of his God he would have preferred to the palatial tabernacles of sin. "How we shall miss him" now that he is gone! is the soliloquy of Zion's habitues heard on every side.

The marriage of Bro. Henderson in early life to Miss Fannie H. Malone, of Athens, Ala., a lady of culture and belonging to an old Methodist family of wealth and refinement, was an event in his life which, no doubt, had much to do in shaping his career as a Christian, as well as a citizen. His life of marital devotion was beautiful indeed, and certainly could have been equalled by nothing of a similar nature unless it was the charming relief of this picture afforded by his most gentle and affectionate relations to the children which God had given him to love. His faithful wife survives him, as do his five children—three boys and two girls—besides several grandchildren. The evening before he died suddenly, he said to the writer that he desired to live for his family, but was ready at any moment for the summons to depart; and, though at the time apparently in his usual health, he added, while saying farewell, with more than ordinary emotion, "Pray for me, that I may keep in the way to the end." Frequently during recent years he professed that he had at all times the inward "testimony that he pleased God." As a token of some such life of inward blessedness that beautiful flower of piety that we term thanksgiving seemed to be in perpetual outward blossom. God's goodness was for him not only a subject of rapt soliloquy, but of much repeated and earnest asseveration. But a few minutes before his death, which resulted from heart failure, having knelt behind the bed upon which his sick wife lay, and being asked by her what he was doing, he replied, in his usual cheerful voice, that he was "just thanking his heavenly Father for his many acts of blessing, and for all his kindness to him during the past years." Thus death's cunning ambush resulted in no surprise to him, and, with the interruption only of a single exclamation point, the psalm of thanksgiving broken off here was resumed in heaven. Almost before he was missed on earth he was frequenting the worship of the temple not made with hands. And if he could come back to us, he would say, with the old earnestness, and with outstretched, beseeching hands, "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

Sunday-School Work.

OBJECT.

It seems never to have occurred to the masses of church people that the Sunday-school has any objective point other than the training of the young. It is readily admitted that, as a training-school for the church, the Sunday-school should take pre-eminent rank; but no conscientious superintendent or teacher will consent to make the conversion of those under him a secondary consideration. While the mind is being taught the truths of revealed religion the earnest teacher is also preparing the soil for its induction into the sacred relations of sonship with God.

METHODS.

In the presentation of his divinely appointed mission the wise teacher will spare no effort to introduce the best methods into his class work. These methods vary in different classes and under different circumstances, but will suggest themselves to the thoughtful. While the fullest cordiality should exist between teacher and scholars, and the utmost freedom be allowed in the discussion of the lesson, a gentle restraint should forbid any indulgence in levity or frivolous conversation. This is the teacher's hour, and the use he makes of it may tell for generations to come, and even through eternity.

RESULTS.

The comparatively meager results accomplished in Sunday-school work during the long period we have occupied the field, is cause for deep humiliation and self-abasement on the part of our Louisiana Methodism. Seventy-five years occupation of the field, and less than ten thousand in the Sunday-schools! In less than a half-dozen years the Farmers' Union boasts a membership forty thousand strong.

This suggests that we have been laggards in the field. Thousands of us have hid our Lord's talent in a napkin. Superintendents and teachers must be pure, spiritual and devotional. Consecrated leadership is an absolute condition of successful work. Godless teachers are the wooden horses in which the devil hides that he may gain admittance into our citadel.

W. C. CHEVIS.

Rayne, La.

MR. EDITOR: I have delayed to reply to your request to give you my thoughts on the "Object, Method and Results of Sunday-school Work." It is not because I was indifferent or negligent about the cause, but simply from the fact that I did not feel competent to write anything that would be interesting or instructive to anyone. But since I notice that others have failed to answer I will try to write you a few thoughts as the result of my experience.

I think the object of Sunday-school work should be to instruct the people, especially the young, in the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, and to impress them with the sacred duties of the Sabbath, that, instead of desecrating the day (as it is so often done) by visiting, gaming and other recreations, they should be trained for work in the church that they may grow up to be useful laborers in the church of God, and, as their talents develop, and they enter the various avocations of life, the influence of the Holy Scriptures may be seen in their lives.

As to the best method to effect that work I think the international lesson plan, as arranged by our Sunday-school Committee, a good course to follow. However, I generally leave off some of the service suggested in the periodicals and supplement other service to interest the children. I don't think any order of service would be best to follow all the time; but children need a change occasionally to interest them, and those changes that suggest themselves to the different schools and communities should be adopted. I have the lesson read by a boy and a girl who are appointed one Sunday to read the next, and, after the calling of the roll, the boy and girl that are appointed to read rise from their seats and read the lesson responsively; the whole school look on the lesson while they read. I also appoint one or two to read short pieces from select subjects, such as missions, temperance, etc. They are appointed one Sunday to read the next.

I also give the small children some little songs suited to them, and have them sing together. I have the Juvenile Missionary Society in connection with the school. We have monthly meetings, and we try to impress them with the importance of sustaining the cause of Christ by giving to missions.

The results of the above plans which I have adopted for the last few years are that the Sunday-school interest has increased, and I think more permanent good accomplished; also the cause of missions is better supported by the young people than at any other time of my experience of twenty-two years as superintendent.

If these thoughts are of any value to you and the cause of Sunday-schools, you are truly welcome to them.

Hoping to see something in the ADVOCATE on the subject that will be instructive and edifying to us all, and for which and all your work of labor and love for the church you have the prayers of Your brother in Christ, Help Needed.

Last Saturday morning, about seven o'clock, a disastrous cyclone passed through this town (Camden), sweeping away nearly everything in its course. The saddest part of the calamity in this place is the utter destruction of the Methodist Church, which was blown into fragments. Several dwellings and stores were wrecked. The storm divided just before reaching Camden, one part passing about five miles to the west, and the other part coming through this place. Both parts of the storm were very destructive. The parsonage came near going; but the Lord spared us. We will go to work at once to rebuild the church, and hope to build on a more eligible spot a good, neat chapel. Our people are poor, but willing, and intend doing great things for God. They are also worthy, and are surely in need of all the help from friends abroad that can be given. So, in behalf of Camden Methodist Church, I appeal to any, all friends to help us liberally and speedily in rebuilding the house of God. It is a dire necessity, and must be done at an early day. Let pastors and people help us at once in this, our deep trouble, and God will bless you abundantly.

Send all contributions to the writer, or to Mr. J. H. Evans, treasuror of funds, Camden, Miss., by registered letter, check, or draft. God bless all who will aid us in this important work!

Yours fraternally,

E. F. EDGAR.

Camden, Miss., March 9, 1891.

FROM THE WORK.

MARION CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

At our last Conference the Bishop sent me back to this charge (Marion), and I feel that something said about our people would not be amiss. We are moving along slowly and, I trust, successfully. Our church at this place (Marion) is not what I would like to see. We have some active members who have the church at heart. Our Woman's Missionary Society is moving on nicely under the presidency of Miss Dora Smith. They have seventy-four active members, eight honorary members, and fifteen juvenile members. The most of them take an active part in the work. The Sunday-school is under the superintendency of R. H. Harmon, a young man who is active and understands his business. Robert (as we call him) is the youngest man I ever saw for a superintendent.

Our church at Lockhart is in the best condition, spiritually, it has been in for many years. The protracted meeting we held last year is still going on. We have two prayer meetings every week, and a regular old-fashioned class meeting once a month, led by Bro. Bloodworth. Last Sabbath, at the class meeting, the congregation was large and full of interest. Methodist, Baptist and Holiness all testified for the Master. The Sunday-school there is carried on under the superintendency of Bro. C. M. Kelly, who is full of the Holy Ghost; and it is delightful to hear the children repeat the Lord's Prayer, and to hear them repeat the Ten Commandments and their Scripture verses. Bro. W. S. Pigford, the steward, is in his place. He is the man for the place. He is moving his members up on the finances. Some of our people there are waking up on giving the tenth. They say they never saw the necessity of it until this year.

Our people at Coker's and Pleasant Hill are not what I would like to see, by far.

Our people at Curtis are in good working condition. If the men there were like the women, it would be up with Lockhart.

May the Lord speed the day when the church at Coker's and Pleasant Hill, with Andrew Chapel, will be up with the other churches!

We are getting some new subscribers occasionally, with renewals, for the ADVOCATE. J. N. WARE.

CATO, MISS.

Owing to sickness, I did not reach my work till last Sabbath in January, and did not return for my family until the middle of February. We are now all here and at work. We found a good, comfortable parsonage. We are among good people, who seem to appreciate their preacher and family. Shortly after we arrived we were all well pounded by the young people of Cato, and almost daily we are the recipients of favors from our people. I like my work, and yet there is one serious objection—the work is too large, there being seven churches on the work, and not one of them willing to take Saturday preaching. So you see I have my hands full—yes, my heart and mind also. How great the responsibility! Christ, my Savior with me, I take hold and move forward. Through him I expect to accomplish much. Pray for me and mine. The ADVOCATE is not well supported, but ere this year closes I hope to be able to say, "Very well supported." For this I shall strive.

Our first Quarterly Conference was held on the fourth Sabbath. Bro. P. A. Johnston, notwithstanding the mud and distance, was on hand, and preached us two good, practical sermons, calculated to advance the cause of our Master. Bro. Johnston is a faithful presiding elder and servant of God. May the Lord bless him this, the fourth, year on the Brandon district, and may he be able to say at its close, "It has been the best!" To this end, on my part of it, I shall labor and pray. R. S. GALE.

MANY CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I will write you a few lines to let you hear from the Many circuit. At the Annual Conference, held at Monroe, I was returned to this circuit by Bishop Haygood. I came home with a glad heart, with the determination by the help of the good Lord, to do better year's work than any of the years past. When I arrived at home I found my oldest daughter prostrated with typhoid fever. It was twenty-one days before there was any change for the better. My presence being needed at home, I failed to reach my appointments the most of that time, after which I started out to complete my first round on the circuit, which I did. I had just commenced the second round when I was attacked with the same kind of fever, which confined me to my room twenty-eight days. I am glad to state that we are improving, and, by the help of the good Lord, we expect in a short time to be able to commence our work again. We are not discouraged, for the Lord has been with us during our affliction. We are praying and trusting in him for a glorious revival all over the work, for he hath said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." To God be all the praise. Pray for us.

S. S. HOLLADAY.

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

I have been greatly hindered in my work by la grippe, high waters, had roads, etc.; however, I have had some very enjoyable Quarterly Conferences. The stewards, in the main, have manifested a willingness to support liberally the pastors, and I think, on the whole, there will be some increase in the allowance for ministerial support. I note improvement in most of the parsonages visited so far. The Minden parsonage, which has been a reproach to our people there, is now a thing of beauty. They were tearing down and rebuilding the old dilapidated parsonage at Vernon when I was there, and, I trust, Pastor Hall and family are enjoying the sweets of a comfortable home ere this. We expect to report new churches at several places on this district at our next Conference. J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

PLACE.—The town of Dothan, about ten miles north of Samaria.

INTRODUCTORY.

It appears quite strange to us that Syria should be at war with Israel so soon after such a signal display of divine power as was manifested in the healing of Naaman. Perhaps if that general had had the casting of the deciding vote, it would have been otherwise. But as it was, Ben-hadad's soul was all aflame with the desire for conquest, and there remained little time or inclination for the display of gratitude in return for the restoration of even his chief subject. By this miracle he had learned of the omnipotence of Jehovah; he was now to learn the lesson of his omniscience.

I.—THE PROPHET AS A REVEALER OF SECRETS.

The cause and length of this war need not be inquired into. Israel and Syria, being hostile neighbors, were almost constantly engaged in warfare of some sort. The king, Benhadad, is represented as calling a council of his "servants," by whom we understand his chief officers, in order that the war may be pushed with more vigor and success. This proceeding was, in truth, nothing short of a "council of war," in which means were to be inaugurated for its successful issue. But—strange enough!—all these secret meetings and discussions, privately carried on, amounted to nothing. The Syrians discovered that, however deep their schemes and shrewd their calculations, they were being completely baffled by some mysterious power. The cause of this is fully shown by verse 9. There was constant communication between the King of Israel and the "God of battles" through the medium of the Prophet Elisha. By this means Israel was delivered from snares on the one hand by heeding the injunction, "Pass not such a place," and from losing territory, on the other, by being warned to fortify the ill-protected places. This occurred "not once nor twice." That is, heeding these warnings of Elisha, Israel was frequently delivered out of the hands of her enemies.

Verse 11. This constant defeat of his studied plans was a reflection on the strategic ability of Syria's king; and he felt it. It was perfectly plain to him that he could be guilty of no mistake; so the most natural conclusion was that the blame rested on one of his servants. The question propounded at the next council was, "Which of us is for the King of Israel?" There is a traitor in the camp. Who will denounce him? The discussion elicited by this interrogation was brief, but quite to the point. "None, my lord, O King." That is to say, None of us who are here. No Syrian has betrayed his country. The explanation was, "Elisha telleth the King of Israel the words that thou speakest in thy bedchamber." As much as to say, As long as Elisha is in communication with Jehovah, there is practically no such thing as secret counsellings. This servant had probably become infected, in part, with the faith of Naaman; but, as it was, he made the mistake of ascribing all this faculty of discernment to Elisha himself, and did not realize that its true source was God.

II.—THE ANGELS AS DEFENDERS OF THE SAINTS.

Verse 14. Having found the place of his residence, the Syrians set out to search for the prophet that had caused them so great annoyance. And right here they displayed a wonderful lack of thought. Could they reasonably hope to surprise one that had shown himself proof against all attempts hitherto made! They evidently thought that if they could not outwit him, still they might be able to overpower him. So they sent horses and chariots and a great host sufficient to compass the city; and all this army to capture an unarmed man! Ostensibly the servant of Elisha was the first to discover the apparent danger. When he saw that all of enemies presumably cutting off all hope of either escape or deliverance he cried out in fear—as far as he could see, well grounded—"Alas! my master! how shall we do?" This was the cry of despairing faith. He saw the enemy, but could not discern the allies. So oftentimes to us trial and temptation are full in sight, but our dull spiritual vision refuses to behold the "way of escape." The sight of his pursuers did not perturb Elisha. Indeed, it may be inquired whether he regarded them at all, so intent was he in gazing upon those sent to deliver him. He was in the state of mind that David was in when he wrote, "Though an host should encamp about me, yet will I not fear." The prayer that he uttered was not for himself, but for his attendant—"Lord, I pray thee, open his eyes that he may see." The prayer was answered immediately; the eyes of the young man were opened—and what a vision there rolled into view! "The mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." Millions were present to defend where one was to destroy! Then the young man felt the truth of Elisha's statement: "They that be with us are more than they that be with them." "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him." Elisha was one of those that feared Him; hence the fulfillment of the promise in his and any similar case. The same faith that received an answer in regard to the restoration of the spiritual vision of the young man was equally rewarded in the matter of destroying the natural eyesight of Elisha's enemies. It was no spirit of revenge that prompted this petition, for had it been it would not have received a hearing.

There were two lessons to be taught by this act: Jehoram was to have one more proof of the power of Jehovah, and to gain fresh evidence of the fact that there was still a prophet in Israel, from the fact that his dangerous enemies had been delivered to him without a blow. Ben-hadad, too, was to learn that it was perfectly useless for him to fight against the "prophet that was in Israel"—much less against Him whose representative he was. The peculiar capture, entertainment and release of their troops so mortified them that from this time on they ceased their raids upon the land of Israel.

This a good record, and all parties connected with it are entitled to much credit.—Iberville South.

A Hard Corner.

The age of 30 is a hard corner for a woman to turn, and 35 is still harder. She feels that she is fast leaving her youth behind her. But there is no reason why a woman should be faded and passe at 35, or even at 45. The chief cause of the early fading of American women is found in the fact that many of them suffer from some form of female weakness or disease which robs the face of its bloom, draws dark circles about the eyes, brings early wrinkles and sallowness, and stamps the face and figure with signs of ill-health. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure all these troubles, will bring back the lost bloom, and remove the pains and ailments which make women grow old before their time. The Mississippi Colored Bar Association held its session recently in Greenville. The session was largely attended by representative colored men, several of whom were members of the last Legislature.

The many friends of Rev. Dr. J. D. Cameron and wife, of this city, will be delighted to learn that by a recent decision of the chancery court of Shelby county, Tenn., they have been awarded an interest in a large estate in Crittenden county, Ark., their share of which will probably amount to $50,000. The case has been appealed to the Supreme Court of Tennessee, which will likely render a decision in May, and which will, no doubt, sustain the decision of the court below. The estate comes from a deceased brother of Mrs. Cameron.—Winona Times.

Opelousas District.

The unparalleled success that has crowned the efforts of Methodism in spreading the gospel for the conversion of the world shows that her methods are well adapted to the wants and necessities of the masses. When we consider the peculiar difficulties in the way of preaching a pure gospel in this Southwest Louisiana, it is, to my mind, wonderful that the fruits have been as great as it now shows up. When compared with other Protestant denominations, it is very favorable either to our methods or the zeal and piety of our workers. I do not claim that we are more pious; therefore, it must be owing to our methods and polity.

A few years ago I heard a missionary address by a Baptist minister in North Louisiana. With great zeal and pathos, he declared that Southwest Louisiana was destitute of the gospel and was dependent upon their church to give it to them. When I came here I expected to find that church well established and doing a good work in evangelizing this people. Where they have churches they are doing good, and we bid them God-speed. But their progress, like ours, is slow. My district embraces all of Southwest Louisiana from Morgan City to the Texas line, and as high up as Washington. In that territory there are four Baptist Churches, with a few outside appointments. Their strongest church here is at Lake Charles, and that church, with the church at Opelousas, is without a pastor. In point of membership and pastors, the other Protestant churches in this territory are about on a par with the Baptist Church.

We have in this district thirteen circuits and stations, well manned with active pastors, with eight local preachers, a membership of 2,292, received into the church last year by profession of faith and certificate, 459; infants baptized, 280; adults baptized, 76; number of churches, 22; besides other preaching-places where we have no church-house. Value of churches, $35,400; number of parsonages, eight; value of same, $10,000; other church property valued at $4,090; total collections for ministerial support, Conference collections and church building, etc., $13,893 65. We have 31 Sabbath-schools, with 1,592 scholars; collected by Sunday-schools, $656 20.

While we give glory and praise to God, through whose providence and grace these results have been realized, we also recognize the fact that this field has not been left to be cultivated by other hands. We, doubtless, ought to have done more. Our progress here has been slow, but we are laying the foundation for grander results. The doors are being opened and new fields are being entered, and the outlook for the future is bright. The work on this district is opening up far more hopeful than it was twelve months ago. The preachers are all at their post of duty, and are working with a will. Protracted services are being held by some of the preachers with good results. The rainy season has been unfavorable, but the congregations have greatly increased, and on every line of church work there is a manifest increase of interest and zeal. We are praying for and expecting a rich harvest of "fat things" next week at our District Conference, at Lake Charles, with Bishop Haygood to preside, preach and talk to us. Pray for us.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses; and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobal, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, MARCH 19, 1891.

Death of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey.

A note from Rev. J. T. Moody, of Durant, Miss., informs us of the death of this worthy minister. On last Saturday, while at the dinner table, he was stricken with paralysis and died that night, at one o'clock. Bro. Ramsey had been for several years on the superannuated list of the North Mississippi Conference. He was a good man, universally respected and loved, and his death is a severe loss to the church. We tender our sympathy to the bereaved family.

Briefs.

Some of the brethren of the Tennessee Conference have resolved to start a paper, to be called the Tennessee Methodist, and it is to be the official organ of the Tennessee Conference. It is to be published by a stock company, the capital of which is fixed at $25,000. Rev. B. F. Haynes has been elected editor, and Dr. J. M. Wright and Prof. J. M. Cobb, corresponding editors.

It has been published that the seventh session of the International Congress of Hygiene and Demography will be held in London from Aug. 10 to 17, next, under the presidency of his royal highness, the Prince of Wales. The governments of all countries, municipalities, county councils and other provincial administrations, public health authorities, universities, colleges and all societies which are occupied in the study of the sciences more or less immediately connected with hygiene are invited to co-operate and appoint delegates to represent them at the Congress.

A concurrent resolution of the Kansas State Legislature invites to an agricultural, commercial and mining congress to be held at Kansas City, Mo., on April 15, 1891, all the States and Territories lying between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean. In addition to these, the States of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, in the North, and Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama in the South, all these mentioned being east of the Mississippi river, are likewise invited.

The basis of representation proposed in the resolution is as follows: That each State name as delegates four senators and five members of the House of Representatives, and that the Territories be allowed five delegates each.

The following is a list of topics to be considered:

One—Free coinage, metallic money and paper currency.
Two—Agriculture—What is the matter with it?
Three—Western manufacturing interests and their development.
Four—Western mineral lands and their development.
Five—Transportation and the improvement of the waterways of the West and Southwest.
Six—Immigration and the cultivation of unoccupied lands in the West and Southwest.
Seven—Uniform commercial laws.
Eight—Taxation.
Nine—Federal and State statistics.
Ten—Reciprocity.
Eleven—The Indian question and the opening of Indian lands.
Twelve—Markets for Western products.
Thirteen—Western insurance.
Fourteen—Irrigation of arid lands in the West.

This is a very important matter. It is the beginning of a great natural trade alliance between the West and the South. All the country from the Alleghany Mountains to the Pacific Ocean and from the British American line to the Gulf is concerned in it. It is the first step in a grand commercial and political revolution in the affairs of this continent. Louisiana must have her ablest men there. The South must have its ablest men there. They will meet the strong men of the West. Something of enormous import will come of it.—Picayune.

Machinery—Our Conference Boards.

Our church is getting to be quite well off in machinery. Almost every General Conference turns out one or two bright new machines for doing church work. All machinery has its uses. Some machines are made to do work. Some are made to look at. The first are useful in the common acceptation of that adjective. The second are useful to display the genius of the inventor, and are good things to brag on. We fear our church has too much machinery of the second sort. That is, it looks to us that about all we do with some of our machinery is to brag about it. We seem to be so tickled with its beauty, and palaver so much about the wisdom and ingenuity displayed in its construction, that we forget to put it to work. And we are so busy with our admiration for our "plant," that we don't see that many are actually making fun and faces at us. This is a practical age, full of practical people, and when we run out our machines and bid for popular admiration, these practical and absurd folks ask, "What's it for?" "What has it done." In their view the beauty of a machine and the wisdom displayed in its construction are manifested only by its doing some useful work. They can't see the good of machinery made simply to look at. That kind will do well for expositions and World's Fairs, but it is not the thing for every-day work and wear and tear. Neither can these practical people see the good of machinery that is operated in a very feeble way five days out of three hundred and sixty-five. And yet we are continually bragging about just that sort of church machinery. What are our Conference Boards but just that sort of machinery? They work five days, in some cases six days, in a whole year. During the Annual Conference week these machines are fired up and set to going. During the intervals of the daily sessions they puff and blow their whistles and make such a racket that innocent folks imagine some great work is being done. Toward the close of the session each one opens the escape valve and blows off the steam and the fire dies down and the magnificent machine stands idle until the next Conference. If that is what was intended when these Boards were brought into existence, the man who invented them had that rare quality, the wisdom of genius, for nothing ever met the end of its creation better than they do. We believe, however, that these Boards were not intended to be mere "yard engines." That is, an excellent engine for the yard, but it merely does the "switching." Our Boards were not intended to do the "switching" for the Annual Conference.

We take it that the object of all church machinery is to do work that will reach and influence the people. How are the people to be reached if we don't go to them with our agencies for their good. The Annual Conference reaches but a few people in one place once a year; and as our Boards are operated only during the session of that Conference, how many people are directly affected by the work of those Boards? Just as many as attend the sessions of the Conference, and no more. But if these Boards would hold a half-dozen meetings in a half-dozen different places during the year, six times as many people would be reached and influenced by their work as under the present plan of operations. Indeed, the law makes it obligatory on the Board of Missions of the Annual Conference to hold a meeting in furtherance of the missionary cause once a year in every presiding elder's district; but who knows when this wise law has ever been executed?

The Conference Board of Missions holds several sittings during the Conference session. The members of the Board look over the mission field, and confer about these high and important matters, and formulate, through their chairman, a wise and able paper which is read in open Conference; and if one of our general missionary secretaries happens to be present, he makes an eloquent address on missions. This is all good for the preachers, but the people are not reached. The secretary's address can not be published because he wants to make it at another Conference. The paper read by the chairman of the Board is, upon motion of a thoughtful brother, published once in the Conference organ, and then it is carefully wrapped in its cerements and solemnly consigned to everlasting repose in the tomb of the Conference Minutes. We say this process does not reach the people. Our machinery does not do its work directly among nor upon the people. Now, suppose this Board of Missions should resolve to follow the law of the Discipline, and hold a meeting in each presiding elder's district, we verily believe the church would enter upon new life in mission work. For instance: The Louisiana Board resolves to have a meeting in the city of Shreveport in the month of March. The presiding elder and the pastors in that city will work together to prepare for that meeting, and the members of the Board will make diligent and prayerful preparation to make it a success. The coming together after such preliminary steps would result in a rousing missionary meeting which would do that place more good than anything that has happened in church circles for years. And carry this program out in every district, and would it not be the most efficient "campaign of education" on the missionary line that the church in Louisiana ever had? And if one Board could do this with good results, all of them could do it. And if it would work for good in Louisiana, it would work for good in Mississippi, and everywhere else.

Some one is ready to interpose the objection that this scheme involves the expenditure of too much time. Our business, as a church, is to get at the people with the Word of God, applied through the agencies of the church, and in the case of one Board, at least, the law says we "shall" do it in this way. No time to keep our own law? Absurd! The time taken would not be wasted if we did the work conscientiously. It would be an improvement of time that would wake up the dormant energies of many of our people. Besides this, our time is God's. Shall we not consecrate time to his work? Would not that be his work. Would not a preacher or a speaker reach and influence more people in six meetings of this kind than is done at our Annual Conference anniversaries? Would not the work of the church command more of the respect and enlist more of the co-operation of the people, if they were thus brought in direct contact with it?

We verily believe that if our Conference Boards would become itinerants in some such way as indicated above, in less than a year the church would feel the throbbing pulse of a new life, and the old soldiers, the scarred veterans—who are to-day well-nigh disheartened—would be inspired to march to the front with a triumphant tread and with the chant of victory on their lips.

The United States Supreme Court has fixed the third Monday in April for a hearing in the habeas corpus of Mr. Dupre, of the New Orleans States, and Mr. Rapier, of the Mobile Register, under the anti-Lottery law.

The New Orleans District Conference.

This body of ministers and laymen convened in Louisiana Avenue Church, in this city, Thursday, March 12. Owing to sickness in his family, Bishop Haygood was prevented from being present. This was a great disappointment to many; but everything has its compensations, and the absence of Bishop Haygood was no exception to this rule. Dr. Evans, our presiding elder, opened the Conference at the appointed hour and proceeded to organize it for work. Rev. J. M. Beard, who had made an efficient secretary the year before, was re-elected to that important post. The Committees on Public Worship and Quarterly Conference Records were appointed, after which the Conference adjourned to meet at half-past six in the evening.

At that hour Bishop Keener took the chair and conducted the business to its close. In opening, the Bishop gave the Conference one of his quiet, heart-searching, powerful addresses. In a very calm way he pointed out the business that would properly come before the body. This gave him the opportunity to show what the church had done in this city, the heroism the people of God had displayed in the face of a multitudinous foe, the triumphs she had achieved on a field where the fight has always been fiercest, especially emphasizing the grand fact that New Orleans Methodism has been the fruitful mother of ministers of the gospel. On the other hand, with a few masterstrokes, he painted the peculiar perils that environ the people of God in this city, and exhibited the fascinating temptations to worldliness which this gay capital always presents. His warnings on this point were exceeding solemn. The whole address, so quiet, so gentle, so tender, so forceful, reminded us of those quiet forces of nature, back of whose movements are the energies of unlimited power. It was good to hear that quiet talk. It will not soon be forgotten by those who heard.

The pastors reported, one by one, upon all the interests of church work, spiritual and temporal. We gathered from these reports that these interests are receiving a larger share of attention and commanding a larger respect from without and within than formerly. Quite a number of people have been converted and taken into the church since the Conference session in December. While the congregations are not as large as is desired, the number of people attending the church services is considerable. Sunday-schools are growing and prayer meetings are well attended. The temporal interests are as well forward as at any previous Conference. The churches generally are in good repair, and only one is carrying debt, and that is small. Altogether the reports indicate a gratifying state of church affairs in the district.

The Conference was pleased with and appreciated the visit of some of our distinguished men. Dr. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College, favored the Conference with a strong address on Christian education and represented our college so effectually that he raised an additional thousand dollars from a Conference that had already contributed ten thousand dollars to its endowment fund. Bro. J. W. McLaurin, agent of the American Bible Society, gave a brief, but interesting statement of the great work of that society. He stated that this society had been donating, to spread the Word of God through Louisiana and Mississippi, about six thousand dollars a year for the past nine years.

Dr. Potter, one of our missionary secretaries, was present at the last session of the Conference, and gave a short talk about his special work. He remained several days in the city.

The number of preachers and laymen in attendance was larger than ever before, every preacher in the district being present, and a larger number of delegates than usual. The number of attendants on the Conference sessions was much larger than we have ever seen before. The church was filled every time, and the people seemed to be more than usually interested in the proceedings. We are glad to note this fact. When our people come to know fully the workings of our system, they will more heartily co-operate with the preachers; and when they do that, Methodism will take the world. As a system, it is superior to every other system for the propagation of the gospel.

There was a preaching service every day at eleven o'clock, and we had strong sermons from Bros. LaPrade, Beard; Parker, of Baton Rouge, and others. "The Word was with power."

All our city pulpits were supplied on Sabbath by visiting brethren. Thus ended a very pleasant session of the New Orleans District Conference.

The Consequences.

In the New York Christian Advocate, of March 5, Dr. Buckley forecasts the results to the Methodist Church in case the vote now being taken shall favor the admission of women into the Conferences. Dr. Buckley has from the first fought this measure with great power. He believes it to be "a reform against nature and the Scriptures," and he has opposed it with all his might and with much ingenuity. In discussing the probable consequences of an affirmative vote on the question by the Conferences, he seems to say that it will be the beginning of the disintegration of the Methodist Church. He thinks that from the day the women are voted in, its influence—with the outside world will decline, and its power within be limited—that "its accessions will diminish and the ratio of numerical growth slowly decrease." He uses this strong language: "The church will retrograde from the proud position which, in the short space of a hundred years, it has attained, as the most numerous, thoroughly organized and aggressive Protestant denomination without State support in the world."

Such a catastrophe as this in one denomination must largely affect other denominations either for weal or woe. Dr. Buckley sees in it a powerful influence on our own church. He says:

Ours is not the only Episcopal Methodist body in the country. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, separated from us on slavery and on a difference of opinion as to the prerogatives of the episcopacy brought into view in the struggles on that question, is to-day and has been for some years making much greater progress, numerically, in the ratio of its membership than we. Slavery is dead; its spirit with each death of ante-bellum survivors is passing away, a generation reared under freedom is already upon the scene. In temperance and education it is greatly improving. We have many white and colored Conferences in the South; ostensibly the two denominations are on terms of fraternity, and the best men in both are under the influence of that spirit. On the ground, of course, there is a constant struggle, naturally more between us and them than between either and other denominations.

We are the same in doctrines, and with two or three exceptions in usages. That church comes up to our borders in Kentucky, Virginia, Tennessee, Maryland, and Missouri. It has many churches in California and on the Pacific coast, and in Maryland and Virginia and West Virginia. Two of its most distinguished Bishops will hereafter reside on the Pacific coast.

If we take a step which allies our church with all the radical movements of the age concerning women, it will place a lever in the hands of that church which will make our further progress among the whites of the South impossible, and greatly increase the tendency of the Northerners removing there to join that church. More than that, it will justify it in the most strenuous efforts to prevent our progress there, and to extend itself in all the border States; and if it were to eliminate its sectional surname and advance northward, it would have an issue which in the plane of argument could not be answered.

If it were to say: "We adopted principle of a division of territory, as far as compatible with existing interests, on the ground that we represented a common Methodism; but you have repudiated our common traditional interpretation of the Scriptures; you have adopted principles concerning women that we believe will revolutionize society and reconstruct it on infidel principles. We are, therefore, called upon to give those who would still be Methodist Episcopalians, and can not remain with you, an opportunity as far as possible to do so."

Our firm conviction is that if that church should take such a ground its position would be unanswerable, and that in the border States—and no one can tell how much further—it would make decided progress.

If all this should come to pass, it would be wonderful. Dr. Buckley does not seem to have the slightest apprehension of the possibility of our church following the example of his own.

A Terrible Retribution.

The Hennessy murder trial came to an end last Friday. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty as to six of the accused and a mistrial as to the three others. This verdict dumbfounded everybody. The evidence of guilt seemed to be direct and overwhelming, and such a verdict naturally aroused the indignation of the public. A public meeting was called for Saturday at ten o'clock. Clay Statue, on Canal street, was the designated place of meeting. An immense crowd of people assembled at the time appointed. Two or three short speeches were made and the thousands marched to the Parish Prison and battered down the doors and shot to death and hung eleven of the prisoners who were connected with the murder of Hennessy. The whole terrible work was done and the crowd dispersed by twelve o'clock. Nobody was hurt save those indicted in the Hennessy case, and several who were implicated, but against whom there was no evidence, were permitted to escape. It is estimated that there were from 8,000 to 10,000 people present. This is a most awful piece of business, and could only be justified by circumstances of direst necessity.

The people argue the case in this brief manner: "When red-handed murder stalks through the streets, and open-handed bribery walks up and down the corridors of justice, and perjury shows its ugly front in open court, and the administration of law fails, what are we to do to have justice meted out? The law emanates from us, and when the proper authorities fail through any cause to administer it, the administration reverts to us. This has been so from the beginning; it will be so to the end."

There evidently is no disposition to carry this awful matter any further. The wonder is that it ceased when and where it did.

This, from the Wesleyan, is good to think about:

In the ordinary partnerships of life, the "rule of three" is a good rule, the rule by which we work. Each man puts in so much and draws in proportion. But in our partnerships with God we give him no credit for what he puts in, and what he draws is pure bounty on our part. We work by the rule of two; we put in all, and all is our part. In making a crop, soil, sunlight, air, dew, rain, and all else, go for nothing, though by far the largest part, and so in all other business. God puts in most of the capital, but we count him out in the profits. Is it just?

Personal and Otherwise.

Will the brother who remitted two dollars from Hope, Miss., March 9, 91, please send his name, as his letter was not signed?

We have received the Minutes of the thirty-seventh session of the Little Rock Conference. J. R. Moore is the efficient secretary.

Rev. N. B. Norwood, of the Gross Lete circuit, has been holding revival services with marked success during the week at Rayne Memorial Church. The attendance has been very good.

We are under obligation to the city comptroller, Otto Thoman, for a copy of his report of the "Receipts and Expenditures of the City of New Orleans from July 1, 1890, to Dec. 31, 1890."

The great river still continues to rise. Here it is as high as it was last year. Great apprehensions are entertained along its banks. The levees are being carefully guarded everywhere. Several crevasses have occurred, the principal one being near Greenville, Miss. The strain is tremendous, and as it continues to rise for many more days, a general break of levees is apprehended.

The preachers' meeting last Monday was graced by the presence of several distinguished ministers. Dr. Potter, secretary of missions; Dr. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College; Rev. J. A. Parker, of Baton Rouge, and Rev. J. H. Mounger, presiding elder of the seashore district. These brethren favored the Conference with edifying remarks in regard to their several departments of work.

There are many so-called Christian people who, we verily believe, would not hesitate to characterize the "good Samaritan" as "a crank." The idea of affording substantial aid to a suffering fellow-being never yet entered their minds. "No business to go that way, and fall among thieves!" "Served him right!" That may be religion, but it is not the religion which Christ taught and practiced.

The Wesleyan is certainly on a boom. The editor said last week: "New subscribers are coming on at the rate of two hundred a week, while renewals from old subscribers are the order of the day." We rejoice that our brethren of that estimable journal are having such a prosperous run. We would be glad if we could chronicle such good news in regard to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, but we can't.

In the Journals John Wesley, in his quaint and inimitable way, tells of having received a great blessing under very unusual circumstances, namely, during the playing of an organ voluntary in a certain church.

No doubt, some of the "weak brethren" are very much scandalized by such an "experience."

The removal of Bishops Fitzgerald and Haygood to the West having stirred Bro. Parkhurst, of Zion's Herald, and Bro. Moore, of the Western Christian Advocate, to unwonted excitement, the Southwestern Christian Advocate, of this city, administers the following sedative:

Zion's Herald asks and the Western echoes the question:

What does it mean, that the M. E. Church, South, has fixed the episcopal residence of two of its Bishops in California?

It means simply that the M. E. Church, South, attends to its own business, and never asks whether the M. E. Church or any other is around. How would it do for us to "go and do likewise." We are sorry that it takes our esteemed contemporaries so long, apparently, to find out what some things mean.

We hope every preacher who reads the ADVOCATE will read this clip from the Richmond Advocate, at least, three times:

The man who refuses to go to city churches, who, all elders know, could delight and instruct the most fastidious people, who is the best-equipped preacher of his age among us, plans to put a church paper in every home where there is a Methodist. He is our best expounder, scholarly, accurate, rich in stored wisdom, engaging in the pulpit; a man of affairs thinks he gains by the church paper, who is sufficient without it!

This "best-equipped preacher" is simply doing what he promised to do when he joined the church, and if all our preachers would simply keep their promise about supporting the institutions of the church, this everlasting worry of putting our papers in our Methodist homes would be forever hushed.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. T. W. Lewis writes from Greenville, Miss.: "Please allow me space in your next issue to say that Winona station has paid up last year's assessment for preacher in charge."

—Rev. H. Walter Featherstun writes: "Woodville station and Edward McGehee College, both of which are upon my thought, my heart and my hands, are in a progressive and very hopeful condition."

—Rev. C. M. Lyons writes from Columbia: "Last week we organized an Epworth League with ten active members, of which Dr. W. L. Van Horn is president. We also organized a W. C. T. U., with twelve members; Mrs. H. C. Blanks, president. Am working earnestly for the ADVOCATE."

—Rev. F. N. Sweeny writes: "We are in the midst of a glorious meeting at this place (Vinton, La.). The good Lord is with us in mighty power. Bro. Blocker, from Rayne, has been with us. We have had thirteen accessions up to date, and the good work is going on. We will write again soon. Pray for us."

—Rev. W. F. Henderson writes from Pleasant Hill, La.: "Because of the continued rains and almost impassable roads, circuit work is rather behind. I have failed to get to some of my appointments, and the congregations have been unusually small; but we are trying to do what we can—praying and preaching for a revival, talking ADVOCATE, and hope to bring up a full share of renewals and new subscribers by the close of the year. Pray for us."

—Rev. H. M. Ellis, Auburn, Miss., writes: "In our Conference Minutes the Adams circuit, Brookhaven district, is credited with 517 total members, when I reported only 513. We are reported to own $75, 'other church property,' when it should be nothing, and to have assessed for 'preacher in charge, $505,' when he was not worth $500. We don't like to have our reports stretched; the fact is, we are inclined to do that for ourselves."

—Rev. P. A. Miller, Coleman, Tex., writes: "I have been thinking for a long time that I would write to your valuable paper, as I have enjoyed reading it for a long time. It brings good things to my home, as I have not been in the West but a short time. I came from the North Mississippi Conference. Here I see many strange things. This is a fine country; everything is in a prosperous condition, and Methodism is strong, and she makes known her strength by the valuable churches."

—Rev. C. R. Godfrey, Sparta, La., writes: "Our first quarterly meeting for the Sparta charge was held on the last of February and first of March. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, was on hand in due time, and, notwithstanding he is a novice in the office, he did remarkably well, looking after all the interests of the church, as laid down in the book of discipline. We had a good and profitable meeting. I am looking after the interest of the ADVOCATE, and find that very few, comparatively, take the paper in this charge, but hope they will do better in the near future. I am serving a very clever people."

—Rev. T. W. Dye writes: "My mother, Mrs. Nancy Lane Dye, fell on sleep Nov. 17, 1890, in the eighty-third year of her age. Like a ripe shock of corn, she was ready for the gathering. Her Bible was with her the book of books. For many years it had been her pleasure to read, mark and ponder the sacred contents of each book and chapter every year. So it was, when other facts had faded out, the memory held on to the mere incidents of Bible narrative till the last. Mother was for more than seventy years a member of the Methodist Church. The last word to us was thrown back from 'the swelling of the Jordan;' its tone was of that perfect assurance which was hers in calm and storm—'Meet me in heaven.' Earth holds no dust more sacred than mother's. We shall meet her."

—Rev. Robert Randle writes from Homer, La.: "We are moving along smoothly in the church on this charge so far. Most of the members are law-abiding. The greatest difficulty that we have is, that most desire that some one else shall do the work and be responsible for the advancement of God's work among men, and hear the expenses of the same; but I trust there will be an improvement shortly. Pray for us—especially for workers and supporters. We have great excitement in this community caused by a feud between two old families—Tuggles and Ramseys. They have had two shooting scrapes: one last fall, in which one of the Tuggles was wounded and a man by the name of Williams was killed (Williams was standing on the street; had nothing to do with the difficulty), and another last Monday week, resulting in the killing of one of the Ramseys and wounding two of the Tuggles. The Ramsey family, it is said, will leave the country. I trust this will quiet the matter, and after two or three years of trouble our parish will be granted peace."

—A member writes from Vidalia, La.: "A protracted meeting closed in Vidalia, Tuesday, March 11, 1891. It is due to the energy of the pastor of the Methodist Church—Rev. J. J. Kelley—that the meetings have been a success. The meeting commenced last Saturday week, Feb. 28. Six accessions to the church. Assisted by J. H. Callaway, Vidalia circuit, Rev. M. L. Burton, of Natchez, conducted the services. On Tuesday a sermon on 'Temperance' was delivered, and on Wednesday 'Heaven' was the subject of his sermon. On Monday morning, 11 o'clock services, Rev. C. W. Crisler, of Washington, preached an interesting sermon on 'The Spirit of Prayer.' The spirit of prayer was with us; the Holy Spirit in our midst. The work of grace has begun in the hearts of the people. We trust to the promises of our Redeemer—'Lo! I am with thee even unto the end.'"

—Rev. J. W. Treadwell writes from Wagoner, I. T.: "I am now recovering from measles. Have been sick about ten days; but I feel much better this morning. We still have winter here, and it seemes to me that 'spring' will never come. The winds have been very severe this winter, though many have witnessed worse weather than any we have had. Not being used to such, it has been very trying on my health, and I have not been able to do much in the way of pastoral work. It will be April before I will be able to do much more; so you see we labor under difficulties that hinder our progress considerably. We receive some members nearly every time we preach, but are mostly those who have letters or have once belonged to the church. The people of Wagoner are very kind and hospitable and know how to nurse a sick preacher. I will write a long article on this section of country as soon as possible. I wish you success."

"Do It Heartily."

The proposition of my friend, to be one of ten to pay $100 each every year to send a missionary to Japan and keep him, has been definitely accepted by one person who is ready to pay his $100, whether anybody joins him or not. Others are favorably considering the matter, but have not yet decided. With fifty persons in the Meridian district able to do this, with, at least, a dozen in the Seashore, Woodville and Brandon districts, twenty in each the Brookhaven, Jackson and Vicksburg districts, why is there not a hearty response? I have received during this year for W. P. and H. M. Society:

From Greenville, $9; Grenada, $1 75; Macon, $2 50; Holly Springs, $5; Holly Springs (special), $5; Coldwater, $1 30; Lula, $2; Greenwood, $2 50; Carrollton, $10. Total, $39 05.

Let others send in at once. The money is needed now. Responses to Sister Hargrove's letter are coming in.

MRS. J. R. BINGHAM,
Conf. Treas.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

The Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference at its last session appropriated about $400 out of funds of 1891 to help, in the "nick of time," several struggling churches. The domand is upon us. What can an empty treasury do? I suggest that every preacher send in half of his assessment. Bee Lake station—Jas. G. Galloway, P. C.—has set a good example; paid the full assessment several weeks ago. Dr. Morton writes me to send on his half as speedily as possible. The Parent Board needs money. Don't forget to remit by postoffice order or bank check on Vicksburg, and mail same to me at Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss. THOS. A. HOLLOMAN, Treasurer.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Our Young People.

ONLY ONE MOTHER.

You have only one mother, my boy,
Whose heart you can gladden with joy,
Or cause it to ache
Till ready to break
So cherish that mother, my boy.

You have only one mother who will Stick to you through good and through ill.
And love you, although
The world is your foe—
So care for that love ever still.

You have only one mother to pray
That in the good path you may stay:
Who for you won't spare
Self-sacrifice rare—
So worship that mother alway.

You have only one mother to make
A home ever sweet for your sake,
Who toils day and night
For you with delight—
To help her, all pains ever take.

You have only one mother to miss
When she has departed from this,
So love and revere
That mother while here,
Some time you won't know her dear kiss.

You have only one mother, just one,
Remember that always, my son;
None can or will do
What she has for you.
What have you for her ever done?

Notice to the Boys.

Let every boy reader of the ADVOCATE read Ethelbert Galloway's account of his "first cigar," and then "go and do likewise." That is, get five cents from his mother and buy two cigars and sit down by mother's side and take a manly smoke. Nothing like being a man, especially where mother is. She takes special pride in seeing her boy manly. It will do her good to see you smoke your first cigar.

My First Cigar.

As I read in the St. Louis Advocate about Dr. Steel's "First and Last Cigar," I will now write a short account of my first, and, I hope, my last cigar. My father doesn't smoke; but when I saw other gentlemen smoking, I thought I would like to smoke, too, and be a big man. That was when I was eight years old. I am now eleven. I asked my mother for five cents, and I went down town and bought two cigars. My mother made me promise, if I ever smoked, I would smoke by her. So, taking a seat by her and lighting one of my cigars, I began to puff away. In a moment or two I got sick and wanted to quit. But the sicker I got the harder mother made me smoke. When I could stand it no longer I lay down on the floor of the back gallery and vomited and vomited until I thought I would nearly die. After a while mother carried me into the room and put me to bed, and there I stayed the rest of the day. I gave the other cigar to the colored man who was working for us, and determined I would never smoke again.

Your friend,

ETHELBERT H. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I have never seen a letter in the ADVOCATE from any of the children in this part of the country. It has induced me to write one. I am a boy sixteen years old. I am a member of the Methodist Church. I am living with my Uncle Jimmie. He takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and I enjoy reading the little folks' letters very much. Bro. Cunningham is our pastor. We all like him very much. I have but one pet, and that is a mule. As this is my first letter, I will close for fear it will be thrown into that waste-basket. I will ask the little folks a question: Where is it spoken of in the Bible where God came from? Your friend,

RUFUS HATAWAY.

Houlka, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. As I have not seen any letters from this part of the country, I thought I would write one. I enjoy reading the cousins' letters very much. I am anxious for the dear old ADVOCATE to come. I am going to school now. My teacher is Miss Laura Suttle. We all like her very much. My studies are spelling, arithmetic, geography and fifth reader. My papa is a preacher, and the Conference sent us back on the same work we were on last year. This makes our third year on this circuit. I haven't any pets except a baby brother, just one year old, and I think he is very sweet. As this is my first attempt, I will close, with best wishes for the ADVOCATE.

Your little friend,

EULA ROOK.

MR. EDITOR: I am a boy sixteen years of age. My papa takes your valuable paper, and I enjoy reading the children's letters very much. I also enjoy reading the fine poetry and other valuable reading. I am glad my papa takes your paper, for I could not well do without it. We are having considerable rain, which will make the roads miserable for us who live far from church; but it is the Lord's will, and I am glad it is as well as it is. I have been sick and have not had the opportunity of going to church this year, but I am well enough to go now, and think I will go soon. I live in Lafayette parish, two and a half miles from Duson station, and about seven miles from church. Our pastor this year is W. B. Pilley. I have been going to the public school; but it has stopped, and I am sorry of it. I will close, with wishes of much success for the dear ADVOCATE.

Yours truly,

PERCY HOFFPAUIR.

THE CANDLE FISH.—Of course, whenever it is night, people must have some sort of a light to see by. Among us, lamps, gas, and so on, are used. But what do you suppose people do where there is nothing of this kind? Why, in some places they use one thing; in others, another. In Alaska, and other far-away lands to the north, all they have to do is to set a candle fish on fire, and they have a good, clear light which will last more than an hour.

The candle fish is about ten inches long, and somewhat the shape of our slender smelt. It is very fat, and just the thing to make a lamp of. The natives fasten it in a rude kind of candlestick made of strips of white oak, and set it on fire. They light it at the head, and it burns steadily away, down to the very tail.

Of all the queer ways of making a light to read or sew by, I think this is the queerest. Nature seems to provide almost everything needed by the people in the place where they live. The candle fish is so oily that he can not be preserved even in alcohol. The nights at the far north are very long, and if it were not for this fish the people would be most of their time in entire darkness.—Our Little Ones.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Little Johnny's father had been elected commander of a Grand Army post, an honor of which he had good reason to be proud. Johnny could not conceal his exultation when he heard the news. "O papa, I'm so glad you've got to be a commander!" he said. "Thank you," said his father. "But can you tell me, my son, why you are so glad?" "'Cause you'll have soldiers at your funeral!" answered Johnny. —Harper's Young Folks.

Money saved is money made. Remember Salvation Oil, the great pain-cure. Only 25 cents.

Every little duty counts, no matter how small it is. A little boy having but a half-penny to put in the plate was desperately afraid it was too small to be counted. Imagine his joy when the minister read out, "Our collection to-day amounts to ten pounds and one-half penny."

WOMEN AS INVENTORS.—The steady increase of patents granted to women since scientific studies have been opened to them explains in part why inventions by that sex have been heretofore so rare. A list recently published gives the number of patents granted to women inventors by the U. S. government, from 1790 to July 1, 1888, as 2,300. After 1809 to 1815, only one patent was issued. From 1857, the number of women inventors increased rapidly. In 1870, the number was 60; in 1887, 179. If last year's list were published, it would show a still more rapid advance. And these inventions take a wide range, from mere household and dress inventions to railroad journal boxes and submarine telescopes. In addition to the better scope and invitation for inventive genius which wider knowledge gives, the more independent position of women now requires less moral courage on their part to apply for patents than would have been necessary at an earlier period.—Sara Underwood, in New England Magazine.

MAKE HOME A SCHOOL.—Make home an institution of learning. Provide books for the centre table and for the library of the family. See that all the younger children attend the best schools, and interest yourself in their studies. If they have the taste for thorough cultivation, but not the means to pursue it, if possible provide for a higher education. Daniel Webster taught at the intervals of his college course, to aid an elder brother in the pursuit of a classical education, and a volume of his works is dedicated to the daughters of that brother, who early closed a brilliant career. Feel that an ignorant brother or sister will be a disgrace to your family, and trust not to the casual influence of the press, existing institutions and the kind offices of strangers. If the family becomes, as it may be, an institution of learning, the whole land will be educated.

CONSCIENCE IN WORK.—Talents and skill tell for much, but conscience in work tells for more. The mechanic or the clerk who, beyond his stated salary, beyond even his obligations to his employer or the demands which public opinion could make upon him, exerts to make his work as perfect as he can, and delights in its thoroughness and excellence apart from any private benefit it can render him, has a value which can never be computed. It matters not what the work be, whether it be done with the spade of the laborer, the pen of the clerk, the brush of the artist, or the voice of the statesman. Such people are sought far and wide; there are places always open to them, and their services are always at a premium.

Everybody knows that at this season the blood is filled with impurities, the accumulation of months. All these impurities and every trace of scrofula, salt rheum, or other diseases may be expelled by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Be sure to get Hood's.

Observatory on Mt. Blanc.

HIGHEST SCIENTIFIC STATION IN THE WORLD.

The ascent of Mt. Blanc has always been regarded as one of the most fatiguing in the list of Alpine climbs. Many tourists anxious to make the trip have been deterred by the fact that there has been no refuge at the summit in which the Alpinist could rest before retracing his steps. Last summer J. Vallot, a member of the French Alpine Club, conceived the idea of constructing near the top of the mountain a building which could be used both as a shelter and as a scientific observatory.

When Vallot announced his plan of building a refuge on the summit, the idea was laughed at. It would be impossible, it was said, to engage in any kind of work at such an altitude. The originator of the idea expressed his willingness to demonstrate the incorrectness of this belief. He proceeded to pass three days and three nights at the mountain top. During the daytime he busied himself with scientific observations; at night he slept under a tent. The practicability of working at a high altitude had been proved, and Vallot received abundant assistance to carry his scheme into effect.

Plans of a small structure best adapted for withstanding high winds were drawn, and the building was constructed at Chamonnix. The house was then taken apart, and each timber marked properly, so that the parts could be put together readily on the mountain top. One hundred guides volunteered their services to carry the parts of the building to the point fixed upon as the site. The dismantled structure was tied up into 111 loads, and the work of transportation was begun. It was a tedious undertaking, carrying the cumbersome packages up the ascent. Three days were consumed in conveying each load to its destination. The work commenced on June 15, and on July 31 the last section of the building and the last of the ninety packages of scientific instruments had reached the site of the refuge observatory.

Six days before the last date Vallot selected five of the hardiest mountaineers as masons and carpenters, and set out for the mountain top to build the foundation. Two tents were set up for the temporary shelter of the party. The temperature was rather low for summer; the mercury dropped to nine degrees below zero at night, and did not rise much above zero at noon. The men were clothed in regulation Esquimaux costume, with hugh woolen gloves and heavy mountain caps. The style of dress was not conducive to rapid work, but the men labored vigorously from seven in the morning until seven at night. In two days the foundation was completed, and on the third the framework was in place, in spite of the persistent attempts of the wind to overthrow it. On the fourth day the last plank was nailed on the roof, and at night the workmen were able to sleep in a less windy chamber then their tent.

The work, however, was extremely exhausting in the rare atmosphere. At the end of the second day one of the men was disabled. He was given a few whiffs from the oxygen bag which Mr. Vallot had taken the precaution to include in his supplies, and recovered sufficiently to start down the mountain. The following day a second mountaineer was exhausted, and a third weakened on the third day.

Although the house was not entirely finished on the fourth day, it was thought inadvisable to remain longer on the summit, especially as the weather had become unfavorable. All hands, therefore, descended and took a brief rest. On August 31 the party reascended the mountain, accompanied this time by Mr. Vallot's wife, an enthusiastic Alpinist. The refuge was properly braced with masonry, and the finishing touches were added. Lightning rods were put in position, after which colors were flung to the breeze to celebrate the completion of the work.

The building is divided into two apartments, one designed for the use of travellers, and the other for scientific observers. The latter room is a private compartment. The public room is supplied with all the conveniences needed by the tired tourist. Nine beds are placed in the room, and a supply of provisions and of oil for light and fuel is always kept on hand. The observatory, which is said to be the highest in the world, is 14,350 feet above the sea level. It contains automatic registering devices and the most approved appliances for making scientific observations in high elevations.—New York Sun.

TALLEY—Died at his home, in Pinglown, Miss., Dec. 30, 1890, Mr. MORRIS H. TALLEY. He was born April 12, 1846; forty-four years, ten months and eighteen days measured his earthly career. He was married to Miss Emma Warren by Rev. G. T. Dickers in 1879. With her he lived in great happiness to the close of his life, and left her, with five precious little children, to mourn his loss. He joined the M. E. Church, South, when seventeen years of age, under the ministry of Rev. R. B. Downer. Loyalty and faithfulness marked his church life.

Bro. Talley was a Christian of deep piety and perfect consecration. He was very spiritual. He seemed to live in constant communion with God. He loved to sing and pray, and in moments of signal displays of the divine presence he would rejoice with a joy "full of glory." The simplicity and purity of Bro. Talley's character won the highest esteem from all who knew him. No one doubted his sincerity; all trusted and loved him. His influence was extensive, and was always exerted for the religious good of his fellow-creatures. He loved to talk of the love of Christ, and lead sinners to the cross.

The writer visited Bro. Talley a few hours before his death, and found him in a peaceful and happy experience. He said, in answer to a plain inquiry, that he felt the gracious presence of the Savior, and was ready to go if God willed it.

We sorely miss our dear Bro. Talley. His place will be filled with difficulty.

T. W. ADAMS.

FOSTER—CHRISTOPHER THOMAS FOSTER was born in Madisonville, Madison county, Miss., on Sept. 17, 1836, and died at his home, in Yazoo City, Jan. 19, 1891. It may be truly said of him, "Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile!"

He joined the Methodist Church when quite young, and lived an exemplary Christian, and died in the faith of the Gospel. When he was nearing the river he said to his family, "It is all right, all right; but I would rather stay with my children a little longer." He leaves an afflicted companion, five children (two sons and three daughters), also three sisters; but we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we know in whom he trusted. What a change!—from toil and care to a home in that "sinless summerland!" God said, "It is enough; come up higher." Grieve not, dear ones; but let us look forward to the happy future, when we shall greet him on the banks of sweet deliverance and worship our blessed Savior together to all eternity.

His sister, E. A. COLTON.

Yazoo City Herald please copy.

BAILEY—Bro. JOHN W. BAILEY, JR., was born May 2, 1853, and died Jan. 21, 1891. Bro. Bailey professed religion Aug. 18, 1867; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Sweet Water, on Black Hawk circuit, North Mississippi Conference, and from the day of his conversion until death took him from us he showed to the world that he was walking in newness of life. He was married to Miss J. V. Smith, of Yazoo county, Miss., Feb. 23, 1888. He leaves behind his devoted wife and two sweet little children to mourn his loss.

He was a true man. No better man in all these parts than John Bailey. Everybody loved him, and none knew him but to admire his Christian integrity. He was a kind and loving husband, devoted to his children. He was a dutiful son, a No. 1 citizen, a staunch church member and a transparent Christian. I hope to meet him beyond the last river. May the good Lord bless and comfort his loved ones!

B. F. PHILLIPS.

HUNTER—We buried Mrs. ANNIE E. HUNTER—widow of Oscar F. Hunter, and oldest daughter of Rev. Geo. Bancroft—beside her husband in the Mt. Lemore Cemetery, Meridian, Miss., on Sunday, Feb. 15, 1891. She had been in bad health for some time. Having been piously reared, and having attached herself to the Methodist Church in early youth, she was perfectly ready for the summons of the Master. Her death was almost painless. Her breathing became weaker and weaker until it finally ceased. A father and mother, two children and brothers and sisters mourn her loss, but rejoice in her Christian life and peaceful death. C. G. ANDREWS.

BIRDSONG—Bro. JOE J. BIRDSONG was born in Hinds county, Miss., on June 11, 1849, and departed this life on Jan. 18, 1891. On April 14, 1870, he was married to Miss Anna E. Birdsong. In 1874, under the ministry of Rev. W. E. Ballard, he joined the M. E. Church, South, in which he lived till called away.

Bro. Birdsong possessed many of the elements of true manhood. His life was full of sunshine, which made him a delightful companion, and the favorite of all. He was a friend to all, and all were friends to him. It was said by both white and black, "Mr. Birdsong hadn't an enemy on earth." He was a devoted husband and an affectionate father.

He was confined to his room for only a few days with la grippe, from which his death resulted. During these few days of illness he talked freely with his wife about dying. Only a day or so before his death he asked her to forgive him for any sorrow that he might have caused her, and, when assured of her forgiveness, said, "If you are willing to forgive me, don't you think God will forgive me all the wrongs that I have done, if I ask him aright?" After this he was often heard, during the still hours of the night, praying to his heavenly Father. And the last conscious act of his life was a request for us to pray for him. After which he passed away as gently as a setting sun.

Bro. Birdsong leaves behind him a wife, five children and a host of friends to mourn his departure.

L. S. JONES, P. C.

MORE—LUCIEN MORE was born Nov. 13, 1884, and departed this life Nov. 20, 1890. Little Lucien was the youngest member of the family and the sunshine of the household. I have never seen a child so perfectly enthroned in the affections of an entire family as he was. His father having died a few years ago, he seemed to fill up the void. He was the object upon which each member of the family lavished a wealth of affection. Little Lucien was a bright, amiable, sweet-spirited child, gaining at once the esteem and love of all who knew him. He was as pure as the morning dew, and before sin had marred the beauty of his life, and brushed the light of innocency from his face, God took him to the beautiful mansions above, to live with him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

He drew every member of the family close to him by the beautiful life he lived. When he died he attracted them all heavenward. Gathered around his little icy-cold body, they all promised to meet little brother who has gone to be with papa and the Savior, in the home of many mansions. May the God of all grace comfort the hearts bereaved! L. S. JONES.

BUIE—EUGENE WAYLAND BUIE, son of M. L. and B. H. Buie, was born in St. Landry parish, La., June 19, 1872, and died, of typhoid fever, at his parents' home, near Crystal Springs, Miss., Dec. 22, 1890.

He was a quiet, unobtrusive boy, who loved his home, and stayed at it so closely that his parents would sometimes urge him to mingle with his young friends more. He was known among them as a good, quiet young man, though he had made no public profession of religion. After his death there was found written in his little day-book this sentence, "God, I love thee." He was not afraid to die, and when the end was near he listened, with a peaceful, smiling countenance, while his parents talked to him of death, and uttered no word of regret that he was called so early to meet the God he loved. F. M. GIBBS.

ANDERSON—Died of congestion, on Jan. 15, 1891, OPHELIA A. ANDERSON, daughter of John N. and Jennie Anderson. She has entered the gate of life. Fortunate girl! secure in the love of Jesus throughout the unwasting ages of eternity. How sad to contemplate the death of one so young, so full of promise and hope! Her friends, schoolmates and teacher sadly miss her. It was hard for the fond parents to give her up. We deeply condole with you upon your loss. Memory will cherish every recollection of the past associated with her. You will cherish her memory and send up grateful thanks that you had such a child who, during her short stay upon earth, wove the tender cords of love which will ever bind you to her and God.

FRIEND.

Advertising is a gear in the machine of a well-regulated store. It can not sell the goods itself; it only delivers the customer, as it were.—Milford (Mass.) Journal.

A specious orator addressed,
A mob by hungry need oppressed,
And when his say was said;
Then cried these people, lean and gaunt,
It isn't logic that we want,
But bread: O give us bread.

If you are sick, you want facts, not argument. Here are facts:

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN meet you on just that basis. They have cured thousands of invalids with their Compound Oxygen Treatment, and they all gratefully admit it. Among the men and women who so heartily endorse this treatment are many well-known throughout the United States: Mrs. Mary A. Livermore states her experience with the Compound Oxygen Treatment. The late T. S. Arthur, and Hon. Judge Kelley tell what it has done for them. So do Bishop Benade, Bishop Castle, and other eminent divines. Many reputable physicians add their testimony. The book is worth reading. You get genuine encouragement from its pages, because the patients themselves do the talking, and every piece of evidence conoludes with the name and address of the witness. Send for the book; it will be forwarded free of charge to anyone addressing Drs. Starkey & Palen, No. 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

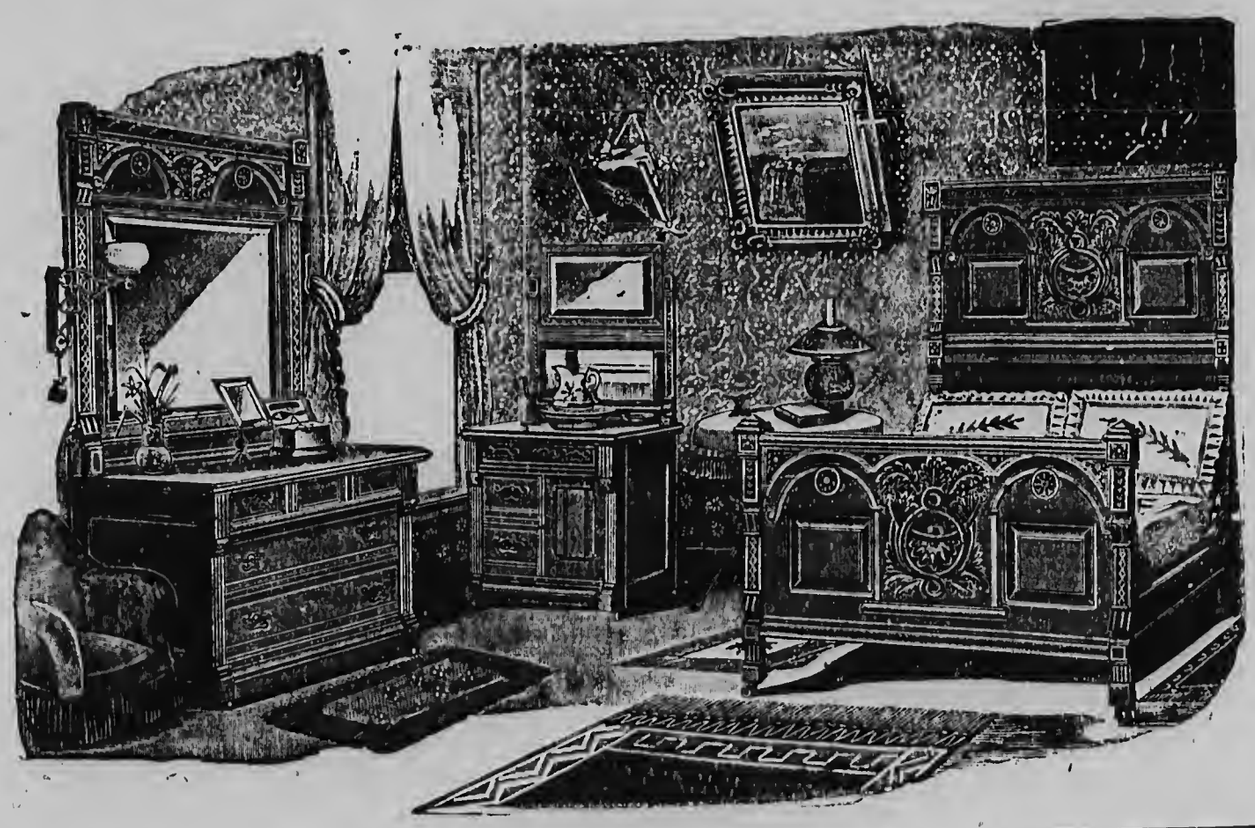
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

JNO. A. MILLER, P. E.

For croup and whooping cough, mothers try Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, used internally.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never stops off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

A fresh boom has been started in New York for the Grant Monument Fund. The foundations are to be laid April 27, and on May 2 there is to be a grand concert in aid of the fund.

In the California Assembly, last week, the Anti-Chinese bill passed by a vote of 49 to 5. It provides for the issuance of certificates of residence to Chinese now in the State and the exclusion of all others. The bill has already passed the Senate.

On the 26th instant the Yellow Pine Lumber Association of Alabama, Florida and Mississippi will hold a meeting at the Exchange Hotel, in Montgomery, Ala. The attendance, doubtless, will be large, as matters of much importance will come up for discussion.

The wedding of Miss Nannie Bayard, youngest daughter of ex-Secretary of State Bayard, to Count Lewenhaupt, of Sweden, is announced to take place early in April. Count Lowenhaupt is the oldest son and heir to the extensive estate of the Lewenhaupt family of Sweden.

Since Senator Walthall has declined to be a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate from Mississippi, ex-Gov. Lowry has received numerous telegrams, letters and personal importunities from various portions of the State, urgently requesting him to be a candidate to succeed Gen. Walthall.

The four delegates sent to this country by Mr. Parnell arrived in New York City on March 15. They were met by a reception committee, and an address of welcome was presented. The Parnellites responded severally, hoping, they said, that their mission of getting cash for Parnell and his men might be successful.

The Davey Electric Suspension Company, recently incorporated in Illinois with a capital stock of $10,000,000, proposes to revolutionize the passenger and freight carrying business. They propose to construct roads of a single rail placed some distance above the ground, from which the cars are to be supended much after the style of the cash delivery devices in stores. The propelling power will be electricity.

The killing of the Italians accused of the murder of Hennessy, which occurred in this city last week, has called forth vigorous protests from Italian societies in many places, who do not seem to realize that the movement was against assassins, and not Italians as a race. The Italian government has taken prompt action, and, in consequence of a spirited correspondence, Secretary Blaine demands of the State authorities the protection of Italians and the prosecution of the leaders in the late uprising.

FOREIGN.

There has been a double overflow of the Danube. The town of Duna-Foldvar is inundated, together with the neighboring country. Over 800 houses are submerged. Numbers of people have been drowned and a large quantity of cattle have perished. Provisions and troops to assist in the work of rescue have been sent to the aid of the distressed people of Duna-Foldvar.

Mr. Parnell, who has all along displayed energy and activity which has not been equalled by his opponents, has issued a manifesto to Irishmen in this country, in which he reviews the causes which led up to the unfortunate split in the ranks of the Home Rulers, expresses his confidence in the adherence of Irish-Americans, and applies to them for moral and financial support in his task of stamping out "mutiny and disloyalty in Ireland."

While the rebels in Chili have apparently the smallest numerical force, the balance of success seems to have so far been strongly in their favor, they having been successful in nearly all the engagements which have taken place. All the vessels of the Chilian navy have joined them, which enables their forces to completely cut off the government from supplies from foreign countries. The blockade prevents the exportation of products, and consequently shuts off the revenue of the government.

A renewal of the friendly relations between the Emperor and Prince Bismarck approaches a certainty. The Emperor will visit Kell at the end of the month, and he will proceed thence to Altona, where he will review the Ninth Army Corps, which is commanded by General Count Von Waldersee. General Von Waldersee, on the occasion of his recent visit to Friedrichsruhe, conveyed a request from the Emperor to meet Prince Bismarck at Altona. Prince Bismarck has not yet given his assent to a resumption of direct communication with the Emperor. His delay in responding appears to be due to a determination to assure himself as to how the Emperor is likely soon to stand towards the leading statesmen who are the probable successors of the present ministry.

PASTOR'S BOOK—NOW READY.

Messrs. Shaw & Blaylock:

The J. T. L. Annis Pastor's Book has just reached me. I can not commend it too highly to Pastors. In revising it has been brought to a high degree of perfection. No Methodist Pastor should be without it. I am thankful for such a book.

Respectfully, T. L. ADAMS.

The above book, revised and enlarged, can be bought only from the undersigned. Price, postage paid, 50 cents per copy.

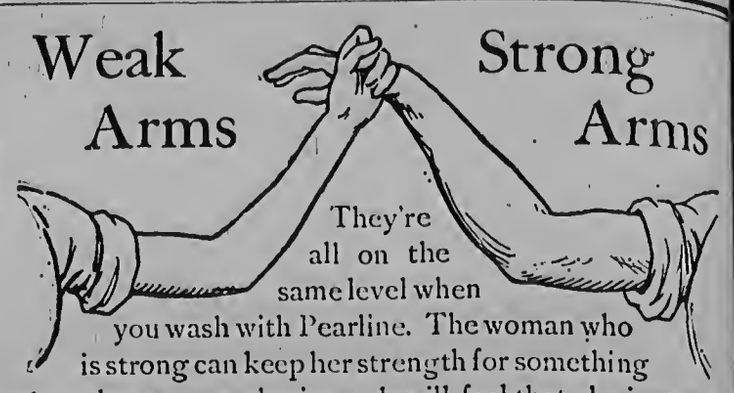
Weak Arms Strong Arms



They're all on the same level when you wash with Pearline. The woman who is strong can keep her strength for something else; the woman who is weak will feel that she is strong. It isn't the woman that does the work—it's PEARLINE.

So it is with the clothes. They needn't be strong. The finest things fare as well as the coarsest. They all last longer, for they're saved the rubbing that wears them out. Work was never so easy—never so well done. And safe, too. Nothing that is washable was ever hurt by Pearline. If it were otherwise—do you think we would continue to sell enough Pearline yearly to supply every family in the land with several packages.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled. 182 JAMES PYLE, New York.

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. The Young Preacher—No. 9.

BY AN OLD MINISTER.

BEARING AND DEPORTMENT.

Deportment is something to all, and rly all to some. Dickens makes old Turveytop say that his Most Excel- t Majesty, George IV., the first gen- man in Christendom, was an illus- ous exponent of deportment; but t, since his Majesty's lamented th, that great personal and social ellenee had suffered a sad deca- ce. However, he humbly hoped he done what he could to uphold and ain deportment. Mr. Turveytop nothing else. He did no work, paid no bills. Deportment was sole business. There are some ple always in a high state of behav- ; and when this element is elimi- ed, there is scarce any residuum. is is, doubtless, an overestimate of claims and sufficiency of deport- nt; but it has its place in the make- of a character, and its value in so- and public life. We have seen ne who, in revolt from extreme de- ion to deportment, or from a misap- hension of the nature of true dig- and legitimate independence, have gined that curtness, and a certain gh boorishness, was the true ideal anner. I have sometimes thought certain preachers have thought their office exempted them from claims of graceful and agreeable ortment. They could not have e a greater mistake. While a min- should never appear to be an ex- ite, or a dandy, he should not be a n in dress or manners. Always be t in person and dress; and, while ere, easy and affable in manner, eciful to the aged and superiors, t courteous and gracious to the ng and obscure. A little gracious bility and sympathy will go a long s toward ingratiating you in their ly regards; will give you an influ- with and over them, which you utilize for the glory of the Master. our social life you will meet a large ety of characters. Many of these have little power to interest you; see to it you interest them in you. en to their lowly talk; take inter- in their little affairs and details. sort of sympathy will win their d-will, and give you power with for good. In all you do, be king to save." Ask yourself, How I win these people, that I may lead Christward and heavenward? It be useful to read some good work, orks, on manners and social pro- ties. There are a number of such. ve read some five or six, and I be- tboy have been helpful to me.

ou are not only to be a social man, to exert a gracious social influence; from your office you are to be—to e extent, at least—a leader of men. our various appointments on cir- , in stations, or on districts, you to administer the government of church, to preside in ecclesiastical rts, to preside over societies, and the chair and the lead in various lic movements—educational, chari- e, and religious. In these various tions your success will not depend e upon superior knowledge and in tactics, but largely upon the good-will and kindly feelings you may inspire. Macaulay says that wise statesmen have not been ostentatious in the display of their power. They have let the people see and feel, as little as possible, the iron hand of power; they have smoothed and softened it with a silken glove. I knew a minister once, and he was one of the wisest of men. He never seemed, abruptly and squarely, to antagonize the views and wishes of others. He gave others credit for intelligence and candor, and was so considerate and conciliatory that he offended no one. He really seemed to oppose no one; but he generally had his own way, and successfully carried his points.

There are but few of us who fully appreciate the power of gentleness and love. Men, as a rule, can be persuaded easier than they can be commanded; can be led more successfully than driven. In your various leaderships have these points in view, and let them influence all your ruling. Stern, naked, inexorable power is to be the last resort, necessitated by conditions nothing less can control.

God is omnipotent, and all things with him are possible; but, in seeking to recover the strayed and alienated affections of men, he chose love as the most efficient weapon in all the armory of infinite resources. With truth and love he carries on the holy war, and will until he conquers a universal peace, and all the earth is filled with his glory.

The Easter Festival.

Easter is kept in memory of the resurrection of Christ. It is an annual and a movable festival, for the reason that it may occur at any time from March 21 to April 25. It is governed by the moon, and not by the days of our year. Among all Gentile Christians, Easter Sunday is always the Sunday following the first full moon after March 21—the time of the vernal equinox. This year Easter comes early. The moon fulls on Wednesday, March 25, early in the morning, and so Sunday, March 29, will be Easter Sunday.

We have no reason to believe that the disciples of Christ, nor Christian people generally, in the earliest years of the church, observed the Easter festival as we do now. Indeed, they were so intent on other things, and often so persecuted, that they had neither time nor heart for feasts, and times and days as we have now. It would be unreasonable to suppose that they forgot the resurrection of Christ, or that they did not think of it more, and, perhaps, spoke of it more frequently, when the anniversary of that grandest of events rolled around. In this way, possibly, the observance of Easter grew up in the church in the early centuries of the Christian era. It is a custom, and not an institution; a season, and not a time, set by divine appointment. We are under no obligation whatever to observe this festival, and yet it is a good time to meditate, specially and deeply, on the resurrection of Christ, and to worship and adore our risen Lord.

Man seems to have an instinct for days, seasons, set times and great occasions, such as birthdays, holidays, holy days, and anniversaries of all sorts of things. It is, perhaps, well enough to gratify this instinct within reasonable limits. In this, however, as well as in everything else connected with our poor, fallen natures, there is an innate tendency to run into excess, and to magnify the day, or the season, above the event it was intended to commemorate. In this way some ancient Christian festivals, that had a good beginning and a good design, have been prostituted to purposes of evil. In just this way the Sabbath of the Lord our God—a divinely appointed institution for all time and for all men—has been profaned. This need not be so, and ought not be so, and would not be if we kept our minds steadily fixed on the things, the great events, commemorated.

For many long years past the writer has made a habit of reading, every Easter, everything said in the Bible concerning the resurrection of Christ—the intimations of prophecy, the fuller utterance of Christ himself, the full and clear statement of the fact by all four of the evangelists, the testimony and preaching of the apostles, and the powerful arguments of Paul. I learn something new every year. The history of his forty days' stay on earth after his resurrection is full of inspiration, of suggestion, of devotion.

Last Easter, very early in the morning, "as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week," I was reading Matthew xxviii, 1-10. The season and the hour gave emphasis to the words, "began to dawn toward the first day of the week." I paused and fell to musing in that quiet hour and dim light. What a day-dawn and what a sunrise they had that morning! I thought I could see those devout women coming in the darkness to embalm the body of the Lord. They had had, at least, two days and two nights of sorrow—nights black as Egyptian darkness itself. It had "begun to dawn toward day." I was glad for them. It was light enough for them to see the sepulchre, the stone rolled away, the open door, and that their Lord was absent. It grew brighter as they saw the angel and heard his words of assurance: "He is not here: for he is risen, as he said." They looked at the place where the Lord lay. I thought the sun rose in full-orbed splendor that first day of the week as the angel said: "Go quickly, and tell his disciples he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him." I could see those women as they ran, full of fear, and yet clapping their hands for joy. I thought I could hear them saying, as they ran: "He is risen, he is risen! Galilee! We shall see him, we shall see him!" Ah! that sunrise, bless God, had healing in its wings. The Sun of Righteousness arose that morning to go down no more.

I do not wonder that Christians call it the "first day of the week." It is the first day of everything good in this world and in the world to come. It is the first day of light, of hope, of faith, of immortality, and of endless felicity. On this "first day of the week" we keep the anniversary of the ruin of death, the victory over the grave, the leading of captivity captive, and of the bringing of life and immortality to light.

The body of our Lord did not need embalming then, and his body does not now, but his work does; and on this Easter Sunday we might bring our gifts early in the morning, "as it begins to dawn toward the first day of the week," and put them into the treasury, that they may help in spreading the glorious news, "The Lord is risen, indeed." This will be a sanctified celebration of this festival.

Letter from China.

For many years the Felicity Street Methodist Sunday-school, in this city, has been assisting our Sunday-school work in China. The school sends its contribution annually. Below is a letter from Dr. Allen to N. B. Sligh, the superintendent of Felicity Sunday-school, acknowledging the receipt of this year's contribution.

Anglo-Chinese College,
Shanghai, China, Feb. 11, 1891.

N. B. Sligh, Esq., Sup't Felicity Sunday-school—

Dear Sir and Brother: By the mail of yesterday I am in receipt of a note from W. F. Booth, San Francisco, enclosing draft for $164.30, being amount realized from sale of $137.21 received from Rev. John T. Sawyer, pastor Felicity, with instructions to acknowledge same to you, which I do most cheerfully at once, with many thanks for this annual remembrance.

For a long period of years Felicity Street Sunday-school has been identified with our China Mission work, and, by their contributions, helped to sustain and promote a most promising feature of our great enterprise. At present their funds are directed to the education of the sons of native preachers and children of Christian families in our Anglo-Chinese College. And I hope soon that some of these boys will be able, of themselves, to report to you as to their progress and their future prospects, etc.

We are trying very hard to place our native Christians on a firm basis, and inspire in them the courage and spirit of Christian connection and aggressiveness. These boys will soon be in responsible positions, and have much to do with the impending developments here; and, above all, we are striving to prepare them to be strong Christian characters.

Your help has always been most grateful and useful; and, though it takes years to bring to light and fruitage the seed sown now, yet we labor in faith, waiting, as the husbandman, in long patience for the coming harvest. We have to labor and pray and wait; but we do it cheerfully, knowing that the time is coming when results will vindicate our labors and justify our patience of faith and hope.

Pardon only a line at this writing, as I can only make hasty acknowledgment by outgoing mail.

Accompanying, I send you specimen copies of two of our Chinese periodicals—one the review of the times, and the other a missionary review. The latter might be useful to those who work among the Chinese in New Orleans, and I shall be exceedingly obliged if you place them in the hands of some one who may be induced to subscribe and receive the papers regularly. Terms—United States currency—$1 per annum, including postage, or ten cents per copy. Perhaps some of your bright boys might like to undertake such an agency. If so, a liberal discount will be allowed on his sales—say, 25 per cent.

Yours in haste, but most sincerely,
YOUNG J. ALLEN.

P. S.—Please remember me most gratefully to the members of the Sunday-school.

Jackson, Miss., and the College.

The Millsaps Methodist College is located at last, and Jackson, Miss., is the fortunate and successful place? The interest has been great, and the tension and strain strong in all parts of Mississippi for more than a year past. The spirit of competition, if not of rivalry—at least, the spirit of emulation—has been high between the several places bidding for the location. Questions of this kind always stir feeling, and often bad blood; but when they are settled by the regularly constituted authority, the people generally acquiesce in the decision. It will soon be so this time. The North Mississippi Conference wanted the college located within her territory, and the Mississippi Conference wanted it in hers. It could be located in but one. Our people in all parts of Mississippi were fully agreed as to the necessity of an institution of this kind. They agreed on raising an endowment fund of one hundred thousand dollars the first thing. They did this cheerfully, and out of pure love to the Lord and his cause. They agreed to leave the matter of location to a future time, and to the Board of Trustees, composed of an equal number of picked men from the two Conferences; and this Board, after considering all the facts, have located the college at Jackson. What they have done, they have done as the representatives of the two Conferences, and their action is the act of the bodies they represent.

It now remains for our people in all parts of Mississippi to concentrate all their energy and their efforts to make this college what it was originally intended to be. This can be done by the united and hearty co-operation of all our people. We are able to do this thing if we will try to do it. In order to do this, it becomes us, as Christian men, to lay aside all our local prejudices and preferences, and lay our shoulders to the wheel and push manfully.

There are many very weighty reasons why this college should have been located at Jackson. It may be well to name some of them. It is the capital of the State, and will be for all time to come. This makes Jackson a center. It has the advantage of all other points in Mississippi in the matter of railroad connections, and these will increase as the years go by. It has an intelligent, refined citizenship—a people who will appreciate and support an institution of this kind. The Legislature, composed of picked men from all over the State, will convene here biennially to make laws for the people—no mean item in toning up boys for future usefulness. Maj. Millsaps, the largest contributor to the endowment fund, and the most distinguished patron of this school, lives here. It is the home of Bishop Galloway, the president of the Board of Trustees—the man to whom, more than to any other, we are indebted for the zeal and labor that has brought about this grand result. Here the Supreme Court sits. In a word, more able and distinguished men congregate at Jackson than in any other town in the State. It is a great thing for boys and young men to rub up against great men during the formative period of their lives. It helps to tone up the spirit of manhood in them.

There are but two objections to Jackson, so far as I know, or have heard. First, it is said to be too far south. Well, it is north of Centenary, of Brookhaven, Whitworth, of some colleges in Texas, and it is not far south of the Southern University and of Wofford College. We are building schools and colleges hundreds and hundreds of miles south of Jackson, Miss. Jackson is north of the South Pole, and a long ways north of the equator. The extreme south needs colleges as much as the north. Second, there is a prejudice against Jackson in the public mind, mainly on political grounds. It has been justly, or unjustly, considered the head-center of political rings and cliques, just as each county site is supposed to be the center and source of county and court-house cliques and rings. Much of this is, I suppose, pure "humbug," as it has been in the several shire towns where I have lived. If this statement be true, the more Jackson is lavened by the good people from all sections, the better it will be for the State.

There is nothing more unreasonable, or unreasoning, than the prejudices of people. Much of this is only a notion, a whim, alike unworthy of our patriotism and our State pride. I did not want the school located at Jackson, nor anywhere south of Durant; but now that it has been done, I think better of Jackson, as a location for a Mississippi Methodist college, than I have ever done.

Jackson is the place. It is now my choice, and I am heartily in favor of it, and I am in, heart and soul, for making this college the pride and glory of our Methodist people from the Gulf coast to the Tennessee State line. It was located at Jackson by my representatives, among the wisest and best men in my Conference; and I am in favor of standing firm by the original agreement. My honor and my religion both dictate this course.

The Location of Millsaps College.

The battle has been fought for the location of our college, and the victory won by the friends of Jackson, Miss.; and there is nothing left for those to do who preferred some other place but to accept the situation like true men and loyal Methodists. We accepted the contest, and it was won fairly, and we can not afford to go back on our pledges of good faith. As the cloud of battle clears away, we will all soon see many reasons why the majority of the Board of Trustees voted for the location at Jackson. I have felt, all the while, that, other things being equal, the college ought to be located at the home of Maj. Millsaps and Bishop Galloway, who have done more for this enterprise than all the other Methodists of the State. While the friends of Jackson did not press this claim, it was, nevertheless, entitled to a consideration. The question is now settled, and no friend of education and Methodism should say or do anything which would impede the progress of our Methodist college.

It is certainly the desire of every Methodist in the State of Mississippi to see this institution of learning loom up at the capital of our State until it eclipses all others, and becomes the pride of every Methodist in the State. We could not all have our choice in the location, and Jackson won by receiving a majority of the votes cast, just as any one of the other places would have won if it could.

Millsaps College.

MR. EDITOR: Millsaps College is located. Seventeen true men did it. Is it not a philosophy of beauty, of peace, of harmony, of brotherhood, and the essential step toward marked success to acquiesce? My opposition to the place selected was honest and earnest. Now my soul shall be in the work of aiding this God-given enterprise at the capital of our splendid commonwealth. Two or three of our good towns in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference were able to seize the prize. That they (one of them) did not do it is strange to us. The institution is worth fifty thousand dollars to any town. All had a fair chance. Now is the time for every Methodist and friend to Methodism to freshly anoint his or her head, and industriously and liberally press the laudable cause—Christian education—in our prosperous State. Next to preaching, it is the nearest and cheapest way of molding childhood into noble, worthy, Christian citizenship. Let nobody feel that injustice has been done in locating the college; neither censure any party, nor act as a disheartened, paralyzed, conquered one. The contest of locating the college is over. Our homes are smiling with the same plenty; our productive lands are yet inviting us to do our duty, and, by the righteous law of expenditure and service, partake of their rich yield. The boys in our midst—in the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference—need to be educated in schools dedicated to God. They are ruining for the want of it. Who can refuse to give generously his or her money to make men of these, and faithfully assist in bringing them up to be gentlemen after the Bible pattern? Some of these boys are your sons, or associates of your sons, or will be husbands of your daughters. The Lord save us by word, act, or pennrious withholding, from discouraging or impeding his cause, hiding the golden wedge and Babylonish garments!

I suggest that we raise a Robert Paine-Mitchell fund, endowing a chair in Millsaps College. Bro. Mitchell was pure, efficient, consecrated and deeply interested in a religious college of this sort in the State of his nativity, love, and fruitful labor. He was worthy of this honor and imperishable memory.

Millsaps College Located.

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College met in the city of Winona, on Wednesday, March 18, to decide the important question of the location of the institution. Bishop Galloway presided, and all of the members were present except Dr. J. J. Wheat, who was sick at his home in Sardis. After calling the Board to order, Bishop Galloway announced that the family of the late Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall had presented to the college his large and valuable library. On motion, the following resolutions, prepared by Dr. C. G. Andrews and Rev. R. M. Standifer, were adopted, and the secretary ordered to forward a copy of the same to the family of Dr. Marshall:

Resolved by the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College:

That we accept, with very great pleasure, the tender, by his family, of the library of the late Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg.

That we esteem the contribution of so many and so well-selected volumes as a most valuable possession; and that, in addition to this, we regard it as a most favorable omen that this nucleus of our library should have been formed by Dr. Marshall, who himself was so liberal a patron of learning, and so distinguished in Church and State as an eminent citizen and eloquent divine.

That we express to the family of Dr. Marshall our sincere thanks for their timely and valuable gift, and that we beg to tender to them our heartfelt sympathy in their deep bereavement.

A delegation of the leading citizens of Durant was introduced to the Board, and offered a liberal subscription of money and lands to secure the location of the college at that point. The Board then went into executive session, and proceeded to ballot for the location, Dr. Wheat's vote being cast by the secretary in accordance with his wishes, as indicated by a letter from him. The vote resulted in the selection of Jackson by a good majority, and, upon motion, the selection was made unanimous. Several committees, including an Executive and a Building Committee, were then appointed, steps were taken to vigorously push forward the work, and the Board adjourned to meet at the call of the president.

The necessity for active, willing labor upon the part of every Methodist in the State is evident to all. Energy and zeal are essential to success. The endowment notes, past due and yet unpaid, ought to be taken up. Old subscriptions ought to be converted into notes, and new contributions made. Many have never yet contributed to the fund.

The scholarships present opportunities and obligations to our people, and a plea for Christian education invites every preacher.

A tremendous responsibility has been thrust upon this generation of the Methodists of Mississippi, and the character of the future will depend upon the achievements of the present.

The "Clara Chrisman scholarship" grows apace. The writer preached in Brookhaven on Sunday last, and took up a collection amounting to $82.25.

What of the "C. K. Marshall scholarship"? What of the "T. A. S. Adams"? What of that host of unnamed scholarships that shall one day be placed upon the list as memorials of the dead and expressions of the loyalty of the living? Let the people answer.

"ALIVE FOR EVERMORE."

BY C. WESLEY.

Christ the Lord is risen today!
Sons of men and angels say!
Raise your joys and triumphs high!
Sing ye heavens—thou earth, reply.

Love's redeeming work is done—
Fought the fight, the battle won:
Lo! the sun's eclipse is over,
Lo! he sets in blood no more.

Vain the stone, the watch, the seal—
Christ hath burst the gates of hell!
Death in vain forbids his rise:
Christ hath opened Paradise.

Lives again our glorious King!
"Where, O death! is now thy sting!"
Once he died our souls to save,
"Where's thy victory, boasting grave!"

Soar we now where Christ has led,
Foll'wing our exalted Head!
Made like him, like him we rise—
Ours the cross, the grave, the skies.

In Memoriam.

DR. JOHN W. BAKER.

I did not know until the issue of the ADVOCATE, of March 5, that my friend and brother, Dr. Baker, was dead; and, as I was his pastor for two years and knew him well, I beg a little space to say something of him. The custom is too prevalent to heap extravagant eulogies upon the name of almost anyone after death; but the name of John W. Baker will not receive its full deserts until the last trump rings out long and loud and clear, and the teeming millions of earth are arraigned at God's flaming bar, and the invitation is given, "Enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

He was the embodiment of truth and honor; above suspicion by anyone. He would "swear to his own hurt and change not, and in his presence a vile person was contemned, neither did he backbite with his tongue." He was very affable, and his associates were readily drawn to him, feeling that they were with a friend and a companion. I think he was the most thoughtful, polite and attentive man to his guests that I ever knew. Not stiff and assumed, but easy and natural. One about him could not don an overcoat or a duster nor mount a horse without the offer of assistance. These are small things to note, but aid in the elucidation of a beautiful character.

But the crowning characteristic of this good man's life was his faith in God and devotion to his cause. Nothing preventing, he was always in his seat in church, and with him at home or along the public highway his conversation was, in the main, upon the subject of religion, always expressing the greatest solicitude for the good cause, and particularly that of his own congregation. How I did love him and his model family, and enjoy their hospitality!

In September, I believe, his darling Bessie died and was laid away in the orchard near the old home. My first call after her death, I remarked, on meeting the Doctor: "I was so much surprised to hear of little Bessie's death;" to which he replied, trembling and his eyes blinded by tears, "I do not see how I can live without her." Now he is not living without her. They have crossed over the river and are forever at rest.

[Dr. Baker was converted in a little "wayside church," near Winnsboro, La., while the writer was preaching a "dedication sermon." There have never been many such men in our church as he was.—EDITOR.]

Mrs. Mary A. E. Hurst.

The light has gone out of another Methodist parsonage. Another itineraut is left desolate amid his motherless babes. The presence of his wife constitutes the only home element ever known to a Methodist itinerant; and when that wife is taken away, how dreadfully homeless he becomes! Such is the bitter experience of our beloved brother, the Rev. W. W. Hurst, of Percy's Creek station, Mississippi Conference.

Mary A. E. Carr was born in Simpson county, Miss., October 2, 1842; was reared in the same county, and, on August 13, 1863, became Mrs. W. W. Hurst. For twenty-seven years she shared the cares and joys, delights and toils, of a Methodist itinerant. Bishop Galloway has very truly said that it requires more heroism to be the itinerant's wife, "to tarry by the stuff," economize that the meagre salary may suffice, rear and train the almost fatherless children, and endure the loneliness of her husband's frequent absences, than to be the itinerant himself.

The woman who patiently and successfully does all of these things for twenty-seven consecutive years, especially the last twenty-seven, covering part of the dark war period, and all of that darker period immediately succeeding the war, deserves to be ranked among the noblest heroines of human history. It is there that the God of infinite wisdom and impartial justice places her. While conducting a revival for Bro. Hurst last summer, I was the guest of Sister Hurst for more than a week. I found her wide awake and keenly alive to all the multifarious duties of motherhood, wifehood, neighbor, hostess and pastor's helpmeet—a model wife of a Methodist itinerant. What more honorable may be said of any woman?

At 9:30 A. M., on Jan. 22, 1891, after a brief illness, not supposed to be alarming, she passed to the skies, and to the crown awaiting so faithful a follower of the blessed Master. The neighbors gathered in the church next day, where a memorial service was held, after which we laid her away in the beautiful "God's acre" under the trees, where the birds sing all the summer long, and the violets bloom. There beside her lies the sacred dust of the gifted "Invalid," who, like herself, went from the field of duty as an itinerant's wife to the fields of glory as a crowned heroine. The "little flock" at Percy's Creek have, as a sacred charge, two graves of monumental interest, and the heritage of beautiful memories which cluster about them.

The widowed itinerant and his motherless boys and the almost baby girl, though so lonely, have the consolations of a Christian's faith and hope which point away over the rainbows which span the river of death to a land and a life supernal in beauty, nightless, painless, graveless, where the glorified wife and mother is "watching and waiting for them."

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

To Rev. W. M. Stevens.

Dear Brother: Your correction of the Minutes has been duly noted.

Your presiding elder wrote, under date of Nov. 25, 1890, "South Warren assessed for P. C., $525." I made the entry accordingly. Your report, which I hold in my hand, states, "Paid for P. C., $462.75." I am sorry that you gave your people credit for twenty-five cents more than they paid; but you did it, and not I.

Your report states, "Assessed Bishops, $6; paid, $6." Your presiding elder gave me the correct figures for the assessment; but you failed, and not I, to give the correct amount paid.

Your report states, "Assessed for Conference claimants, $25; paid, $25." If $23 paid is correct, you, and not I, made the wrong entry.

Your report states the amount paid for church extension. The figures were so undecided that I did not know whether to put it $10 or $11. I put it $11. Your report is in my hand. Would you like to read it yourself? If so, send to me for it.

I do not think that any other preacher in the Conference has made so many mistakes as you have; but if there be another, I trust that he will not publish his shortcomings.

May the Lord bless you in all your work and labor of love!

Your brother,

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Small Salaries—A New View.

MR. EDITOR: Among several papers which come to me, I suppose I more eagerly receive and thoroughly read our ADVOCATE than any other. This, because it is our home paper, and I am anxious to see the progress of the work and the news from our own field. I see many things from week to week in the ADVOCATE for which I am grateful, and now and then something provokes slightly to criticism.

In your issue, of March 12, you have favored us, in a paragraph, with a new view of small ministerial salaries—a side, as you say, "which very few people seem to have seen." That I may not do you injustice, I quote here your paragraph entire:

A good deal of complaint is being made about the meagerness of the salaries of preachers. There is a side to this question which very few people seem to have seen. A large salary is one of the many things which serve to alienate the common people from the minister and the church. Ministerial influence is largely based on identification with the common people, and whatever hinders or destroys this identity is fatal to the progress of church work. So, then, the small salaries of the preachers may be an expression of the wisdom of Providence in keeping the preacher in contact with the people. If so, then the preacher who is promised a small salary, and receives a smaller, may rejoice that the hand of Providence is in it all.

At first I thought you intended this for pleasantry; but a several times reading inclines me to the opinion that this is your sober judgment. What is the ground of your statement that "a large salary is one of the many things which serve to alienate the common people from the minister and the church"? The large-salaried ministers are generally the popular ministers, receiving large salaries because they are popular. And how could the giving by the people liberal salaries to their ministers be the means of their alienation from them? Usually—so I have been taught to believe—the very opposite is the effect. Those by whom we have done our duty we like better, and are more in sympathy with than those whom we slight. Then how you make it that small salaries are especially adapted to keep "the preacher in contact with the people," I can not understand. It is true that in the world great intelligence, or honors, or wealth usually place a man where he hasn't much company; but when preachers get all that is allowed them, and a little more besides, they haven't enough then to get out of sight of their neighbors. But your statement reaches its climax when you not only justify small promised salaries, but smaller receipts, on the ground that this may be the providential end. Take it home to yourself, Doctor. Was it ever a means of grace to you for the people to promise you a "small" salary, and then not pay all of it? I have heard of crosses and afflictions proving to be blessings in disguise; but how this particular affliction of having less than the small amount that was promised paid, as the hire of God's laborers, can be a blessing in any form, I can not understand. But, if it could be a means of grace to the minister, how about the church that pays less than it promised, and of a small salary at that? Business men who pay liberal salaries, and pay them promptly, are accustomed to stumble at this stone in our church procedure. It is not common business honesty to refuse to pay a minister's salary in full, and it is disgraceful to ask his services for a small salary, and then not pay that.

May I venture another word? It is not the small and unpaid salaries that are needed to place preachers in contact with the people. It is a liberal enough allowance to enable them to pay for what they get, like other people, and stop this posing before the public as a mendicant class ready to accept special favors, not made in recognition of their distinguished service, but of their advertised poverty. A prominent merchant said to a minister, not long ago, that he was the first minister who had settled up his bills with him in full for many years. This was not intended to reflect upon their honesty. It showed their poverty. And yet here was a felt disparagement of their usefulness. Cripple a man financially (and a minister is a man), and you have weakened his character. No minister of the gospel can receive favors as a concession to his poverty who does not thereby lose in self-respect and in manliness.

J. W. MEDLOCK.

[In regard to the above, we just leave our note to stand as we wrote it, and as Bro. Medlock quoted it. But this is strange: "Cripple a man financially, and you have weakened his character." We do not begin to believe that. According to that, people who are poor have no character. If character is graded according to money—but we won't say more.—EDITOR.]

Inquiries.

MR. EDITOR: If you can find space for the following questions in your paper, it will probably oblige some of your readers who desire more distinctly to understand the line of division between the church of God and the world.

First. What is meant by the word "world," from which we are commanded to separate ourselves, that we may be the children of God? What does the Savior mean when he says, "If you were of the world, the world would love its own?" (John xv, 19.) What does the inspired apostle mean when he says, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him?" (I. John ii, 15.)

Second. What is the exact definition of the words "croakers," or "croaking?" Is it croaking to say that worldliness and frivolity are endangering the spirituality of the church, and that the gospel trumpet should not give an uncertain sound? Is there not friendship in warning? Are those the only croakers who refer to what was valuable in a former generation as worth preserving, and can not approve everything because it is new in this rushing age? May there not as well be croaking on the part of those who reject all that is not modern as ignorance or prejudice? "Where is the wise and where the scribe" who can give light on these important questions?

ENQUIRER.

"Temperance Bible Studies."

Liquor men often attempt to quote Scripture in support of their cause. Temperance workers ought, therefore, to carefully study this phase of the question, and be prepared to expose their fallacies. For this purpose I recommend the perusal of a little book, entitled "Bible Temperance Studies," by M. Josephine Griffith, Fairport, N. Y. It contains a study on every reference to temperance and intemperance in the Bible. It is a most excellent thing for gospel temperance works, and, indeed, for all persons who wish to obtain a clear view of the teachings of the Bible in regard to this great question. It is original in its plan, clear in its analysis, and admirable in its arrangement.

Another Explanation.

MR. EDITOR: You asked some weeks ago, and a Bro. Booth this week attempts to explain in answer, "Why Sunday-schools have fallen away in every particular." Bro. Booth humbles his "opinion" in his first utterance; but in his argument I am inclined to think exalts it considerably. I thought at the time, and still think, that your question was to get at the cause of difference in this and last year's report, which I can only, as one, account for by the evidence before me. As one of the preachers in the Louisiana Conference, I did not report those Sunday-schools that did not have sufficient vitality to go through the winter, of which I had three, ranging in extent from three to six months and having some 140 officers and scholars. Now, suppose that six or eight have done the same thing; thinking, perhaps, as I did, that leaving them out would provoke them to a better and more determined effort to go on through the whole year with this good work! Yours,

S. H. WHATLEY.

The police jury of St. Martin parish has appropriated $4,500 to rebuild the bridge across Bayou Teche at Breaux Bridge.

The Alexandria Land and Improvement Company, Limited, with a capital stock of $44,000, has been organized for the purchase and sale of real estate.

The election in the Colfax precinct of Grant parish resulted in a victory for prohibition by twenty-six majority. The colored brethren voted strong against whisky.

The Robeline News is making strenuous efforts to induce the people of Robeline to support a formulated plan of raising $8,000 for the erection of a college so much needed in that place.

Messrs. Oxnard and Sprague, of New York, are breaking ground on the Fusilier Plantation, in St. Mary parish, for laying the foundation of a 500-ton-per-day central sugar refinery.

There is talk of a railroad from Pontchatoula, on the Illinois Central road, west through Baton Rouge to Lafayette, La. It is thought such a road will benefit Baton Rouge immensely.

The contract for the erection of the tabernacle of the Chautauqua Society of Ruston has been awarded to J. M. Goslin for $1,550. The grounds will be turned over to the State Educational Society the last of June.

A statement prepared at the Census Bureau shows that the total population of Louisiana is 1,118,597. Of this number 554,712 are white, 562,893 colored, 628 Indians, 315 Chinese, and 390 Japanese. In the parish of Orleans there are 176,285 whites and 65,663 colored. In thirty-five parishes the number of colored persons exceeds that of the whites; in some cases in the proportion of fifteen to one.

The farmers throughout the parish are actively engaged in plowing and planting rice. The largest rice crop by one-half ever planted in this parish will be planted this spring, and it will be planted in much better shape than ever before.—Lake Charles American.

The blue ribbon farmer of Acadia parish is Mr. Bud Colligan, who resides near Church Point. Last year he made eleven bales of cotton, weighing 480 pounds each; 400 bushels of corn and plenty of fodder; 210 bushels of sweet potatoes and a large supply of tobacco. He had no help except two children, aged eight and ten years. After he finished his own crop, he and his youngsters picked another bale of cotton for a neighbor.—Advocate.

By the forfeiture act of September 29, 1890, about 250,000 acres of land, situated north of Hattiesburg, in the counties of Perry, Jones, Marion, Covington, Smith, Simpson and Rankin, were thrown open to homestead entry. These lands are heavily timbered, and when properly managed, after being cleared, produce fine crops of cotton, corn, potatoes, sugar cane, rice, fruit, etc., and are situated in a belt of country that is peculiarly free from all malarial diseases.—Clarion-Ledger.

The Clarion-Ledger asks a question:

Is it a fact, as stated, that seven-tenths of the voters of Mississippi are farmers and that ninety per cent. of that number favor the sub-treasury bill? Where are the figures!

The same paper says:

There are 41 lodges of the Knights and Ladies of Honor in Mississippi, with a total membership of 1,545. There were 14 deaths for the semi-annual term ending December 31, and the value of the certificates paid was $20,000. The tenth annual session will be held at Brookhaven, August 11.

FROM THE WORK.

CHARLESTON, MISS.

This is my third year on the Charleston circuit. These are a clever, good people. We are moving up in the way of building churches. When I came to the work there were seven appointments, all union churches except two, and one of them an old hull. We have, within the last year, built three new churches; two completed; the third one so that we can use it; and bought the interest of another party in another splendid house—all out of debt except a small amount on one house (and they are all Methodist Churches; no union).

The Charleston circuit now has five appointments and five Methodist Churches; but on other lines I feel like we have done but little. I think the preacher and presiding elder have paid liberally towards the building of these churches, judging from the way their salary comes up. I tell you it is short grazing in this part of the moral vineyard.

We are praying for a gracious revival this year. I think that would help on all the different lines of work, though I don't see how we are to have a revival, as we are too poor to have an evangelist, and the people think that is altogether necessary, though I think of trying it anyhow. I used to have great revivals when I was the humble instrument in the lead.

Our first quarterly meeting was a little like Bro. Mellen's at Energy; only my stewards did not come, nor send much money, either. Pray for us. God bless you and the ADVOCATE.

T. G. FREEMAN.

LELAND AND LAKE LEE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Having been delighted in the songs of triumph from our fellow-laborers, we feel constrained to join in the chorus, and let our friends know how we are getting along on the great "Father of Waters." To say that we have been cordially received but feebly expresses the manner in which we have been welcomed to our new work. Our people are kind, generous and hospitable, ever thoughtful about the interests of their preacher, endeavoring to "see that he be among them without fear," because "he worketh the work of the Lord," as also others have done. The joy with which the itinerant's heart is thrilled by a knowledge of these facts is almost inexpressible, and can be known only to those who have experienced it. In such a state of ecstatic bliss we can truly say: "The lines have fallen unto us in pleasant places—yea, we have a goodly heritage."

Nor are we alone in the enjoyment of such blessings. We hear notes of gladness from others. Our young Bro. E. S. Lewis, of the Dublin and Brooklyn charge, is doing well; reports prayer meetings and Sunday-schools in good working order. Just as we expected! Bro. Lewis is made of the right kind of material.

Bro. Savage, that massive little preacher at Australia and Friendship, is in good spirits and reports his work very promising.

Bro. T. W. Lewis, our pastor at Greenville, is making a fine impression—so we hear. He has received several new members since Conference, has organized an Epworth League with twenty-two members; has three missionary societies, which have contributed $150 pledge money; reports his congregations good. Bro. Lewis is a faithful worker, and has done his work well, notwithstanding the difficulties under which he has been compelled to labor. Sickness and death have visited his home, and made the hearts of his family sad. The good people of Greenville kindly administered to his wants in this time of need and affliction. May God bless them all!

Our work at Leland and Lake Lee promises well. Have organized a new society and received four new members. Have two Sunday-schools working finely. My health was never better. Have gained some flesh; "tip the beam" to 165.

DELHI DISTRICT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

I have just finished the first round on the Delhi district. The preachers are all at their posts, and the work is well under way. Assessments have been liberal, and there seems to be a disposition on the part of the people to meet them. The only objection is, that the Conference assessments are so much more than ever before. We have had rain and mud everywhere to contend with; therefore, the congregations have not been large. I find the spiritual condition of the church very low indeed; but the preachers and people seem to feel assured that the Lord will pour out his Spirit this year.

Our parsonage at Lake Providence is secured to us, and Bro. Isbell is going right ahead improving it.

Harrisonburg expects to build a parsonage this year, and Bro. Hamill is moving in that direction as fast as he can.

Bro. Reneau, of the Winnsboro circuit, has been kept from his work until last Friday by severe and protracted sickness, but is now at his place, and has already made considerable headway toward building a parsonage at Winnsboro.

Two new churches will be built in the district soon; so that, looking at the work from all these standpoints, we are very hopeful of a successful year.

We are in much fear of an overflow, as the great river is rising very fast, and if this should occur, it will very much retard the growth and prosperity of the church; but we hope for the better.

My health has been improving all the time, although I have been exposed so much to the rain and cold. I am surprised that I have stood it so well. Sometimes I am inclined to think that exposure to the inclemency of the weather is a better remedy for rheumatism than "doctors' stuff."

More hereafter.

ABBEVILLE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I have just recovered from a severe attack of measles and la grippe combined, which confined me to my room for several weeks. Notwithstanding this interruption of my work, the charge seems to be prosperous, and the outlook encouraging.

The Abbeville Normal School is doing a splendid work in our midst. Messrs. Hightower and Harmon, principals, have manifested an emulous fitness for the position they occupy. They are now using the large new school-building, admirably adapted to the work they have in hand. While the curriculum of this school is comprehensive, that that is of practical importance is emphasized. Teaching term opened March 16. During this term teachers will not only be taught the various courses they desire to pursue, but will also be taught the best methods of teaching.

In consequence of the above-mentioned school, Abbeville has been quite a "boom." Four new houses constructed recently. Others painted and repaired. Our church here, we hope, will advance in proportion.

On account of my illness, and much bad weather, I have done nothing for the ADVOCATE. But I am going to present its claims fully to the people of this charge in the future. Every wide-awake pastor knows how important it is for our people to read our church papers. May the circulation of our good ADVOCATE be greatly extended!

The World's Greatest Event.

MARK XXVI, 1-13.

BY THE REV. ARTHUR BROOKS.

This passage, which in St. Mark's Gospel gives the account of the resurrection, is interesting as containing more or less close likeness to the three other Gospels. The first eight verses remind of St. Matthew's account of the resurrection, with, however, striking and original additions; the next three verses evidently are a condensed account of the appearance of Christ to Mary Magdalene, which St. John describes in full; the twelfth and thirteenth verses refer to the story of the walk to Emmaus, which is given to us at length by St. Luke. We have thus in this passage an account resembling those composite photographs of several faces upon one plate, in which similar and striking features will be emphasized, and characteristic traits be discovered better than in any other way.

The story of the resurrection, the greatest event which the world has ever seen, begins not with the story of wonders from heaven, but with the account of acts of faithfulness and love of men and women upon earth under the discouragement. St. Mark shows us the women going out to purchase the spices on the evening of the Sabbath day, after the sun had set, still believing in a dead Lord, still able to hold to him who had disappointed their hopes. Love faced down all discouragements. On the way to the tomb were told of their gloomy foreboding as to the possibility of being unable even to reach the body in order to perform their loving task. They ask, "Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulcher?" This shows us how unexpected the resurrection was, but it also shows us how deep was the love to which it came. The news of the resurrection was in each case carried to loving and grieving disciples. The explanation of Mary Magdalene's privilege at the open grave is given in the fact that out of her Jesus had cast seven devils, with the implied inference that, therefore, she would love him most. Personal love is prominent in the whole story.

Jesus himself once said that if a man believed not Moses and the prophets, neither would he be persuaded, though one rose from the dead. His own resurrection carried out his saying. He attempted to persuade nobody by it. He gave it to those who had known him and loved him. It was not a resurrection, but his resurrection; and to that character it had strength to help them, and through them to help the world. When, before the raising of Lazarus, his sister Mary said to Jesus, "I know that he shall rise again . . . at the last day," Jesus answered, "I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." There, as in the story of the resurrection, relation to himself was the gift of life eternal. It has always been so. We must know him that rose in order to know the certainty of his resurrection. He must be, as he was to those disciples, one who has shewn the living power of God, one who has cast out the world's great enemy, and then we understand how and why he could do so great a thing as rise from the dead. Mary telling her story to anyone whom she chanced to meet in the streets of Jerusalem would probably have found few sisters; but "she went and told it to them that had been with him," and when it had its effect. Character is always behind action, knowledge behind belief. And we find it naturally and abundantly so in the resurrection. The character of Christ was back of his action; the knowledge of the disciples was back of their belief.

The assertion of divine power is very plain and very constant in the account. The disciples might love, but they could not raise, Christ. The stone was rolled back, Christ rose, the angel spoke to them, Christ himself appeared to them. The whole event is outside of human agency, although at every point it is connected with their past lives. The angel is evidently a heavenly visitant, but he is described as a "young man," and he speaks of the promise which Jesus had made to the disciples, and refers to Peter especially in terms which imply the knowledge of his sin, and seem to convey a message of forgiveness. The disciples are remembered and helped by God's great power. The old thoughts have a divine revelation given them.

Jesus had always dealt thus with his disciples, showing them how much he was above them, and yet making them understand that he felt with them and always remembered them. He told them to take up their cross, and his sacrifice on the cross showed what he meant; he did miracles, but always in answer to their needs or as a lesson to them. In his greatest acts he drew near to them. So in the resurrection he rose as no other one could, and at the same time showed how he loved them and remembered them. He thus taught us that our life is helped by God's own power. We desire to rise and to live forever. God knows it. He made us to live forever. But we can do it only by his power and by depending upon him—not by our own power, or by thinking of ourselves alone. Christ rose in order that through him we might rise. It is natural to us to rise and to live forever, because we are God's children. God lives before us; we follow after him, and wherever we go we find what is natural and true to all the promises which he has written in our nature. We are to live as depending upon our risen Savior. "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God" (Col. iii, 1).

On the occasion of all the appearances which are mentioned, we are told of the terror or doubt of those to whom they are given. That is not surprising. It was a wonderful event; there could be no greater. Those who loved Christ were prepared to have him resist death, but not to have him overcome death by rising from the dead. Those who knew and thought little of Christ would probably have dismissed the whole story without attention, except for some vague superstitions which might have come to their minds. But to the disciples of Christ the announcement told of something wonderful, perhaps too great and too good to be true, but something which, when they remembered their Master, they felt might be true. Doubt is always partial sight. We never doubt of that of which we know nothing nor of that of which we know everything. The uneducated have no doubts; the adepts in a study or a pursuit have no doubts as to that portion of their knowledge. The doubter is the man who has taken a forward step, and the question is whether he can take another. It was a great step then, it always will be a great step, either to believe in life beyond the grave, or to believe in the resurrection of Christ. Christ helped his disciples to take this last step. He sent the angel. He appeared to Mary Magdalene, and spoke her name. He walked with the two to Emmaus, and expounded the Scriptures to them. He told Thomas, as is narrated in John xx, 27, to put his finger in the prints of the nail. He knows better than we do how great a fact his resurrection is. He does everything to help us believe it and understand it. To those who love him, the growth of the flowers at the springtime, the season at which Easter always comes, the feeling of the heart of man that life, and not death, is his portion, the growth of the church in that belief of the resurrection, all the Scripture references and proofs of the resurrection, are helps to the belief in the great fact. And then, when we believe that Christ died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him (1. Thess. iv, 14); and, if Christ is risen from the dead, he is become the first-fruits of them that slept (I. Cor. xv, 20). We are able to see why so great a fact as the resurrection will always cause a tumult in the thoughts of men, and also how God gives us here, as everywhere, helps by which to overcome our difficulties, if we will only use them rightly.

We have been studying lately of the two miracles of the restoration to life by Elijah and Elisha. In this Easter story, in all its parts, we are able to feel the difference between the resurrection and these events in the lives of the Old Testament prophets. No one raises Christ; he rises by his power as the Son of God. There is no account of exceptional actions or of wonderful effort. We feel that it was natural to Christ to be loosed from the pains of death, "because it was not possible that he should be holden of it" (Acts ii, 24). The story is that of the restoration of a Master and a Friend, who never had failed his followers, and it was the beginning of new hope and courage for their life and that of the world. Of all this these great prophets were allowed to be the foretellers, as they came in contact with death at the houses in Sarepta and Shunem. But Jesus Christ by his resurrection conquered death for all men, and was declared to be the Son of God with power. And on this account Easter is the brightest day of the year.—Sunday-School Times.

Letter from Brazil.

The regular annual meeting of the missionaries in Brazil, of the W. B. M. of the M. E. Church, South, convened in the city of Rio de Janeiro about five weeks ago. The meeting was a success, and the time passed away helpfully, pleasantly to all. This body of women consisted of the four stationed at the college in Rio de Janeiro and the five who control the school here in Piracicaba. (Here I will add that the Piracicaba school is a prosperous one.) The most weighty discussions were those in reference to taking up new work in two other cities where are great demands at present. How we can divide our present forces at Rio and Piracicaba, and have these same schools go on prosperously, is to us still a perplexing question. Brazilian girls that we train for teachers marry and leave us. Others that we engage come and go. Much of the time our principals are worried as to who next they can engage to assist us. On account of the Brazilian vernacular we must have Brazilian teachers for special studies. These we must employ at high prices, or not at all. Just the other day our principal received news from one whom she had relied upon to teach during the present year, saying he could not come. Another could not meet her engagement. The school opens Tuesday; our circulars are out. Thus it is with our schools in Brazil; we do not know at what time such difficulties may arise. Success depends all on our perseverance, strength and ability to do. The slow progress that we are bound to make in the language greatly hinders the assistance which otherwise new missionaries could render. Arduous burdens are necessarily cast upon the shoulders of the older missionaries as the work expands. I have been in Brazil over a year, and still know very little of the grammar or common correct idioms of speech; yet it is said that the Portuguese language is very easy. It is certainly a very soft and beautiful one.

Much we need new women now, so that they may begin this great impediment (study of Portuguese) in order that they may become in two or three years efficient workers in the cause of the Master.

The Brazilians are a kind people, and generally appreciative of all good, earnest people, even the missionaries whom, of course, they have cause to dislike, as our business among them is to uproot the religion that has been that of their ancestors for centuries.

The mission work, in general, moves on well in this country, not only among the Methodist, but also among other denominations. The Presbyterians, who first opened missionary work in Brazil, have a flourishing mission, which extends widely over this extensive land.

I hope that Louisiana and Mississippi will take more heartfelt interest in the mission work of the W. B. M. in Brazil. Let Mississippi send us workers this year, and Louisiana others. God grant that it may be so, and that all Christian friends will remember in daily prayers their missionary work in Brazil. Yours truly,

SALLIE M. PHILLIPS.

The Enterprise of the Devil.

They are two things that can not be said about the arch-enemy of mankind: we can not say he is indolent; we can not say he is illiberal. Whatever the ultimate diabolical end may be, how desperate or how destructive, one thing must be admitted: the devil is most enterprising in accomplishing that end.

The professing Christian may be prudent in all expenditures looking to the conversion of the world; the church itself may be very conservative in using such appliances as may attract the curious wording to the field of Christ; but, depend upon it, the devil is very lavish in his expenditures, very bold in his enterprises, and generous to a fault. His emissaries are inoculated with the same enterprising spirit. They offer every inducement to lure men, women, and children into the broad road that leadeth to destruction. "The way of the transgressor is hard," usually at the last, but the entrance upon that way is made as attractive as the gilded saloon and the gifted syren can make it. The theater, the ball-room, the gambling parlor—the vilest dens of iniquity—have their baits, their runners, their precurers. The capital invested, the labor employed in the electric lighted resorts of worldly attraction and pleasure are far beyond what even thoughtful but unobservant men might suppose. Think of the unconsecrated genius employed in producing the lascivious romance, the demoralizing drama, the corrupting ballet, the damning pictorial press, and the all-attractive but irreligious and immoral Sunday newspaper, and you have only a fractional view, the merest glimpse of the enterprise of the devil. It may be a striking illustration of that enterprise—we give it on the authority of one who claims he does not guess but absolutely knows; the amount of fond given away in the gin-mills of this city with the drink is greater than all the restaurants in the city sell. We have never seen this statement in print. It seems astounding. We may discredit it. It is given by a well-informed and reliable business man, whose occupation brings him into intimate relations with the failing restaurants of this great city. It is something to think about, to inquire into, and to profit by.—N. Y. Advocate.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. Fogg, Watertown, Mass.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, continuing it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions, and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

THURSDAY, MARCH 26, 1891.

Funeral of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, died in Durant, Miss., Sunday morning, March 15, at one o'clock. He had lived in Durant several years, and was loved and revered by the entire community as was no other man.

In respect to the deceased servant of God, every storehouse and other place of business was closed Monday morning at ten o'clock, and the largest congregation ever assembled here on a similar occasion repaired to the Methodist Church to attend the funeral services. The casket, covered with rare floral offerings contributed by sympathizing friends here and in Kosciusko, was placed on the altar. After a song, the Rev. S. M. Thames read the first lesson, Rev. R. A. Ellis read the second lesson. The choir sang the hymn, "Asleep in Jesus," Bro. Thames led the congregation in prayer, Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., who had been Bro. Ramsey's friend and co-laborer for more than thirty years, then delivered the address, which was one of the most appropriate funeral discourses that we have ever heard. His delineation of the character of the great and good man, who sacrificed temporal honors, position and wealth that he might devote his life to the ministry of the gospel, was pathetic, beautiful and true. After the address, and as the pall bearers moved slowly down the aisle, the choir sang another appropriate hymn. At the grave the services were concluded with prayer and the benediction by the writer.

We visited Bro. Ramsey often and always found him with unwavering faith and meek submission to the will of God and bright prospects of a home in heaven. He said to me, a few weeks before his death: "Tell my brethren of the Conference that I shall die in love with them all; that if I have ever wounded the feelings of anyone, I have done it unintentionally. Tell them that I will not forget them, and that all is well with me. God and heaven are mine." Our associations with our father in Israel has been a benediction to us.

J. T. Moody.

The Missionary Reporter, for March, is a most interesting number of this always interesting monthly published by our missionary secretaries. The value of this periodical and its exceeding cheapness ought to insure it a circulation of, at least, one hundred thousand. Our church will never engage in real mission work until she becomes fully acquainted with all the phases of such work. The way to become acquainted with it is to read missionary literature. Are our preachers helping to circulate the Reporter, so as to get the facts and figures before the people?

The Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground met on the grounds, last week, to take preliminary steps for the coming meeting in July. Besides members of the Board, Rev. C. F. Evans, D. D., presiding elder of the New Orleans district, and Rev. J. A. Peterson, presiding elder of the Mobile district, were present. The grounds are in good order and everything will be in good shape for a glorious meeting in July. The services will begin Wednesday, July 15. Let everybody make preparation to attend.

The brethren need not write to us to abridge long obituaries. That will be done without any special instructions.

The Resurrection and the Apocalypse.

"It is appointed unto men once to die," says St. Paul. This notable law of our race has received three notable checks: in the translation of Enoch, the ascension of Elijah, and in the resurrection of Christ. Of these three Christ alone passed through death; and, therefore, is the only one of the race "raised from the dead." The two marks of humanity met fully in him. He was born—"made of a woman"—and he died.

However marvelous his birth, there was no marvel in his death. He died at the hands of the government, by public execution. We are much interested in the certainty of the fact that he died. When Joseph asked Pilate for the body of Jesus, Pilate called the centurion and asked whether he had been any while dead, and when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

It would not be matter of surprise if the Son of God did return from the earth to heaven, but that would have been of no advantage to us, unless he went by the route common to humanity—that is, by the way of the grave. He must be truly man who arose from the dead to establish for us a law of life after death. Christ raised the dead, and directly before the act, and directly after it, while the man raised was in sight, and as yet unbound from his grave-clothes, announced that he was himself the resurrection and the life.

The one controlling proof of a man's being raised from the dead, is that He lives, who was certainly known to be dead; and continues to live; and that death has no more dominion over him. Such life would, of course, be a new nativity, and the first one displaying it would stand at the head of a new line of intelligent being. He would be the "first-born from the dead," and the first sheaf of a divine harvest. Such a life would require new surroundings, a habitat as imperishable as eternity. We should not be surprised if such an one, after saluting his friends, were to depart from this earth never to return to it again; indeed, that would rather be expected. And, then, only the departure of the body of the Son of man, in a clear atmosphere, could have satisfied us that a man had really entered upon a deathless career. We should then know that the wonder of incarnation, "God manifest in the flesh," had been transferred from earth to the seats of angels; that a human form, face, hands and feet burned in glory, and had found its way for the first time to the ineffable splendor of the divine presence.

Jesus had said, "I have power to lay down my life and to take it up again;" but not until they saw him dead, and after that alive, and heard him talk and saw him eat, and put their hands upon the print of the nails, and the spear-gash over his heart—in the words of St. John, "handled" him—and then saw the quiet, easy majesty of his slow ascent, only a man, without halo, until the distance and the cloud received him; not until all this had been added, could they receive the truth that he that was dead was now living for evermore.

They could now rejoice with songs day and night; for his victory over the grave had given to man a divine power over death. It was a man who now held the keys of that empire of which he had overthrown. Him they knew; and in him they could repose the fortunes of their being, in the stern exigency of a dying hour.

The Book of Revelation was written to set forth this one event with its sublime, unutterable consequences. The life, power and empire of the resurrection are here told by the Spirit, verbally and scenically, so that both eye and ear and imagination should, if possible, take in the wealth which God had poured upon the human family through the risen Son of his love. The sevenfold glory and light of the Lord, the Spirit, the Lamp of God; the sevenfold symphonies of angels and seraphim; a universe kindled into responsive anthems of gratitude, quivering under the one Amen! to him that redeemed his people, and with his own blood washed them from their sins. The New Covenant granted to humanity, through its one representative, with all its seals of power, judgment, and salvation, centering in his will, and executed by his hand, to the overthrow of all falsehood, unbelief, and enmity; until the whore of Babylon, the Beast and the Devil are thrown into the same bed, of eternal wrath and fire; and until a new heaven and a new earth shall come forth, as from the sepulchre of earth and time, for the joy and home of the redeemed. The investiture of the human form upon the Mount of Transfiguration with divine glory, until the whole man was incandescent with the rays of Godhead; which glory was never afterward repeated or approached upon earth, neither at the open sepulchre, nor at any visible point of the ascension; was reproduced in heaven directly upon Christ's entrance upon his majesty, as the King of glory.

St. John does not in the Gospel refer to the scene upon Hermon; but in the first chapter of the Book of Revelation he introduces us to the Son of man, with person, face, hands, hair and raiment, white and glistering in an abyss of divine light, and burning in the fierce glow of the throne—the very same investiture of his humanity there which transpired here.

The two scenes, auswering the one to the other, is the sufficient evidence of our immortality, and of the divine force which the Son of man has, by his resurrection, given to the human race over death and the grave. It is this glorified incarnate body which is the latest expression, and the highest, of the possibilities of our manhood. This the Holy Spirit uses as the model of the new man in Christ Jesus; and "changes us into the same image from glory to glory."

This mighty outburst of the resurrection kingdom of Christ, which we have in the Apocalypse, was reserved by the Spirit until the facts upon which it is based had been completed. Of these the Savior spoke when he said, "How am I straitened until it be accomplished." The baptism of blood, he told the sons of Zebedee, must needs precede his glory. The Spirit was not given until Christ was glorified; not in the full force of a dispensation of the Spirit. There are two texts which receive much illumination from the light of the glorified person of the Son of man; which show that his resurrection power is at work now upon the souls of men: "Verily, verily, I say unto you the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." If we add to these passages the one in Romans, which sets forth the agony of the Spirit in the quickening of those "who are dead in trespasses and sins," we shall have the full statement of the consent of the Holy Trinity in regenerating man. "But if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you."

By this unwasted, unrelenting vitality which has come out of the sepulchre of Jesus, never to return to it again, and which is now abroad among the churches, all who desire it may live. Those affections in our nature so averse to God, as well as those which are only indifferent to spiritual being, may be regenerated, may come out of their paralysis of death into the joy and peace of a new life. Unbelief may, by the Spirit, be raised into faith that is of God; the fear of the Judge into an impassioned love for God; the heaviness and despair with which the soul looks out upon the future into a hope that consciously feels heaven.

This is the power for raising a worldly church into a living epistle of the Spirit. And upon this let every minister of Christ venture his all in the full simplicity of faith. He has the whole statement of the resource of the body of Christ to draw upon.

Here let us all bring our shattered, sin-loving natures, realize our absolute death, and throw ourselves, sink or swim, upon this outside power of life, which once dwelt, in all its fullness, in a human body, and, therefore, can dwell in it again.

The grave, which was only the house of the dead, "deserted and drear, with the noise of the wild wind, and creaks of the bier," is now the bed of his saints. "Come, see the place where the Lord lay"—an angel says it; and now the "flowerets perfume it with ether." I can well afford to look down into it. Did he, in truth, lie there? Yes, and he has opened the doors of death once and forever. Its terrors, its corruption, its earth and its worms, I now place against its power, its honor, its glory; for I see his body, having passed this way, is now translucent with an eternal beauty of life.

Revival at Rayne Memorial.

The series of meetings at Rayne Memorial Church has developed into a genuine revival. The oldest members say they have known nothing like it in the history of the church. The membership has been much revived, and there had been a number of bright conversions and six accessions at the end of the first week. The pastor exercises general control, but Rev. N. B. Norwood, of Gros Tete circuit, has done all the preaching, and it has been truly evangelical and in power.

Like a great many revivals, this one can be traced back to an origin, more or less remote, of quickened faith and prayer in a few persons and households. Like leaven, the good work spread from heart to heart, and from house to house, until in a more or less pungent form it had reached the whole mass, and when the special services were announced the success of the meeting was already assured. As an evidence of this, a score of persons have been received into the membership of the church on profession of faith during the past two months (most of whom had experienced the grace of conversion), and about five hundred dollars were raised toward the liquidation of the church's only small debt.

Of Bro. Norwood's preaching it may be said that it is not only strong, but, like the man himself, glad and sweet-spirited.

The services will be continued, day and night, through this week and until further notice.

The Resurrection.

A little more than 1,850 years ago there lived and died in Palestine a man called Jesus of Nazareth. About three days after his death it is alleged that he rose from the dead. That fact millions of people all over the world are celebrating at this season of the year. According to Paul, the superstructure of Christianity is built upon the fact of the resurrection of Jesus. "If Christ be not raised, then is your faith vain." According to our enemies, Christianity has exhausted all its energies and is a dead thing. But that same dictum has been put forth anew with every generation. Such was the estimate when Jesus hung on the cross. Alongside of this estimate we lay the fact that since the day the excited Mary rushed into the company of the disciples with the startling news, "The Lord is risen," until now, Christianity has not only held its own, but to-day is going forth in greater power and exerting a larger influence and commanding deeper respect from all classes of mankind. The peans of victory over death through the resurrection of Jesus are to-day ringing their notes of triumph in every land beneath the sky. This is far from an indication of decay or death.

The resurrection of Jesus has laid its divine grasp upon the deepest faith of every Christian sect in the world. To-day they all rejoice in the sublime import and renewing energy and hope-creating power of this, the crowning miracle of our holy religion. They do not to-day look down into the cold marble tomb of Joseph to gaze upon the bruised body of their Lord, but they look up to the highest heaven, "the throne of the Majesty on high," and see that body radiant with supernal glories and sceptered with universal dominion and unquestioned and absolute authority. And they worship him "who was dead and is alive forevermore."

A risen Jesus means a risen humanity afterwhile. Men can not endure the thought of eternal sleep. The heart of humanity throbs with desire for a future existence. This life is too short to satisfy the aspirations of a human soul. Hence the resurrection of Jesus, being the pledge of man's resurrection, is the only fact known that can give hope that those desires shall be fulfilled and those aspirations reached. Hence Christians in all parts of the world are to-day rejoicing in the resurrection of him "who brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

Some Easter Thoughts.

The sufficiency of the atonement, in its relations to sin and pardon, is so ample that we sometimes lose sight of other truths that are grouped about the fact of the resurrection of Jesus; truths that relate to the further work of Christ and his connection with redeemed man. We do not now allude to the resurrection as the crowning proof of his divinity and the seal of his previous work, connecting with the vicarious sacrifice; nor as the prophecy and pledge of the resurrection of our bodies. Of the infinite value of the fact in these relations too much can not be said, but of that we do not now write.

The eternal identification of humanity with the Son of God, through his eternal manhood, is the thought uppermost in our mind at this Easter season. He is "very and eternal man;" none the less "very and eternal God," but man also; so that, as the great Head of the church, he has, by his resurrection and ascension, brought the church—the true church, the spiritual church, sanctified through him—into actual and eternal union with the blessed Godhead, representing it, in his humanity, in the very presence of the Father and the Eternal Spirit. It is of Christ's human nature that the church is the bride. They "twain are one flesh," not simply through spiritual congeniality, but through the eternal union of God and man in the eternal manhood of Jesus Christ.

From this truth flow many comforting and inspiring thoughts. It is a glorious thing to have the pity, the consideration, the love of the Divine Trinity; but to be represented through one of us, the God-man, who said, "I am in the Father and ye in me and I in you," this is surpassingly glorious. It is the constant and sufficient assurance that to us his brethren, comes all the sympathy, all the love, all the overflow of blessedness that came from the Great Father upon the man Jesus while he was yet upon the earth. Here is the ground of the promise to the church, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Here the eternal channel through which all the sublime thought and all the sweetness of the divine nature come to the church. And upon the glorified humanity of our Lord was the thought John fixed when he said, "We shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

Another consideration is the appeal the eternal manhood of Jesus makes to us, his redeemed brethren; an appeal stronger in its demand than any mere command could possibly be. Such oneness of nature with us involves cravings for our love and for our sympathy with his wonderful plans for the world's salvation. His human soul demands human association. With reverence it may be said that the highest possible happiness of our Lord in his glorified humanity includes the knowledge of our love for him and our glad identification with his work. As in Gethsemane he came, again and again, to his three friends, yearning for their sympathy, so now, essentially the same in desire, he yearns for the love of his own. Shall we not love him all the more because, while he is our risen Lord he is also our brother forever!

Notes.

The Lord is risen, indeed.

The gospel of the resurrection was preached first by a woman. "Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord."

The burden of the first gospel sermon was the resurrection of Jesus. "Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it."

The success of the first preachers was the result of courageous testimony to the fact of the resurrection of Jesus. "And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus."

The resurrection of Jesus was the Father's declaration of his Sonship. "And was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead."

The resurrection of Jesus is the Father's pledge of our resurrection. "And God hath both raised up the Lord and will raise up us by his own power."

The death and resurrection of Jesus were in strict accordance with previous Scripture teaching. "For I delivered unto you first of all that which also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures."

"Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first-fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead."

"Oh, death, where is thy sting? Oh, grave, where is thy victory? Thanks be unto God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ"!

Dr. Potter, our missionary secretary, spent several days of last week in this city. He gave an interesting talk on missions at the Wednesday night prayer meeting in Carondelet Street Church.

We are pleased to see that our people are taking hold of the Epworth League with so much interest, and to see that Bro. Van Valkenburgh keeps a full supply of the books, charms, badges, etc., on hand at 106 Camp St.

Dr. Hunnicutt passed through the city Tuesday, en route home from the Opelousas District Conference at Lake Charles. The Conference was quite a success as a revival. The Doctor secured $850 towards the endowment of Centenary. He was much pleased with that part of Louisiana.

A note from Dr. J. D. Cameron, of Winona, corrects a mistake which we published from the Winona Times, last week. The item said that Dr. Cameron's wife had fallen heir to $50,000 by a case gained in a Tennessee court. The corrected statement is that the estate is valued at $50,000, and that Mrs. Cameron is one of several heirs.

Rev. F. N. Parker, the secretary of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, requests the presiding elders to inform him at the earliest date possible of the time when their District Conferences will be held, and where. We hope the presiding elders will cooperate with the secretary in arranging for a missionary mass meeting at each Conference.

—Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., writes: "I have had a great deal of sickness in my family this winter, but we are improving. My congregations are good and there are some signs of life."

—Rev. G. W. Gordon writes from Coffeeville, Miss.: "The Woman's Missionary Society of the Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, will meet in Coffeeville, April 30. The societies intending to send delegates will please write me by the middle of April. The Grenada District Conference will convene in Coffeeville, May 1. Pastors are requested to send to me the names of delegates from their respective charges, and how they will come, etc. Please do this by April 15, or sooner. Let all come expecting a good time. May God bless our town!"

—Rev. F. M. Keon writes from South Vicksburg: "Our people rented a house for us, and furnished it very handsomely at a cost of about $225. They have evidently had good training, and I will say for them they are trainable. I have been able, by divine help, to fill all of my appointments except on the fourth Sunday in January, when I was called away to attend the funeral of my father. This was a sad affliction to me; but the gospel we preach sustains me. He was ready. I have organized an Epworth League; have a very enthusiastic membership. I have cleared over half of the deck; made 220 pastoral visits, received 23 members, baptized 3 children, married 2 couples, conducted 1 funeral. Our first Quarterly Conference was an occasion of delight to us all. Mrs. K.'s health is much better here than it was in Amite City. Will begin a series of meetings on the second Sabbath in April. Bro. J. T. Nicholson will assist me. Pray that we may have a gracious revival."

—Rev. J. A. Bowen, writing from Aberdeen, Miss., says: "The good Lord is blessing us here wonderfully. Our men's prayer meeting, on Monday night, is the greatest power for good I ever saw. We average over seventy men at these meetings. Sometimes we have conversions! The ladies' prayer meeting, on Tuesday afternoon, is a power for good also. These, with the regular Wednesday night prayer meetings and the young ladies' meetings, on Thursday, together with our growing Sunday-school, with over 200 pupils and teachers, and fine congregations, give us great encouragement for the year. Come to see us."

—Rev. J. W. Tinnin writes from Waynesboro, Miss.: "We are at our post on the Winchester circuit. Prospects are bright for a successful year. We have a very pleasant work among a kind and appreciative people. Have a new comfortable parsonage, the work of my predecessor. My first Quarterly Conference convened Saturday, fourteenth instant. Bro. T. L. Mellen, P. E., was on hand and preached with great power as usual. He comforted, encouraged and strengthened us in the work. We have received twelve new subscribers to the ADVOCATE and have organized two Woman's Missionary Societies. God bless the ADVOCATE!"

—"Pastor" writes from Hazlehurst, Miss.: "Our tent for the Inge meeting has arrived. It will seat about 2,000. The various committees have been appointed and will begin work soon. The I. C. railroad will be asked to give reduced rates. We expect immense crowds. Bro. Ingo and his singer, Bro. Evans, will arrive here May 9, and meeting will begin May 10. Our people will gladly entertain the ministers who may come. Any minister who wishes to enjoy a good meeting send us his name and we will find him a home. Our 'tilt' here with the theatre, our leading citizens say, has done much good, and the war clouds are all gone. A fine new church and a grand revival will have our time and heart. Thanks to our friend in Jackson county, Miss., for forty dollars to assist a young minister at college. God bless such men!"

To Those Lacking "Parchments."

By an unavoidable accident there were not enough certificates of ordination to deacons' and elders' orders to "go round" at the late Conference in Monroe. The list of those lacking was lost. Will the brethren kindly give me their names and offices and tell me the order, and I will send certificates at once. A. G. HAYGOOD.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference:

The Board of Church Extension of the Mississippi Conference at its last session appropriated about $400 out of funds of 1891 to help, in the "nick of time," several struggling churches. The demand is upon us. What can an empty treasury do? I suggest that every preacher send in half of his assessment. Bee Lake station—Jas. G. Galloway, P. C.—has set a good example; paid the full assessment several weeks ago. Dr. Morton writes me to send on his half as speedily as possible. The Parent Board needs money. Don't forget to remit by postoffice order or bank check on Vicksburg, and mail same to me at Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss. THOS. A. HOLLOMAN,

Treasurer.

Will not every auxiliary to W. P. and H. M. Society that has been organized in the Mississippi Conference send some money, so that we can aid the Central Committee, which meets next month, in giving relief to those who are suffering. Applications for aid in the Mississippi Conference are before us. A small contribution from every church member would make a large amount, and, oh! how it would gladden the hearts of our brave heroes and heroines of the parsonage households. May the good Master stir the hearts of our people, and help them to appreciate the grand opportunity that presents itself in this great work! Those who will meet with us in Jackson, March 25, will please send names to Dr. W. C. Black.

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Columbian Cyclopedia

An Unabridged Dictionary of Language and a Cyclopedia of Universal Knowledge in one; 32 volumes; over 25,000 pages; nearly 7,000 illustrations. Cloth binding, per set, $25.00; half-Morocco, per set, $32.00. Specimen pages free; sample volume returnable, if not wanted, and money refunded. (The Columbian is the new name and new form of ALDEN'S MANIFOLD CYCLOPEDIA.)

CRITICS SAY:

"Will win its way by merit."—Advocate, Pittsburg.

"Must become very popular."—School Journal, New York.

"The work is a treasure, and such a mine of useful information as every family ought to have at hand."—The Standard, Chicago.

"It cannot fail to be appreciated by the great masses of the reading public, who will find in its pages, in compact form, just the information they need."—Messenger, Philadelphia.

"The fields of literature, science, and art, and of all knowledge, are thoroughly gleaned. The topics are ably treated, many illustrations are given, and a vast amount of information is contained in a small space."—Toledo Blade, Toledo, Ohio.

"Its handsome type, numerous illustrations, handy form, neat substantial binding, and, more than all, its skillful editing, which brings within such convenient limits such a vast amount of knowledge so well adapted to popular needs, are a satisfaction and a delight to students."—Bankers' Monthly, Chicago.

CUSTOMERS SAY:

"I think it is a grand work, and seldom, if ever, have occasion to refer to it without finding what I want."—F. J. C. SCHNEIDER, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

"It is a continual surprise to me that a work of its scope and excellence could be published at such a low price. It is more than excellent."—HARRY G. SINNIE, City of Mexico.

"It is very neat, the form convenient for use, firmly bound, of large, clear type, the contents of just that general character which the popular reader requires—comprehensive, accurate, and compact."—PROF. HENRY N. DAY, LL.D., Yale College.

"In a library in the collection of which I have been engaged more than 40 years, I esteem no book more highly than 'Alden's Manifold Cyclopedia.' From its pages, I have been able to find an answer, appropriate and clear, to every question that needed it, and when I shall receive the final volume I shall feel that access to all the necessary information for my practical life shall have been placed within my reach."—JAMES L. MIGUN, formerly Secretary of State, and Librarian of Missouri.

A Great Offer. $5.00 cash and a further payment of $20.00 in 16 installments of $1.25 each will secure immediately by express, volumes 1 to 16, in cloth binding, the remaining volumes being delivered as the installments are paid; or a first payment of $8.00 and 16 installments of $1.50 each will secure the same in half-Morocco binding. Order immediately, as this offer is made subject to withdrawal without notice.

NEW BASIN. NEW ORLEANS.

This Rose was raised and named by George Washington over 100 years ago and is described in the Mount Vernon Bible Book. It is the only hardy perpetual blooming climber known and a plant of it will produce more than twice as many flowers as any other rose. It will commence blooming almost as soon as planted and produce hundreds and even thousands of elegant flowers the first summer. Either in the garden or in pots it is full of bloom at all times, the flowers growing in great clusters—often 50 or 100 in a bunch. Color pure white, perfectly double to the center and of unsurpassed fragrance. Buds beautiful long and pointed like the finest Tea Roses. Perfectly hardy, and will grow up over a door, gate or window, and always full of bloom from early Spring until late Autumn. It is the most wonderful rose in cultivation, and was first introduced by us last year, and we are headquarters for genuine stock. Fine plants for immediate blooming, by mail, postpaid, guaranteed to arrive in good condition, 30 cents each; 4 for $1; or for 50 cents we will mail the Rose, 1 Giant Fairy Lily and 1 Golden Yellow Gladiolus. Also 5 Rare New Plants at 30c each, or the five for $1.00, as follows: Solanum Grandiflora, true Manettia Vine, Rainbow Cactus, Great Spider Lily and Butterfly Orchid. Each is a gem of rare beauty.

ALSO THE FOLLOWING EXTRA CHOICE COLLECTIONS BY MAIL POSTPAID:

12 Extra choice mixed Gladiolus, flowering bulbs,	25c.	4 Superb New Grapes, including Niagara,	50c.
6 New Double Pearl Tuberoses " "	25c.	5 Grand Lilies, 5 sorts, including Auratum,	50c.
5 Rare Chrysanthemums, 5 sorts named,	50c	5 " Cacti, different sorts named,	50c.
5 Ornamental Flowering Shrubs, named,	50c.	20 Bulbs and 10 pkts. Flower Seeds, all different.	50c.

The above 8 collections and the Mary Washington Rose, by mail, postpaid, for only $3.00.

Our Young People.

A Famous Trial Trip.

Robert Fulton was not the first person to think of applying steam power to navigation. Before his day, several inventors had sought to prove the practicability of such an application. But it remained for Fulton to make the final test, and to actually give to the world one of its most useful and profitable inventions. For years he had studied and worked to this end. Now the ship was built, and the time had come for the trial voyage. Harper's Young People thus describes the short but momentous journey: "It was on a morning in August, 1807, that the Clermont, all completed, with its engine duly equipped and fixed—a novel sight for the lookers-on to see—lay moored at her dock in the North river. The momentous day for her first trip had arrived. A crowd assembled at the dock to see her start. Fulton, with beating heart, stood on the little deck, surrounded by a group of curious and anxious friends. The word was given, the engine was started, and the Clermont pushed out into the stream. Then after going a little way the boat suddenly stopped. It was a moment of harrowing suspense to the brave inventor. Some hitch in the machinery was speedily discovered. It was quickly set aright, and the Clermont, amid murmurs of wonder and delight, resumed her voyage. As she steamed up the Hudson, by the Palisades, between the lofty banks of Yonkers and Tarrytown, passed the wooded heights of West Point, the country people from miles around gathered on the shore on either side to watch her progress. They were bewildered and terrified. The Clermont, indeed, seemed to their eyes 'a monster moving on the water, defying winds and tide, and breathing flames and smoke.' When the crews of the river boats heard the rumble of her machinery and the splashing of her paddles, and saw the steam and sparks bursting from her valves and funnels, they fled below deck in their fright, or, prostrating themselves on deck, prayed to be protected from the 'horrible creature which was marching on the tides, and lighting its path by the fires which it vomited.' The Clermont, however, reached Albany in safety, and Fulton and his friends stepped exultingly on shore. His great end, after so many years of difficulty, trial and perseverance, was at last accomplished. Steam navigation had become a fact. The great test had been successful, and thenceforth all the waters of the earth were to swarm with steam vessels, of which the little Clermont was the parent and the pioneer."—Exchange.

A friend in need is Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. More families should know it, and use it.

A Little Girl with Two Faces.—I heard a strange thing the other day! It was of a little girl who had two faces! When she is dressed up in her best clothes, when some friends are expected to come to tea, or when she is going out with her mother to call on some neighbors, she looks so bright and sweet and good that you would like to kiss her. With a nice white dress on, and perhaps a blue sash, and pretty little shoes, she expects her mother's friends will say: "What a little darling!" or, "What a sweet face, let me kiss it!" And so she always has a nice smile on her face, and when she is spoken to she says: "Yes, ma'am," "No, ma'am," when she ought, and "Thank you," very sweetly, when anything is given her.

But do you know, when she is alone with her mother, and no company is expected, she does not look at all like the same little girl. If she can not have what she would like, or do just what she wishes, she will pout and scream, and cry, and no one would ever think of kissing her then.

So you see, this little girl has two faces; one she uses in company, and puts it on just like her best dress; and the other she wears when she is at home alone with her mother.

I also know a little girl who has only one face, which is always as sweet as a peach, and never sweeter than when she is at home, and her mother wants her to be as useful as she can and help her. I think I need scarcely ask you which of these little girls you like best, or which of them you would like most to resemble.—Selected.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl eleven years old. My grandma takes the Advocate. I enjoy reading the children's letters so much that it has induced me to write. My mama died nearly four years ago. She left four little children. I am the oldest one of them. I was then only seven years old. We have since that time lived with our grandparents, where I like very much to live. I lost my oldest little sister last summer, which makes me feel very sad and lonely. Before she died she bid each of us good-by, asking us to meet her in heaven. I now have only one little sister, five years old, and one brother aged seven years. My papa lives in Harriston. He often comes to see us. My little brother and myself are going to school to Miss Annie McLaurin, who we love very much. I will answer Marvin McDonald's question. There are 3,566,480 letters in the Bible. I will close by asking, Where is the word "reverend" found in the Bible?

Your little friend,

Mary E. Costley.

Harriston, Miss.

Mr. Editor: I have written to the Advocate once before, and found my letter in print, and thought I would try it again. I love to read the little cousins' letters very much. I have three sisters and two brothers. I am the youngest child. I am ten years old and go to school at Fairview College, at this place. My papa is pastor of this church. I am a member of the M. E. Church, South. My oldest brother is married. I study second arithmetic, third geography, first grammar, fifth reader and spelling. My Sunday-school teacher's name is Mr. George Aust. There are about twelve in my class. I will close by asking a question: Where is "backbone" first found in the Bible? Wishing the dear Advocate much success, I remain,

Your little friend,

Mattie Langford.

Binnsville, Miss.

Mr. Editor: I am a little boy nine years old. I have been wanting to write to the Advocate for some time. I enjoy reading the letters so much. I have been going to school. My teacher's name is Miss M. Hopper, and I do love her so much. I also go to Sunday-school. My teacher's name is Mrs. Brassfield, and I love her, too, very much. Dr. West is my minister. He has been sent back to us for another year, and we are very glad, for we like him so much. Our Bishop was with us, and lectured on missions, Saturday night. We enjoyed it a great deal. Whereabouts in the Bible is the parable of the lost sheep? I will close, wishing the Advocate much success.

Your little friend,

Johnnie Bang.

Wesson, Miss.

People who value time always use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup to get rid of a cold.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl twelve years old. My father takes the Advocate, and I enjoy reading the cousins' letters. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. There has been a prize offered to the children under twelve years old that will memorize the most verses of Scripture, and I am working for it. I know fifty-five verses. For fear my letter will be thrown in the waste-basket, I will close by asking the question: What was the first miracle performed, and where is it found? Wishing the Advocate success, I remain,

Your little friend,

Annie Bates.

Fireside Ministry.

The ministry of the fireside is the most important of all ministries: Where that is for evil, the church and Sunday-school are all but powerless. Where it is for good, how great the sum of that good—how effective is that ministry! Too much dependence is often placed upon institutions outside the home—the Sunday-school, the academic school, upon books and reading. All these are valuable, and rightly used serve a noble purpose. But beyond and above these is the ministry of the fireside of a happy Christian home. There is no question of the divine right of such a ministry! Assuredly, no education is so effective nor so lasting as that in which the affections are enlisted, in which the wants and needs of the daily life are closely woven. The few hours in the daily school may be cultivated to good purpose; the hour and a half in church every week; the hour in Sunday-school—we know how good these are. But the plummet of the home reaches deeper depths. The hours passed day and night for many years under one roof with the father and mother, the brothers and sisters and friends; the hours begun in one room, and that the nursery, but how quickly extended to every room in the house!—the hours at the several meals at morning, noon and night; the hours filled with the attrition of home duties and discussions, and the issues constantly arising, in which the individuality of every member of the family is by turn involved; such an education as this—compared with it, what is the education of the Sunday-school, the day-school, or the college?

With such overshadowing importance attaching to the home, how necessary that its influence should be for good, that the home should be made the cheeriest and dearest spot on earth. All homes are not this; and who shall say what wasted lives might not have been saved for future usefulness had the home been made attractive? Indeed, the wail that to-day goes up from Darkest England and from the festering, vice-breeding portions of our own great cities, is the cry of "no home." Extremes meet: the schools and the slums declare the same lesson, the one from its hope and the other from its despair—that the fathers and mothers of the republic and their children are the product of the home; that it is here the hope or the fear of the country lies, and that the true ministry of life is the ministry of the fireside.—Christian at Work.

Canon Kingsley, in the following lines, tells how to derive a blessing from a few moments at the close of day:

It is wise at night to read—but for a few minutes—some books which will compose and soothe the mind; which will bring us face to face with the facts of life, death and eternity; which will make us remember that man doth not live by bread alone; which will give us before we sleep a few thoughts worthy of a Christian man with an immortal soul in him. And, thank God, no one need go far to find such books. I do not mean merely religious books, excellent as they are in these days; I mean any books which help to make us better and wiser and soberer and more charitable persons; any books which will teach us to despise what is vulgar and mean, foul and cruel, and to love what is noble and high-minded, pure and just. In our own English language we may read by hundreds books which will tell of all virtue and of all praise; the stories of good men and women; of gallant and heroic actions; of deeds which we ourselves should be proud of doing; of persons whom we feel to be better, wiser, nobler, than we are ourselves.

I would say to all: Use your gentlest voice at home. Watch it day by day, as a pearl of great price; for it will be worth more to you in days to come than the best pearl hid in the sea. A kind voice is joy, like a lark's song, to a hearth at home. It is a light that sings as well as shines. Train it to sweet tones now, and it will keep in tune through life. —Elihu Burrit.

Intelligence in Plants.

Mr. T. D. Ingersoll, of Erie, Pa., describes, in Garden and Forest, a Madeira vine which seemed to exhibit intelligence in its growth. When it had become eighteen inches high it began, from top-heaviness, to fall away from the pot, which stood upon a table, towards the floor. "This was done gradually, and apparently with conscious care. It seemed to feel at times that it was letting itself down too fast, when it would stop with a jerk, like a nodding child half asleep." When near the floor it began describing ellipses about three inches in diameter with its upturned extremity. When twenty-seven inches long it would describe a crescent-shaped loop seventeen inches long by six inches broad in about two hours. As it grew longer, its revolutions were accomplished with less regularity, "and at times it drooped as if weary or discouraged in trying to find something upon which it might entwine itself." On one day the track of the tip of the vine was traced and measured, and found to be six feet nine inches in length. Finally, a support was provided for the plant, and it shortly afterward "began growing again as if it had recovered from what had been for six days a condition near the point of death." Another vine, during several days of cloudy weather, uncoiled itself from the stick and reached away toward the light at an angle with the horizon of some forty-five degrees. It was bought back to its support several times and coiled about the stick, but invariably left it during the continuance of the cloudy weather. Then bright weather came on, and it showed no disposition to escape from the stick or stop its twining growth. Attempts to make plants twine in a direction contrary to their natural one were firmly resisted. "All the experiments seemed to show how much like an animal was the plant in its sensitiveness, not only to change of light and temperature, but to harsh treatment. Whenever restrained or forced, no matter how tenderly, out of its natural method of growth, all progress was retarded and the health of the vine disturbed to a marked degree. Plants seem to be creatures of feeling, and the similarity of movement and of purpose apparent between them and the lower animals are used to strengthen their theory by those who hold to the doctrine of the identity of life in the two kingdoms."—Popular Science.

The Great Railway Bridge at Quebec.

Arrangements are being made to begin the erection shortly of a gigantic railway bridge at Quebec, which will very materially affect the traffic of the two great railways of Canada—the Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific—as well as an important part of the railway system of the New England States. The great depth of the St. Lawrence river opposite the ancient city of Quebec has hitherto been an effective augument against the building of a bridge, but engineering skill has overcome this obstacle with a scheme to build a cantilever bridge which will cost close upon $10,000,000. The width of the current from shore to shore is 24,000 feet. The two main piers will be constructed of solid granite in 40 feet of water, about 500 feet from each shore. These two piers will support a cantilever bridge of 1,442 feet. The total length of the bridge, with the approaches, will be 34,000 feet. The top of the bridge from high water mark will be 408 feet, and the masts of the largest ocean steamers will be able to pass under it. The principal object in building the bridge is to connect the Intercolonial railway from Halifax and St. John to Quebec, which is run by the Canadian government at a great annual loss to the country, with the Canadian Pacific railway. This is the only link uncompleted necessary to give the Canadian Pacific railway an uninterrupted line from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans through Canadian territory.—American Manufacturer.

We the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

SHAW—The living never reflect more decent honors upon themselves than when they confer deserved tributes of praise and affection upon the worthy dead. The death of a faithful son makes a vacancy in the home and in the heart of the mother that can never be filled in this world.

JOHN ALEXANDER SHAW, youngest child of John and Flora Shaw, was born in West Feliciana parish, La., Nov. 5, 1860, and died Jan. 16, 1891. When yet a child of twelve years he was converted and became a member of the Methodist Church, the church of his mother. He was ever noted for his devotion to his mother, who was keeping house for him and her other two children at the time of his death. He came to his death after protracted and painful suffering from a gunshot wound which he received on Cat Island, Jan. 6.

As others, of course, he naturally loved life; but when informed by his physician that he could not recover, he said, "I am not afraid to die." He had tried to keep from the sins of men, and now committed himself to God in prayer, and left the world with the words of prayer on his lips. Let all take warning from his unexpected call into eternity not to delay preparation for death. A dying-bed is not the place to prepare for eternity. By our daily lives our eternal destinies are fixed. We trust that his state is one of blessedness, as his end was one of peace.

H.

TALIAFERRO—Our young brother, FRANK CLIFTON TALIAFERRO, was taken suddenly in his young manhood from his family and home on earth to his home above on Jan. 23, 1891. He was the son of A. P. and Lizzie Taliaferro, of Evergreen, Avoyelles parish, La. He was born on Oct. 27, 1868, making him twenty-three years three months old at the time of his death. Clifton was happily married to Miss Rowena Fisher, Oct. 30, 1889. They lived together only fifteen months. She mourns the loss of an affectionate, kind and loving husband; but while she is so lonely and sad, together with his parents, two brothers, and one sister to weep, they weep not as those who have no hope. He was beloved by all who knew him for his worthy traits of character, and was one of the most industrious, temperate, prudent young men of our community.

Cliff. was born and raised at Evergreen, and lived there until recently, when he moved to his new home on Bayon Boeuff, where he was hard at work and, perhaps, exposed himself too much during the inclement weather we had about that time. He was taken sick, and it soon terminated into congestion. Everything was done by physicians and friends that could be done, but all in vain—the Lord saw best to take him home. Death is no respecter of persons; the young, the beloved become his victim. He has entered the portals.

FRED WHITE.

HAGAN—Died on Feb. 6, 1891, at her home, in Warren county, Miss., Mrs. M. L. HAGAN, wife of C. B. Hagan.

She was for many years a consistent member of the militant church, and at the age of sixty years joined the church triumphant. She was a faithful wife, a kind, gentle, patient mother, an amiable sister, a true friend. She was loved and esteemed by all who knew her. A good woman has gone, leaving behind to mourn her loss a husband and five sons. Oh! that they may, as she, shoulder the crosses of life cheerfully, bear them patiently and lay them down victoriously.

The last act of her life was to call her boys to her bedside, remind them of her past precepts, exhort them to lead a useful Christian life, bid all good-by and asked them to meet her in heaven. What could be more beautiful? May the God of all comfort lavish his richest blessing upon and pour the balm of Gilead into the wounded hearts of those who remain to mourn her death! W. M. S.

TARVER—Rev. ELIJAH L. TARVER was born Dec. 8, 1811, and died at his residence, near Adams Church, in Lincoln county, Miss., 1890. In 1823 he joined the church at Adams under the ministry of Rev. J. G. Jones, and was married to Elizabeth Powell, June 7, 1832. Four sons and four daughters were born of them. The sons all died before the father; but the daughters are all living. The mother died March 11, 1883. He was married to Miss Lizzie Lamkin, April 15, 1884, who survives him.

The date of his first license to preach is not at hand, but supposed to be in 1841. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Paine, Dec. 8, 1867, and elder by Bishop Kavanaugh, December, 1871. He was a local preacher in the Methodist Church almost fifty years, and did faithful service. In the infirmity of age, when sight was too dim for him to read the lessons of Scripture, he continued to preach, inviting such help as seemed to be available in conducting the services. For some months during his last sickness he kept up the usual family devotions with the assistance of his wife, even while he was confined to his room. Approaching death was no terror to him. He spoke of it, and exherted friends to meet him in the better world. In the evening time of his life the fruit of early consecration to God was visible.

"Uncle Lija" was loved most by those who knew him best. His integrity was never doubted. He stood upon the solid rock of righteousness. In business and religion he almed to have clean hands and a pure heart. He impressed his religion upon his family. His children, as they came up, followed him in their church relations. The gospel lived and preached by him was treasure in an earthen vessel; the vessels perish, but "the memery of the just is blessed."

J. W. SANDELL.

HOWELL—Died on February 19, JOSEPH M. HOWELL, son of Bettie Howell. This noble young man, twenty years and some months old, was converted under the ministry of Rev. Joe Jones, about twelve months ago. He joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consistent member of the same till his death.

He was ever ready to bear testimony of the power of Christ to save, and on his death-bed he had the presence of his Savior with him to bear him over death's chilling flood. When the fatal hour came, he talked freely of the goodness of God, spoke of his present happiness, prayed God's blessings upon the loved ones that he was leaving behind, and just before his spirit took its everlasting flight back to the God that gave it, it poised for a moment to wave back "palms of victory, crowns of glory," and to give some evidence of the "power of Christ to save to the uttermost all who come unto him." May the God that saved him comfort the bereaved ones!

JAS. G. CAMMACK.

SCOTT—Sister MARTHA L. SCOTT, daughter of W. P. and Nancy Ingram, was born in Franklin county, N. C., May 24, 1820, and died near Coldwater, Miss., Jan. 26, 1891. She came to Hardeman county, Tenn., with her parents in 1835, and made a profession of religion in 1843 or '44, and joined the Methodist Church in the same year. In May, 1849, she was married to Samuel C. Scott.

She was a devoted wife, mother, and sister, and possessed the Christian spirit of the Master. Her illness was protracted. Realizing that the time of dissolution was near at hand, she said she was ready and willing to go. Although she was not able to speak clearly just before her death, yet she gave every indication that her mind was clear and that there were no fears and doubts in her way. Her death was like a calm, beautiful sunset. Her life was one of trust in the unfailing grace of a precious Savior, and as she lived she died. While we mourn her loss, we submit, realizing that our loss is her eternal gain.

Her brother, C. G. INGRAM.

GIBSON—Mrs. MARY GIBSON was born in Green county, Miss., Oct. 11, 1808; died Feb. 8, 1891. She lived a consistent member of the Baptist Church for sixty-five years.

Her old home, now the home of her son, Daniel Gibson, was always the home of the preacher and of all Christians. She leaves four children and a number of grandchildren to mourn her loss. L. S. WARD.

An Ancient Physician's Wisdom.

Galen writes: "It is vain to speak of cures or think of remedies, until such time as we have considered of the causes." The cause of many diseases is want of vitality. Compound Oxygen is a vitalizer, and strikes directly at the root and source of the disease, by imparting new strength and vigor to every organ of the body. We submit a few testimonials from those who have helped themselves by means of Compound Oxygen. Here is what they say:

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN—"I have used your Home Treatment of Compound Oxygen for catarrh. I can safely recommend it." R. C. FOSTER, Greenville, S. C. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"About six years ago I had a number of lung hemorrhages, followed by fever and great exhaustion. I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment, hemorrhages ceased, appetite returned, slept well and general health became better than it had been for years." REV. C. A. DUNCAN, Pastor of Presbyterian Church, Jonesboro, Tenn.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I believe the Compound Oxygen Treatment as dispensed by you to be an invaluable remedy, because of the incalculable benefit I received from its use." REV. A. M. SMITH, Pastor Evangelical Lutheran Church, Myersville, Md., Aug. 6, 1888. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment is the most rational means of relief in all throat and lung troubles, also in nervous complaints." H. W. BRADLEY, M. D., Griffiths, Ga.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

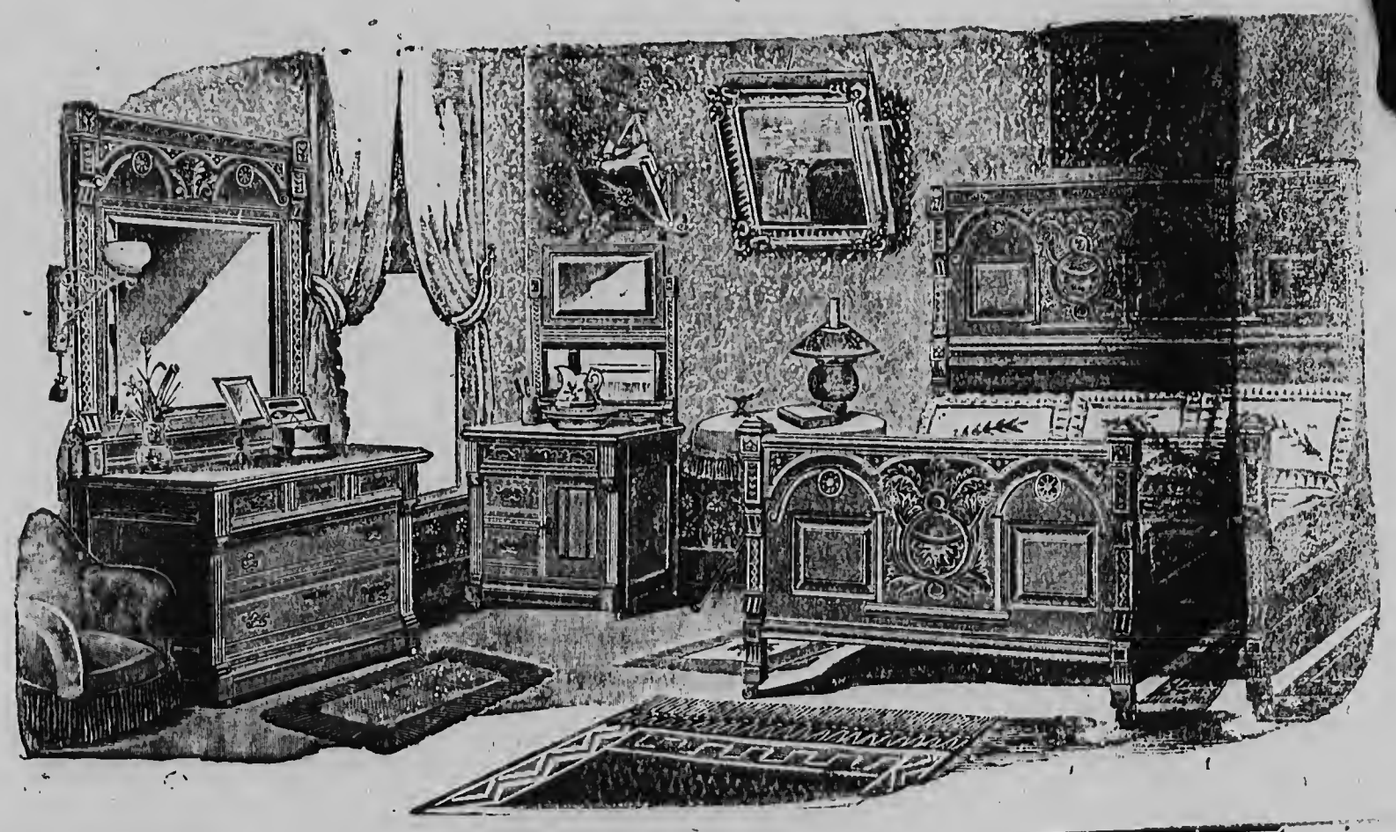
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the finest, in the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and will guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly, and more rapidly during the past year, and the many trifles which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Flowers.

What man, woman, or child is there that does not admire flowers and beautiful plants? But few have any idea of the magnitude the business of growing them for seed or sale may become unless intimately connected with the business. The case of John Lewis Childs of Floral Park, Queens county, N. Y., fully illustrates this. He has some of the most beautifully located grounds in the country situated as they are upon the most fertile and picturesque Long Island and but a little over twelve miles from New York and Brooklyn. By strict integrity and attention to business Mr. Childs has gathered a list of customers which takes in not only this country, but China, Japan and Australia, besides all parts of Europe. After viewing his establishment it is easy to believe that it is one of the largest for the growing and sale of seeds and plants by retail in the country. Mr. Childs' annual catalogue is handsome and useful and is many times worth the cost of sending for it. It gives an extremely large list of ornamental flowering plants and shrubs to select from, and will suit the most fastidious. For further particulars read his advertisement in another column.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never swaps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church, in this city, was burned on March 23. Loss estimated at $50,000; insurance, $40,000.

Gen. Joseph E. Johnston, the last (excepting Gen. Beauregard) of the six full generals of the Confederacy, died in Washington, D. C., on March 21, aged eighty-four years.

John D. Rockefeller's bequest of $100,000 to the American Baptist Education Society, notice of which has just been received by the Executive Board, makes $300,000 in all that he has given to the same fund.

Another serious break in the levees occurred on March 21. It is at Concord Plantation, about six miles below Lake Providence, in East Carroll parish. The crevasse was 500 feet wide on the twenty-second.

The production of gold in the United States, according to the official estimate of the United States Mint, was $32,800,000 in 1889, and according to the estimate of Mr. Valentine, of Wells, Fargo & Co., the production in 1890 was $31,795,361, with total of the two years of $64,000,000.

A call signed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has been published. It is addressed to the trade and labor unions of America, and urges the necessity of immediate action in the collection and contributing of funds for the 150,000 coal miners whose struggle for an 8-hour day is to begin May 1.

A distinguished party, consisting of Hon. Redfield Proctor, secretary of war; Brigadier-General R. N. Batcheider, quartermaster general, U. S. A.; Lieutenant T. M. Woodruff, U. S. A., and H. C. Hill and Geo. B. Williams, secretaries of the War Department, reached the city last Friday. They are on a tour of inspection of the military posts in the South. They visited Forts Jackson and St. Philip and also the jetties.

President F. L. Maxwell, of the fifth Louisiana Levee Board, has decided to communicate with the presidents of all the Levee Boards in the Mississippi Valley, with the object of securing a meeting to take action on a plan that, it is believed, will be of great benefit to the valley. The plan is to have an immense map prepared for exhibition at the Chicago World's Fair, showing all the levees in the Mississippi Valley with the lands protected by them. The map will be accompanied by elaborate statistics.

Commissioner Mason, of the Internal Revenue Bureau, has given some figures relative to the bounty on sugar. He estimates that not less than $9,000,000 will be required for the payment of sugar bounties the first year—$8,000,000 for cane sugar, $300,000 for beet and sorghum sugar, and $875,000 for maple sugar. This estimate is based on the production of sugar in 1890, and takes no account of the probable increase in consequence of the bounty of one and three-quarter to two cents per pound, according to saccharine strength.

FOREIGN.

The fund of $2,500,000 which Mr. Peabody left for the poor of London, now amounts to over $5,000,000.

London and Paris have at last been connected by telephone, and conversation has been carried on with perfect success between the two cities.

The remains of the late Prince Napoleon was entombed in Turin, Italy, on March 20. The will of the dead prince designates Prince Louis Napoleon, one of his sons, as the head of the imperial house of Bonaparte.

The municipal authorities of Berlin are urging the government to forbid the selling of Paris mutuals, on the ground that they will prove to be destructive of morals in Germany as they have been in France.

The Chilian government has bought through its agents in Hamburg several steamers which are able to travel at a high rate of speed. It is announced that these vessels will be fully equipped as cruisers and will be employed by the government to operate against the insurgents.

Notwithstanding the stringent measures recently taken by the government to suppress brigandage in Cuba, kidnapping is still carried on at intervals. The latest work of the bandits was the carrying off of a youth near Santagra, who was kept in captivity until his friends had paid the ransom of $510 demanded by his captors.

The people of Newfoundland are much incensed against the home government on account of the fisheries troubles, and will send delegates to London to protest against the position in which they are placed. If more satisfactory arrangements are refused, it is said Newfoundland will make formal application for admission to the Union.

Dispatches received by the Berlin foreign office from St. Petersburg convey unwelcome information, pointing to the conclusion of a formal treaty of alliance between France and Russia. Until recently the Czar had resisted all attempts of going beyond an entente with France. It is said that, as a consequence of the alliance, the Czar will confer upon the President of France the highest Russian decoration.

At the annual Home Rule Union meeting at the National Liberal Club, in London, Justin McCarthy expressed perfect confidence in Mr. Gladstone's intentions. At the same time, Mr. McCarthy said, he did not attach great importance to written assurances, but looked far beyond the promises of any statesman, whom death might remove to-morrow, to the intentions and principles of the great English people.

Health and Happiness are Inseparable.

This depends largely upon the state of the liver, which a dose of Maguire's Cundurango one hour before breakfast will keep in good condition. Prevents indigestion and costiveness. 75 cents per bottle.

A Pure Baking Powder.

A BAKING powder that can be depended upon to be free from lime and alum is a desideratum in these days of adulterated food. So far as can be judged from the official reports, the "Royal" seems to be the only one yet found by chemical analyses to be entirely without one or the other of these substances, and absolutely pure. This, it is shown, results from the exclusive use by its manufacturers of cream of tartar specially refined and prepared by patent processes which totally remove the tartrate of lime and other impurities. The cost of this chemically pure cream of tartar is much greater than any other, and it is used in no baking powder except the "Royal," the manufacturers of which control the patents under which it is refined.

Dr. Edward G. Love, formerly analytical chemist for the U. S. Government, who made the analyses for the New York State Board of Health in their investigation of baking powders, and whose intimate knowledge of the ingredients of all those sold in this market enables him to speak authoritatively, says of the purity, wholesomeness, and superior quality of the "Royal:"

"I find the Royal Baking Powder composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substance."

Prof. Love's tests, and the recent official tests by both the United States and Canadian Governments, show the Royal Baking Powder to be superior to all others in strength and leavening power. It is not only the most economical in use, but makes the purest, finest-flavored and most wholesome food.

HOW BABIES SUFFER

When their tender SKINS are literally ON FIRE with ITCHING AND BURNING ECZEMAS and other Itching, Scaly, and Blotchy Skin and Scalp Diseases, none but mothers realize.

To know that a single application of the Cuticura Remedies will, in the great majority of cases, afford instant and complete relief, permit rest and sleep, and point to a permanent and economical (because so speedy) cure, and not to use them without a moment's delay, is to be guilty of positive inhumanity. No greater legacy can be bestowed upon a child than a skin without blemish and a body nourished with pure blood.

CUTICURA

Remedies are the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies, are absolutely pure, and may be used from infancy to age, from pimples to scrofula, with the most gratifying and unfailing success.

TREATMENT. — CUTICURA, the great skin cure, and CUTICURA SOAP, an exquisite skin purifier and beautifier, externally, instantly allay the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, soothe and heal raw and irritated surfaces, clear the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and restore the hair, while CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities and poisonous elements, and thus removes the cause.

"ALL ABOUT THE BLOOD, SKIN, SCALP, AND HAIR" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 Testimonials. A book of priceless value to mothers.

CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Facial Blemishes, pimples, blackheads, red, rough, and oily skin and hands, and simple humors and skin blemishes of infancy and childhood are prevented and cured by that most effective of all Skin Purifiers and Beautifiers, the celebrated Cuticura Soap. Incomparably superior to all other skin and complexion soaps, while rivalling in delicacy and purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only preventive of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of most facial blemishes. Price, 25c.

The Young Preacher—No. 10.

BY AN OLD MINISTER.

MONEY AND BUSINESS.

As an itinerant preacher, you are ot likely to accumulate much money; ut you have to have and handle some oney in various sorts of transactions; nd it is most desirable on this line ou should not only be pure, but unuspected. You must avoid debt. I ave known some excellent and gifted reachers whose usefulness was almost estroyed by small debts—borrowing nd neglecting, or forgetting, to pay. t an able minister was preaching, and wo men on the same pew, A and B, at he close of the sermon should talk as ollows, you can see at a glance the sad esult. "A" says: "That's a fine sermon. The preacher is, no doubt, a most capable and worthy man." "B" nswers: "Do you know he owes me a ill of a hundred and forty dollars for ighteen months past, and I can't get dollar out of him." Don't you see it would knock the bottom clean out of hat sermon, and utterly destroy its ower for good? You must live within your means, or you must retire from he pastoral work. To live on your mall salary will require some nice alculations and stringent economy. It's rather a difficult problem you will e called on to solve—how, with narow means, to pay your bills and keep up a decent and moderately genteel ppearance. If you and yours are eedy and shabby, it will prove an obtacle to your success. I know an old inister, who, for more than a half entury—sometimes on a very small alary, and sometimes larger salaries—as kept out of debt; but he never hewed, smoked, or snuffed tobacco; ever drank, wore jewelry, or went to laces of amusement; wore plain, decent clothes, and made them last as long as he could. You may say these are small economies; admitted, but hey are of large importance to men whose salaries are small, and whose reputations are as delicate as a woman's. If you have not acquired the art of making a little go the length of your real needs, you must learn it; it is most important to you as an itinerant minister.

My observation is, it is most prudent for the minister to say little about money, so far as he is personally concerned. I have known some preachers to seriously discount their usefulness by talking too much about money for their support. Of course, they were, and should have been, interested about the support of their families; but their method was injudicious, and hindered, more than it helped to secure, what they sought, besides subjecting them to the suspicion of being worldly and self-seeking. It's better to show, by your zeal for the spiritual welfare of your hearers, that their salvation is the supreme concern to you. Win their love, and, as a rule, they will provide for your temporal needs. It does not appear in the Gospels that Christ said anything about his temporal needs; but the respect and love he inspired caused those who had means, of "their substance," to minister to his needs, and often to share their hospitality. It does not appear that Paul took up a collection to meet his necessities, though he asked such collections for needy saints, who were suffering the "spoiling of their goods," and the loss of home and employment, for Christ's sake. But he mentions with gratitude the spontaneous gifts of their love in ministering to his necessities. Care for the church, win its love by kindly sympathy and zeal according to knowledge, and it will care for your temporal wants.

We must, as ministers, resign the "world." Its material wealth and political honors are not for you. You belong to a kingdom that is not of this world, and your reward is in heaven. Remember the Savior's blessing was pronounced on character, and not on circumstances. "Blessed are the pure in heart," "the peacemakers," "the merciful," and not the rich, learned, powerful and eloquent. You must learn, if you have not already done so, that it is not what we have, but what we are, that makes us blest.

Unless wealth is devoted to some form of usefulness to others, it affords its possessors but little enjoyment. Personally, we can consume but little food or clothing without discomfort, and we can occupy but little room—one chair, one bed, and one book—at a time. You will wish you had money to give in large sums, and, perhaps, sigh that you have so little to give; but if you have really given yourself to God and his work, you have given more than they who are giving even much "of their abundance."

Called Back from the Celestial Gates.

BY REV. W. H. ANDERSON, D. D.

The scene about to be narrated was in the days of our boyhood ministry, on a large four weeks' circuit, where you had "to go," whether you could "preach" or not. The people were poor, but pious and hospitable. Their wealth was mainly in their religious joy, and in the aggregative hope of heaven. "Preachers' homes" were then unaffected by more modern parade and pretence. The itinerant, by a sort of peculiar instinct, could, and did, readily find out the true, cordial Methodist preachers' homes; and some of the dearest of earth's memories are part of the unwritten scenes of the exhibition and power of genuine piety found there.

The home of Bro. B. was a dear spot to the itinerant. He was an old time exhorter of the ardent, tearful, industrious, useful type of other years. His children were all nearly grown, and all in the church. His wife was a devoted, godly woman, full of the true, gentle kindness of the mother in Israel, united with intense convictions of religious duty and privilege and enjoyment, and her life was even-spun, consistent devotion to her Savior. Her religion was largely emotional; she believed in "enjoying religion." Her cup was accustomed to run over. Experimental religion, of the "straitest" Wesleyan sort, was her treasure, duty, life at home and everywhere. She had large faith, and unusual gifts in singing, relation of Christian experience, and in prayer. She read mainly and mostly the entire old Methodist library—Bible, hymn book and Discipline, with an occasional biography of Hester Ann Rogers, etc.; some of Wesley's sermons, and the Advocate—good, healthy, good blood-producing food. To serve God, enjoy religion and make daily progress on her heavenly homeward route, was her all-absorbing, ever-present employment. She commanded the confidence and esteem of a large circle of acquaintances from her every-day piety, the pleasant sunshine her presence seemed always to bring with it. If she had lived in Paul's time, she would have been one of the noble women that helped "the apostles."

In that "mother in Israel" the boy-preacher found one of the best of kind, thoughtful, attentive friends to cheer him in his early ministerial toils and cares. To hear her recite in her artless, child-like manner her conversion, and tell of God's providence and love, was a benediction whose memory still lingers amid the mists and graves of many long, intervening years. Once during his "round" of four weeks on his circuit it was a dear privilege to spend a day or two at this pious home, and the thought of the approaching period was itself an inspiration amid care and labor.

The writer heard that she was ill and nigh unto death, and determined that, if possible, if God would take his servant home, her preacher would be there when she took her Elijah route for the heavenly country. He felt that to witness such a death would be to him of more value than "a full course of study" in a divinity school; so he took a long, hard ride through the mud and cold of a winter's day, after preaching, to study a glorious lesson in Christian dying, as he had many a one in Christian living, from Sister B. He arrived about the setting of the sun; was met at the door by Bro. B. With a brother's smile and cordial grasp of the hand, the tired itinerant was doubly welcome.

"How is Sister B?" said the preacher.

"Very sick," was the reply. "We are so glad you have come. Wife often expressed a desire to see you, and have you pray with her before she died. Warm yourself by the fire in the sitting-room, and then come into wife's room."

In a short time the preacher entered the sick-chamber, found all the family kneeling round the bedside, and silently joined them on his knees. The sick lady looked as if death had set his ghastly seal upon her face. She was speechless and pulseless. Just then the doctor, a young and prized friend, came in and asked the preacher to retire with him for a moment. When by themselves, the doctor said, partly in jest and partly in earnest: "Now, look here, my patient is very sick; don't disturb her with any Methodist fuss. I want her to get well. She must not be disturbed."

The preacher replied, "Doctor, have you done all you can to restore the sick?"

Reply: "I have done everything I can."

"Well, then," said the preacher, "we will try and see what God will do for her soul."

Doctor smiled and turned away. On return to the sick-chamber, it occurred to the preacher: "Why not ask God in prayer to restore to Sister B., for Christ's sake, her speech, ere she dies, that she may give us her blessing, and throw back to us her triumphant songs, as she crosses the river?" Prayer was offered, and faith claimed the victory. We felt that God was answering prayer, and we watched and waited. As we gazed on her pallid, shrunken face, we noticed the glow of returning life. Her pulse began to beat slowly, but perceptibly. Then, still on our knees, we began to sing one of her favorite hymns,

"On Jordan's stormy banks," etc.

After a verse or two, she opened her eyes, looked tenderly around her, and recognized her preacher. We sang,

"There I shall bathe my weary soul."

Her lips began to move; her eyes beamed forth brightly; she whispered, "Glory!"—she had the keynote of heaven. After a short time she began to praise God aloud, and talked most beautifully, humbly and gratefully about "her glimpses of glory," as she called them, and was almost disposed to regret that "she was called back from the celestial gates." The doctor stood in wonder. He had never seen it after that sort in all his practice. He never afterwards was heard to object to "a Methodist fuss," and afterwards, we believe, gave his heart to God.

It is no idle dream of excited imagination to say that that sick-room was full of beauty, and glory flashed from "the gates ajar." Unseen angels hovered in glad hearts over the place, and the mind of Jesus was full of joy.

In due time God restored her to her family, her friends, and her church, and she died several years after.

Before the time when wordy contests were in the press and elsewhere, her life was a plain, easily read and easily understood treatise on "Scripture holiness," edited and illuminated by the Holy Spirit. The writer often thought of Paul's visit to the third heavens, and of "things it was not lawful for him to utter," as she, in modest, humble, loving manner, hesitatingly referred to her precious experience of her near approach to her "Father's house." The glorious panorama is reserved for the employment and bliss of our heavenly home. There our souls will be able to receive the fullness of redemption, and have a complete vernacular in which to praise God and enjoy the communion of saints in uninterrupted measure forevermore.

That Christian triumph was a richer inheritance to the young preacher than if he had acquired the fortune of a Vanderbilt. It was a new, unanswerable "evidence of Christianity;" it was a new call and a gracious antedated ordination to the work of the itinerant ministry.

Elijah.

BY REV. JOHN PIPES.

The study of the character of a great and good man bestows a benediction which we too often fail to appreciate. Though Elijah's life was largely symbolic, yet it was an authenticated historic fact. He first makes his appearance before the public from the mountains of Gilead, where, doubtless, he was born and raised, spending his minority, subject to his parents' authority, cultivating leeks and onions in the valley, pruning vines on the hills, and housing his father's sheep at night. Here he developed a strong physique, a vigorous mind, and a forceful moral character worthy of imitation. At that time idolatry prevailed to an alarming extent. Ahab was the reigning King of Israel, and Elijah appeared before him and told him plainly there would be no more rain in Israel, only according to his word. For his present safety God hid him away in Cherith, a cave in the bank of the Jordan, where he drank of the brook, and ate his two meals a day, furnished by ravens for, perhaps, a year and a half. Emerging from this solitude, influenced by divine impulse, he goes to the relief of a suffering widow at Sarepta. Her death and that of her child from starvation seeming to her inevitable, she had arranged her plans accordingly. At this moment a quaint-looking man appeared at her door and asked for bread. To him she disclosed her own extreme need; but he insisted that she would lose nothing by dividing her small store with him. This she did, and found his words true. The meal and oil were mysteriously multiplied, and fed her own family and the prophet, too, till the end of the famine. It is said that families that habitually entertain preachers always are prospered. This widow, at least, found it so.

Elijah visited Ahab a second time, and boldly charged him and his idolatrous subjects with being the cause of the wasting famine that God had sent upon the nation. To decide which was the true God, Ahab's or Elijah's, Elijah said, "The God that answers by fire, let him be God." As Baal, the god of Ahab, represented the sun, the source of fire, Ahab could not consistently decline the proposed test. Ahab prepared his altar with the wood and sacrifice upon it. The multitude of his priests were assembled, and they called upon the name of their god from morning till noon, when Elijah reproached and taunted them with severest sarcasm, so exasperating them that they were moved to continue their supplications with greater earnestness till three o'clock in the afternoon. Still there was no sign of fire, and no intimation that their prayers were heard. The other altar, to Elijah's God, with its wood and sacrifice upon it, stood ready; and Ahab, his courtiers and priests assembled about to witness the crisis. Elijah had not appeared, and some were ready to conclude his faith had failed him, and they would see him no more; but, at the critical moment, he was seen wending his way through the multitude, never more self-possessed or dignified in his bearing. He took his stand by the altar, and said: "O Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, hear me," etc. As he prayed fire fell from heaven and consumed the sacrifice, wood and altar, so that not a vestige of them remained. The multitude, overwhelmed, cried out, "The Lord, he is God, and we will worship him." Elijah then marched the priests of Baal aside, and slew them en masse. This done, he repaired to the summit of Carmel, and prayed for rain, and a flood-tide came and drenched the hill after a dronth of three years and six months. May we not pray for rain? Elijah was only a man!

Ahab, overwhelmed with the occurrences of the day, drove home, sixteen miles distant, at his best speed, to tell his wife, Elijah running all the way, just ahead of his chariot, to the very gates of the city. We do not know the object of this race; but may suppose that Elijah, believing that day's work to be the death-blow of idolatrous worship in Israel, concluded that Ahab and Jezebel would be glad to have him as their guest under the new aspect of things. Meeting with a bitter threat from Jezebel, he fled for his life, traveling so rapidly that when he came to Beersheba, his servants, overcome with fatigue, could go no further. The prophet went another day's journey, and then rested under a juniper tree. Here, from sheer exhaustion, in a fit of despondency, he prayed that he might be permitted to die. Poor man! But the angel of the Lord provided a meal for him, which contrasted well with the forty days' fast, so reviving his strength and spirits that he journeyed on to Horeb, two hundred miles distant. Here God showed him it was by the gentle, small voice, not by violence, that His work was done.

Elijah had acted his part well; but, as it is given to no man to finish the work, he must now anoint his successors, deliver to Ahab a final message sealing his fate, and his severe work is done. This career of fifteen or twenty years was short, but full of thrilling incidents. His was a dispensation of severity. His eventful life drawing to its close, his religion softens and mellows his whole nature, and radiates about his character her more beautiful hues. See him as he visits, for the last time, those prophetic schools which he had inaugurated. Would that we had a record of those last words to his pupils; doubtless, words of affection and cheer. How kind his last word to Elisha, "What wilt thou that I shall give thee?" A remembrancer, only surpassed by, "As oft as ye do this, ye show forth my death till I come!" A keepsake, indeed! While thus talking lovingly with his best earthly friend, he was met by a chariot of fire—the best outfit the livery of heaven could send for an honored servant. Soon he crossed the aerial heavens, passing through the ethereal blue, on up to the pearly gates of the city of God, and Elijah is at home forever, except that short excursion to the Mount of Transfiguration to let the world know he was glorified in Christ.

Sometimes we think officials of the church are too severe, unfeeling; but the reins of government must be held by a firm and steady hand. I once thought the late Bishop J. O. Andrew, in the Conferences, and especially in the cabinet, wanting in deference to the opinions of others. He was a man of convictions, and had the nerve to sustain them. But, like Elijah, how beautifully clear and softened and golden were the rays of life's setting sun! Among the last Conferences he held was one at Mansfield in 1866. One evening, being alone in his room, he invited me to spend the time with him. O, how mellow and full of pathetic sympathy! What kind words fell from his lips!

A sour, fault-finding temper in the closing days of life's pilgrimage is more to be dreaded than the pangs of death or the terrors of the grave. Rather let us covet to be filled with that charity that "beareth all things, believeth all things," and when it can do no more, "hopeth all things."

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: The idea is abroad in the church that the evangelization of Japan is well-nigh completed, and that this nation will soon be classed among the Christian nations of the world. Indeed, some have gone so far as to say that Japan does not need any more missionaries; but nothing could be farther from the truth. While Christianity has had a remarkable entrance among these people, and the Master's cause has had great success, yet still "there remains much land to be possessed." There are vast stretches of country that have not yet been entered by missionaries. There are millions yet who have never heard the name of Christ, nor seen a copy of God's Word. I can speak from observation only of that portion of Japan in which our mission is located—that portion which skirts the Inland Sea. Other parts, I hear, are even more destitute. Within the last ten days several have spoken to me of a part of the empire on the west coast as being "the neglected," "the destitute" portion of the country. If it is any more needy than some portions of our own work, the destitution must be fearful. In a former letter to your columns, I mentioned some things that were seen by several of us on a trip around our work, that showed the startling degradation and great superstition into which Buddhism has sunken the people in the interior; but space and time did not then permit any reference to the needs of the country through which we traveled; and even now I can only refer to two sections of it.

At a place called Kokura, on the island of Kiushin, we took jinrikishas, and rode for three days through a portion of country over which hovers the black pall of heathenism, broken by scarcely one ray of Christian light. Imagine, if you can, a strip of country one hundred miles long, by about fifty broad, with one million and a half of people, without a single missionary, and with but about one hundred and twenty-five native Christians, by actual count, and these visited only occasionally by native workers, and you have a brief outline of the scene which lay before us as we rode through this country wholly given to idolatry. In this section there are a number of towns and cities with populations ranging from five thousand to forty thousand, any one of which would make a good point at which to plant a station.

Rev. W. A. Wilson, who came out from North Carolina last summer, is at Oita, where we have had one of our most successful works, and is the only resident missionary on a coast line of nearly two hundred miles. He should certainly be reinforced, and that right soon.

When we reached Oita, Dr. W. R. Lambuth was called home by telegram, and I was forced to go alone to a point called Uajima, on the island of Shikoku, where we have an interesting work. This place was opened by Dr. J. W. Lambuth nearly two years ago, and is full of promise to the Master's cause. It is in the center of a stretch of country of about one hundred miles, which is without a foreign missionary. I have no doubt but that a strong church could be founded at this place if we only had a resident missionary to put there. At present the place is being held by a young man full of zeal for the Master's cause, who left school in order to stand in the breach until help can be had. Dr. J. W. Lambuth has visited this work several times, and has stood by it bravely and nobly, holding on with the hope that help would soon come. He has done this at the expense of his health and strength; but should not be compelled to do it any more.

The trip to Uajima is over the worst part of the Inland Sea—one that tries a man's soul, and his stomach, too. I confess to never having been seasick but once before, and then only for a few minutes, on a piece of sea which is said to be about the worst in the world; but, on this trip to Uajima, Neptune gained the victory, and I had to pay him tribute. I was glad when the trip was over, for I never had a more unpleasant one. It was hard on me, a young man; and yet that old veteran, Dr. J. W. Lambuth, has made it time after time, and has been forced to sleep in native hotels, for two weeks or more, on the floor, and to eat cold food brought from home, in order to hold the place while waiting for reinforcements, and this for a year or more.

Brethren, these things ought not to be. We ought to have the man at once; we ought to have had him months ago. Dr. J. W. Lambuth has no place in our work here that is nearer his heart than is the work at Uajima. Hasn't the Mississippi Conference a man that it will send out to take hold of this work? It would be a suitable and worthy recognition of the consecrated labors of their veteran representative in the mission work in these parts.

On the Inland Sea.

A Humorous Incident with a Moral.

In the "Life of Bishop Simpson," by Dr. Crooks, there is an interesting account of Methodism at Meadville, Pa., and the early struggles of the college there located. Reference is also made to the establishment of a Unitarian Church in the town, and an amusing incident of the dedicatory services is given. It is in the Bishop's autobiographical notes, and is as follows:

One of the distinguished Unitarians of New England came to officiate on the occasion, preached an eloquent sermon to a full house, setting forth in forcible manner the views of his people. A well-read man of the Presbyterian Church had become insane, and yet was quiet and inoffensive. He wandered about among friends, and was fond of talking of religion. By some means he was present in the congregation that day, and listened attentively to the discourse. At its close, rising from his seat and stepping out into the aisle, he reached out his hand, and said, in a tone of sadness, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him," and left the house. The utterance of those simple words, it is said, produced a profound impression on the congregation.

SOME DAY.

"Some day" the dreariest road will turn
And wind through landscapes fair and green,
By sparkling waters fringed with fern
And gardens bright with fragrant sheen—
Some day," you say "some day.

"Some day" you say, the weariest feet
Will pause and loose their sandal ties,
And rest where shadows cool and sweet
Shut out the burning noontide skies—
"Some day," you say, "some day."

"Some day" the busiest hands will let Their stint of work slip from their hold Unfinished, and the stain and fret
Of labor from their wax en mold
Fade out you say, "some day."

"Some day" ah well, I am glad 'tis so'
Else heart and hand would fail—"some day."
Life holds so much of pain and woe
Ere yet we find the fair, glad way
That blooms for all—"some day."

"Some day," ah yes, I hope the land
That lit its hollow holds life's sea,
And what I do not understand
Of life and life's long mystery
Shall be revealed "some day."

Bishop Mallalieu vs. John Wesley.

MR. EDITOR: A friend handed me a clipping from The New Delta, of date some time early in the present month, which contains statements worthy of note. It is hard to decide what motives prompted the Bishop to assert what is here asserted. If the thing stated were a fact, or if the statement had been given merely as a matter of opinion, backed up by ever so flimsy a web of circumstances, one could see how such a statement would appeal to the prejudices of the Bishop's mixed church in New Orleans, or, at least, to the negro part of it. However, as the declaration is made as a matter of fact, and not of opinion merely, the Bishop must have been reckless as to historical truth, or very presumptuous as to the want of intelligence among his hearers.

It is not my purpose to sit in judgment on the Bishop's motives in this case, but to show that, without regard to his motives, his statements are not historically true.

The declaration reported by The New Delta, and the language to which those exceptions are taken, is as follows, viz:

He said the last letter Wesley ever wrote was to Wilberforce, who was then trying to liberate the slaves in the British colonies; and in that letter he stated that, with the help of God, he might finally subdue that greatest of all slave institutions—the one that existed in the Southern States of America. Seventy-three years later that institution was abolished, and the speaker did not see how any man calling himself a Methodist could have fought to preserve it.

"The last letter Wesley ever wrote to Wilberforce," or anybody else, was probably the latter part of 1790, or certainly not later than the latter part of the winter of 1790-91. John Wesley, of whom the Bishop speaks, died on March 2, 1791. To suppose that Mr. Wesley would, at that time, speak of the institution of slavery "in the Southern States of America" as in any sense different from "all slave institutions" in any of the United States of America, is to suppose him to be a fool or a knave; neither of which the Bishop would admit.

Let it be borne in mind that in attributing this language to Mr. Wesley, Bishop Mallalieu speaks of a period prior to 1791. In what respect was the institution of slavery in the South "the greatest of all slave institutions" prior to this date?

Only three years before Mr. Wesley died—1787—the Congress of the United States, acting for all the States, and by each State separately in its representative capacity, accepted a cession of land from North Carolina, with the expressed condition that slavery should continue to exist.

In 1807, fifteen or sixteen years after the death of Mr. Wesley, the citizens of any State in the Union could run ships in the slave trade, with only this restriction: they could not carry slaves into any foreign country. These slave ships might bring negroes from Africa to the United States, but not to the West Indies, nor other countries. This authorization of the slave trade, by every State in the Union, remained on the statute books till 1808, some seventeen years after Wesley's death.

In the State of Massachusetts—in Boston, if you please—up to about five years before "the last letter Wesley ever wrote," the "kidnapping" of negroes in Africa was one of the recognized branches of commerce about "the Hub."

In 1788 a law was passed against the "slave trade;" but that law did not abolish slavery in Massachusetts. This law of 1788 did do this, however: it required a slave owner to give bond and security, that the slave should never become chargeable to the State as a pauper, but should be cared for at the expense of the said owner, before such slave could be emancipated under the laws of this Puritan State. Moreover, at the time Bishop Mallalieu says Wesley wrote this letter to Wilberforce, there was a law on the statute books of Massachusetts requiring the magistrate to arrest, whip, and banish from the State any negro remaining in that State for a greater length of time than ten days after notice to leave. The only condition upon which this brutal law could be varied was, that the negro belonged to the kingdom of Morocco, or had a certificate from the secretary of one of the States to the effect that the said negro was a citizen of that State. This law which banished all free negroes from Massachusetts lived and flourished for more than forty years after Wesley died. Indeed, the very home-spot of the United States—the District of Columbia—was the home of the slave owner many long years after Wesley's "last letter" was written.

That Bishop Mallalieu should attribute such language to Mr. Wesley, as is used in the above extract, is all the more surprising when we recall the fact that one of the members of the General Conference of 1844—Mr. Cass, I think, from Connecticut—tried to gull the General Conference with a similar statement. These statements have been strongly denounced as forgeries, and all the facts of history declare them to be such.

If Bishop Mallalieu wants to arrest the attention of his negro brethren, let him tell them that up in Massachusetts, the birthplace of all philanthropy and the home of freedom, no negro has ever been set free by law. The whipping and banishing act was repealed in 1834 (I think); but the act of emancipation has not yet appeared on the statute books.

Let the Bishop tell his colored brethren that the saints in Massachusetts owned 18,000 slaves in 1778, and in twelve years—1790—they had all been carried off and sold to Southern men for perpetual slaves, except about 6,000! Let him show his colored brethren this advertisement from a Massachusetts paper only ten years before John Wesley died:

"To be sold, a hearty, strong negro wench, about 29 years of age, fit for town or country. Jan. 4, 1781."

The same year—in March—"an extraordinary likely negro wench, 17 years old," was offered for sale. She "has no notion of freedom." Her only "failing" was—she was about to become a mother!

Was Wesley too blind, or stupid, to see these things in New England while exercising his zeal for "human liberty"?

J. A. PARKER.

To the Friends of the Mexicans.

Dear Young Friends: Bro. J. P. Drake's letter in the last ADVOCATE, accompanied by mine, to the young friends in Shubuta, Miss., gives a full explanation of the object of our organization, as well as the comforting assurance that the authorities of the church approve of our methods. Then I need only to say, in this connection, that we would be glad to have our young friends of the North Mississippi and the Louisiana Conference join us and each undertake the support of a missionary in the field. Why not? It would only be the fulfilment of the words of the prophet: "And a little child shall lead them." If they wish to join us, I am sure the secretaries of their respective Conference Boards of Missions will gladly consent to act as their secretaries, as Bro. Drake does for us.

I am afraid you will be the least bit disappointed when I tell you that I am not going to talk much in this letter about Mexico; but about our duty to send the gospel to those who have it not. And as we learn all our duties in all things from the Bible, we must now go to it to see if it is really our duty to send the gospel into those countries where it is not.

And the first text I will ask you to read is John iii, 16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Now there are these three points in this text: God loved the whole world; God gave his Son to the whole world; whoever in the whole world will believe in the Son shall have everlasting life. This is enough to prove to us that every person in the world has the same right to the blessings and the privileges of the life, death, and the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Now we will read Mark xvi, 15: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." If we put these two texts together, we have the two great thoughts I wish to impress upon your minds and hearts: that everybody in the world has a right to the blessings and the privileges of the gospel, and that it is the duty of those who have the gospel to send it to those who have it not. I do not think anything could be clearer than this. I know there are those who deny that it is their duty to send the gospel to the heathen, and that is the reason why I felt it my duty to write this letter.

I sincerely hope our dear young friends will be very careful about forming opinions contrary to the plain teachings of God's Word and of the will and efforts of all the churches. Surely if foreign mission work was not in perfect accord with the will and Word of the Master, so many of the good men and women of all the ages would not have given their lives and their money to it. This fact should make people very careful about expressing opposition to this great cause, or in withholding their money from it. Every doubt as to our duty in any matter should be settled by a careful study of God's holy Word, and earnest prayer to him for direction. Our blessed Lord said that one of the offices of the Holy Spirit should be to help us in matters wherein we could not help ourselves (John xvi, 13): "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come."

And, last of all, but by no means the least, we have the example of the great and good Apostle Paul in this great work. He declared his purpose to give his life to mission work in these words (Acts xiii, 46, 47): "Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it away from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee to be a light to the Gentiles, that thou shouldst be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." Of their success in their mission work you can learn from the Acts of the Apostles and of Paul's writings, which were addressed to the churches in mission fields. And of the permanency of their work you can learn from church history, or your pastor or Sunday-school superintendent will tell you. Since coming to Mexico I have been wonderfully impressed with the adaptability of Paul's writings to mission work. My attention was first called to this by the fact that our native preachers select their texts from his writings more frequently than from any other New Testament writer. But I will have more to say of this later on. Your friend.

Mexico City.

Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University.

The catalogue of the biblical department of Vanderbilt University for 1890-91 has just been received. We note with pleasure the evidences of continued and increasing prosperity in this "school of the prophets." The names of seventy-one young ministers are enrolled. These represent twenty-seven of the Conferences of the church, and embrace graduates from twenty-four Southern colleges and universities. The eighteen free scholarships, of $100 each, in this department are held this year by A. B. graduates from Randolph-Macon, Emory and Henry, Trinity, Emory, Wofford, Southern University, Centenary, Southwestern University, Hendrix, Central, Kentucky Wesleyan, and the academic department of Vanderbilt University. Tuition and room rent in Wesley Hall are free to all young ministers, and board is only $10 per month. From the Sustentation Loan Fund students whose circumstances demand it may borrow enough to pay their board, no interest being charged upon the amount borrowed if it be refunded within four years after leaving the university. Over one-fourth of the theological students this year are the sons of preachers. The course of study is well adapted to the wants of those of our young ministers who wish to continue their education beyond the college course into biblical and theological studies.

Mississippi Conference Missionary.

The late session of the Mississippi Conference, which met in Canton, Miss., December, 1890, not only pledged to support two missionaries for one year in some foreign field, and for that purpose subscribed nearly sixteen hundred dollars, but prayed the Holy Spirit to call the man or men from our own Conference for this work. It was known by most of us, if not by all, that the Mississippi Conference already has representatives in Japan, China, Mexico and Mexican Border, doing faithful and efficient work. We have one missionary in heaven who died on her way to Brazil, and another in heaven who had offered herself for Mexico, but God, in his mysterious, but infinitely wise providence, took her to himself before she started. Thus, virtually, the Mississippi Conference is represented in every foreign field now occupied by the Southern Methodist Church by, at least, one missionary, and in some by two. Counting the two who have died, for they are as truly missionaries as those in the field, we have sent out from our midst seven missionaries. It is known to most of us, that for three or four years a young member of our Conference has been preparing himself for Japan. Yet we had the faith to "pray the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth" more "laborers into this harvest" from among us, on his part, while on our part we said, "Here is sixteen hundred dollars to support them one year."

It affords me great joy to announce to the brethren that our prayer has been answered. God has called the man; he has answered. The Bishop in charge of the field he wishes to serve has accepted him, and it is very likely that within six weeks, or two months, the Mississippi Conference will send out her eighth missionary. Surely God has honored Mississippi Methodism! It seems to me he has a right to expect more of us than we have done or are doing. Let us place ourselves right and have it said of us, "They have done what they could." How many brethren will join with me in a pledge to pay or raise five or ten dollars a year, for, say, five years, to assist in the support of this young brother for that length of time? How little it will cost us, and how much it will delight our blessed Savior! Think on these things, brethren, and let us hear from you.

The Sunday-School at Summit, Miss.

Yesterday will be a memorable day with the Summit Sunday-schools. At the suggestion of Bro. J. J. Havers, superintendent of the Methodist Sunday-school, yesterday had been set apart as Parents' Day. The programme was ample, seasonable and sensible, and well carried out. The music was conducted by Miss Gussie Lamkin, and that implies that it was appropriate to the occasion, and well executed. The song by the infant class, and the appeal for the heathen by Sister Hines' class were splendidly performed, and food for the soul. A collection was taken to redeem Bro. Hudson's promise made at the last session of our Conference, that our Sunday-school would pay ten dollars for our special missionary; and the amount was raised, and will be forwarded to-day. Bro. Havers gave us a pleasant little talk, and then rendered a recitation that put on the cap-stone, and made all feel more anxious to do something in the way of winning souls for Jesus and immortal glory.

The Baptist and Presbyterian Sunday-schools had been invited, and were present. A large audience was present, and seemed to enjoy the service royally. It is believed by all that the day was well spent, and much good was done.

The spiritual condition of my people is reasonably good, and the prospects for a good year brighten as the year advances. Our District Conference is to be held on my charge at Bogue Chitto some time soon, and we now give you, Doctor, a cordial invitation, and shall be glad to give you a pleasant entertainment. My health holds up well; indeed, much better than I had expected. God bless you and the ADVOCATE!

"The Reason."

Under this caption, in the ADVOCATE of March 12, Bro. Edward Booth gives it as his "humble opinion" that "a main reason" of the decline of Methodist Sunday-schools in Louisiana is to be found in the change of the manner of electing superintendents.

I don't know how well his reasoning applies to that particular Conference; but so far as the whole body of the M. E. Church, South, is concerned, statistics prove the reverse.

It was in 1874 that, by "legislation," superintendents were made elective by the Quarterly Conference. Official reports show members in Sunday-schools as follows: In 1859, 280,353; in 1874, 377,459, a gain in fifteen years by the old rule of 97,106, or near 35 per cent. In 1889 there were 783,375, a gain in fifteen years (from 1874) under the new law, of 405,916, or about 108 per cent.

I admit that a large majority of our Sunday-school workers are women—probably four-fifths, according to Bro. B.'s estimate; but from that numerous host I have yet to hear the first word of murmuring and to see the first sign of mutiny in the ranks because of the present mode of electing superintendents.

Mississippi State Sunday-School Convention.

To All Sunday-School Workers in Mississippi:

The great Sunday-school work in which we are engaged is worthy of the best efforts of the best men, and its success, under God, depends upon such efforts upon the part of all who love our Teacher. The object of this convention is to get Christians to unite for aggressive work. We can not stand still. We must not if we could, for the command is go. Over one-half the children in Mississippi are to-day outside the Sunday-school, and, therefore, without proper religious training. We are determined to save them, if possible, and we want your help. Will you give it?

The State Sunday-school Convention is inter-denominational, but not undenominational. No one is asked, or expected, to surrender one single religious conviction, but, reserving all our denominational peculiarities, we meet and consult as to plans and methods of work, and each one applies these to his own particular work as far as he deems them wise or necessary. In our meetings we get the benefit of united counsel without being bound by any obligation to adopt what does not accord with the individual's conviction of right.

The next meeting of this convention will be held at Greenville on April 28 to 30, 1891, and we hope to make it the best meeting we ever had. Hon. Wm. Reynolds, superintendent of Organization for the International Convention, and Mrs. W. F. Crafts, the leading infant-class teacher in the world, will be present, besides the best workers of our own and adjoining States, and all who attend will be amply repaid. Sunday-schools would do a wise thing to send some of their best men and women to this convention. We earnestly request your fraternal co-operation, and ask that you send a delegation to Greenville.

Truly and fraternally,

Notice.

The North Mississippi Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society has in its treasury $62 90, subject to appropriation. We do not want a dollar of our money to be idle, and invite applications for help. Presiding elders, preachers, or any responsible church officials knowing of parsonages which can be helped by this sum, will oblige us by sending applications to the district secretaries of their respective districts. When the applications are in, an Executive Committee meeting will be called to consider them, and make the appropriation subject to the approval of the Conference Board of Church Extension, who will disburse the money. If the money is not needed in our own Conference, it will be sent where it is needed.

We are here to stay and to help, and, God willing, will hasten the day when no charge in the North Mississippi Conference will be without a parsonage, and no preacher without a home.

MRS. ROBERT SOMERVILLE,
President.

The following are district secretaries P. and H. M. S., North Mississippi Conference:

Sardis district—Mrs. P. T. Callicott, Coldwater; Corinth district—Mrs. E. A. Nesbett, Iuka; Holly Springs district—Miss Maggie Tate, Potts Camp; Grenada district—Mrs. R. W. Jones, Oxford; Aberdeen district—Mrs. S. M. Shell, Houston; Winona district—Mrs. Mollie Atkins, Kosciusko; Columbus district—Mrs. H. W. Foote, Macon; Greenville district—Miss Mattie Robertson, Hood.

FROM THE WORK.

VINTON AND ITS REVIVAL.

This little town is located on the Louisiana Western railroad, in Calcasieu parish, La., about twenty-three miles west of Lake Charles. The town and its country neighborhood is composed, principally, of the former citizens of Edgerly and Sabine stations, and numbers about 250 or 300 inhabitants. There is one hotel and two good business houses and a large lumber mill. Of course, the usual haunt of so many of our Louisiana towns—the saloon—has found its way into this thriving little town. But, thank God, one whisky house is now closed and three whisky sellers have abandoned their course and gone into a better business. Bro. Miller, the presiding elder of the district, organized the Methodist Church in Vinton last year and supplied the appointment with the gospel through Rev. Dr. Gibson, of Lake Arthur, and this year Bro. F. N. Sweeney was appointed to this charge. The Baptists have done some work in this town, and the Congregational Church has been represented through the sweet-spirited and zealous Rev. A. E. Arrington. About the first move, however, in the community towards organizing for Christ was the establishing of a nice little Sunday-school. A good Sister Stockwell has the credit, under God, for this work. She was soon encouraged and assisted by the efficient help of Bro. R. M. Davis and his excellent wife, who came in from Edgerly. This congregation has been blessed with one or two revivals of short duration; but this time our pastor here and the presiding elder organized their plans for an attack upon the enemy with no thought of retiring from the field until Christ should hold the fort. And for sixteen days and nights the battle for Jesus waxed hotter and hotter. The Holy Ghost has fallen upon us with great power; and yet with blessed sweetness. About thirty souls have been converted and twenty-three joined the Methodist Church, and two the Congregational. Saloons are almost entirely deserted, and the three saloonists were converted and have been received into the church. Young converts are now leading in prayer and telling their experience. Many of the older converts, who had held themselves aloof from active service for Jesus, now take public position for our blessed Lord and his cause.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was represented both in the private homes and from the pulpit, and its circulation increased, and yet the work is not done. This correspondent was detained and finally excused from attending the session of the Opelousas District Conference at Lake Charles, that he might help in this blessed revival. To him it was a great sacrifice to miss the district meeting; but it was more than made up, if possible, in the Vinton revival and a sweet fellowship with those people. May our blessed Lord help our precious Bro. Sweeney to carry on the work in his charge!

R. M. BLOCKER.

P. S.—I am now with Rev. Dr. Gibson at Lake Arthur, and his little church just finished is a beauty. May God bless our meeting here!

R. M. B.

VIDALIA, LA.

We closed a meeting at Vidalia last week with good results. It lasted about ten days; two services daily. Bro. Callaway and I were assisted by Revs. M. L. Burton and C. W. Crisler, both of Mississippi Conference. These brethren certainly know how to preach the pure gospel and show sinners their guilty distance from a pardoning God.

Vidalia has not been blessed with such an outpouring of the Spirit for years. Seven accessions to the church and some conversions in our own and sister churches. We now have persons there who will pray in public; whereas before our meeting there was not one that we knew of in all the town. The Lord honored us with his presence on every occasion. It is freely admitted, I believe, by nearly all that much spiritual good was done. We feel that it was the beginning of much good work to follow for the Lord on this charge this year.

Bro. Callaway and I are now cut off from some of our appointments by high water. Rivers here still rising, there being five in number (as you are aware—Mississippi, Black, Little, Ouachita and Tensas) within the bounds of this large work.

J. J. KELLY.

VOSSBURG CIRCUIT.

We get along well on Vossburg circuit. We have a comfortable home, and constant improvements are being made on our parsonage property. Our neighbors are excellent. The climate is most healthful and fine.

Ours here is a model church. Nearly all have family prayer. There are two weekly prayer meetings, and a better Sunday-school I never saw. Congregations throughout the work are large and improving with each successive Sabbath. It looks very much like "the good old days of our fathers" to see persons coming ten miles or more to church. The interest at some of the appointments has been very fine. Fifty have promised to have family prayer. We have had quite a number of valuable accessions. The Woman's Missionary Societies are working zealously. The juvenile society is an interesting one. Epworth Leagues will be organized in April.

To take the work throughout, I never knew a charge in better spiritual condition. To my faithful and efficient predecessors much is due. "The best of all is, God is with us."

SAVED FROM FAMINE.

II. Kings vii, 1-16.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men."—Psalm cvii, 8.

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. The City in Distress (vs. 1-11). II. The City Saved (vs. 12-16).

MEMORY VERSES.—8, 9.

REFERENCE WORD.—"Famine."

TIME.—892 B. C.

PLACE.—The city of Samaria and the country adjacent.

INTRODUCTION.

For some time the city of Samaria had been enduring the horrors of a siege on the part of the hosts of Syria. To what an extremity the inhabitants were reduced is graphically represented by an incident that passed before Jehoram's eyes one day as he was making a round among his people. It seems that twe wemen, rendered desperate by the pressing want, had decided that they would seek to prolong their wretched existence by consuming their own children. The one had fulfilled her part, and now appealed to the king to compel the other so to do. Jehoram, though himself far from good, was utterly horrified at this atrocity; he rent his clothes, and denned sackcloth. Like his father Ahab, he was prone to refer Israel's calamity to wrong origin. Ahab blamed Elijah for all the ill that happened; so Jehoram looked upon Elisha as the cause of the whole evil. He made a vow that he would have the head of the prophet by the day should close. He sent a servant to despatch him; but before the man reached the prophet's house, the prayers of the man of God and the elders had reached Heaven. As an answer to that petition, he was enabled to make the assertion that on the merrow starving Samaria should be sated.

I.—THE CITY IN DISTRESS.

Verse 1. Here was a sure promise of abundance. Before so great had been the lack that we read the price of an ass's head was about two hundred and sixty dollars. Such a statement as that made by Elisha, when there was no probability of raising the siege, was too great a strain on the faith of a certain lord;" and he not only declared his unbelief, but asserted it in very sneering tones. He could not understand it, and, therefore, he would not believe that it would come to pass. He forgot that Elisha had prefaced his prophecy with this significant phrase, "Thus saith the Lord." Here we see the gross sin of unbelief. We try to measure God's ability to perform by our inability to comprehend; we make our ignorance the standard of his wisdom, and grade his power by our own weakness. Such is superlative folly and meets its just recompense. Elisha said to the royal agnostic, "Thou shalt see with thine eyes, but shalt not eat thereof." What a terrible punishment! But more awful is the position of the unbeliever of the gospel message. Though it may hold out long and rob its possessor of all the comfortable assurances of religion, there will come a time when it must break down, and acknowledge its own defeat; but the solemn fact is that at this stage belief loses its virtue and can not grasp the coveted prizes which it beholds. Every knee shall bow; every tongue shall confess." How much better, then, is it that our faith should be voluntary than constrained!

Verse 3. The most surprising circumstances are brought about in the most unexpected manner. Four lepers, outcasts from society, for whom the city had not a thought, were the instruments of announcing its deliverance. They are represented as in debate; the question was, "Why sit we here until we die?" After arguing, pro and con, examining all the possibilities and even probabilities, they reached the conclusion that they would desert to the Syrian camp.

There is never any miscarriage in the working out of Jehovah's plans. His spirit had inspired these men to action, and when they did act, all other things were ready. The Syrians had heard a mighty noise, as of chariots and horsemen, and had fled hurriedly, leaving all their possessions behind. So when the lepers came they found, indeed, the camp and the spoils, but not an enemy. They realized their good fortune and made the best of it. Their action in reporting their discovery to Samaria was commendable; but the motive that prompted it was characterized more by fear than by any sympathy or love for the people.

II.—THE CITY SAVED.

Verse 12. The porter at the gate was informed of this strange occurrence, and he, in turn, made it known to the king's house. The news was too good to be true. Jehoram explained it on the ground that it was simply a ruse of the besiegers; they were in waiting to entrap the Israelites when they should attempt to take possession of the deserted camp. It is a fortunate thing that there are always some people who are willing to look into a thing before they condemn it. So here; the advice of a clear-headed servant was, "Send and see." In formulating this judicious exhortation, he announced the general principle that forms the basis of all experimental religion. Well, Jehoram went, and, naturally, he saw. Transfer the principle to the consideration of the gospel invitation. The cross, with its bleeding victim, is lifted up, and it issues to all the world the gracious invitation, "Come and see." How simple the condition, how logical the conclusion! If we come, we shall see; if we never come, we shall never see.

Compare the first verse and the sixteenth, and see if God does not keep his promises exactly as he makes them.

Compare the second verse and the seventeenth, and see if God does not punish sin exactly as he says he will do.

Louisiana Notes.

Baton Rouge has organized a Board of Trade.

The V. S. and P. railroad shops in Monroe turned out the finest engine on the line last week.

The site for the public building in Alexandria has been chosen and purchased for $3,800.

The Bossier Hotel, at Abita Springs, was completely destroyed by fire last week. Loss $16,000.

A teachers' association has been organized in Shreveport, with Prof J. H. Thatcher as president.

The Messenger says that St. Martin is one of the few parishes in the State without a Farmers' Alliance.

The First National Bank has been organized at Franklin with $50,000 capital, and will begin business April 1.

The Alexandria Land and Improvement Company has bought 330 acres adjoining the town, for which $43,000 were paid.

The farmers of East Feliciana are becoming interested in improved stock, and are bringing some fine animals to the parish.

The Treasury Department has located the site of the public building in Baton Rouge at the corner of Church and Boulevard streets. The cost is $14,500.

The Texas-Hervey Plow Company, Limited, has been organized in Shreveport with a capital stock of $100,000. Some of Shreveport's most prominent men are at its head.

The White Compress Manufacturing Company has been organized in Monroe with a capital of $250,000. The invention is a system of compound levers, making an endless amount of strength in a very short time.

The Calcasieu fruit crop promises to be unusually abundant. The American says that thousands of trees and vines are being planted yearly, and the parish is rapidly coming to the front as a fruit-producing region.

Lafourche has received a school apportionment of $2,245.75 from the State. The school finances of the parish are now in such a solid condition that the Galen Academy will have a session of ten months, for the first time since the war.

An extensive stock farm, comprising 22,000 acres, has been established in Tangipahoa and Livingston by Denver and Chicago capitalists, for the purpose of raising mules. Mr. R. A. Corbin is the manager of the important enterprise.

Tangipahoa went "dry" in 1889, but so many social clubs with "wet" tendencies have cropped out since then, that the aldermen of Amite City want Attorney General Rogers to put in an appearance at the next term of court and assist the District Attorney in prosecuting liquor-law violators.

Last evening, about 5 o'clock, there left over the Mississippi Valley railroad the largest train of refined sugar that ever left the city of New Orleans. It was shipped by one firm. The train which carried this cargo was a special freight and consisted of twenty cars and, together with the engine, was appropriately decorated. The sugar was forwarded from the American Sugar Refinery Company, of this city, to D. M. Steele & Co, via the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad, and thence over the Missouri Pacific.

Morgan City Review: Morgan City has shipped this season nearly twenty-five million oysters, which makes her the largest shipping point South. Her shipments were two million more than the number shipped at all points in Texas. Over fifty thousand pounds of catfish have also been shipped this season.

Lafayette, with its advantages and inducements, is attracting widespread attention, although the fact may not be generally known to our citizens. During the winter, and especially within the past two or three weeks, we have noticed quiet, solid-looking visitors, who were evidently men of means. They did not go out on the streets with a big brass horn and proclaim their object and intentions, but made their observations in a quite and unpretentious manner, and were evidently well impressed. They mean "business," and we will hear from them in good time.—Advertiser.

Senator Walthall and Ex-Gov. Lowry are to deliver orations at the unveiling of the Confederate Monument in Jackson, on June 3.

The Methodist Church at Hickory is to be repaired and enlarged. The contract has been let and the work will cost about $500.

A disastrous fire at Moss Point, last week, consumed several buildings in the heart of the town. Supposed to be the work of incendiaries.

The protracted meeting in Columbus, under the Rev. Geo. S. Inge, has proved a great success, much interest having been manifested by the entire community.

The shipments of cotton from Aberdeen, for the season beginning Sept. 1, 1890, up to March 19, 1891, amounted to 14,078 bales. The receipts to the same date amount to 17,068 bales.

The Clarion-Ledger employs thirty persons regularly in its different departments, and its book printing and book binding business is continually increasing. It employs six steam presses.

The Manufacturers' Aid Association, of Meridian, is at work for the improvement of the city. The association plans to purchase 200 acres of ground to be used as sites for factories. A large cotton factory is to be first taken in hand.

Some time this month Sam Jones will hold a meeting in Aberdeen. We learn from the Examiner that a large tabernacle will be erected which will afford ample accommodations. Dr. Simon Peter Richardson, of Georgia, will assist Mr. Jones in the meeting.

Messrs. Walker have near Aberdeen a very fine fruit farm, consisting of fifteen acres in Le Count pears, ten acres in the finest varieties of peaches, and a considerable area devoted to strawberries and other fruits. Mississippi is becoming quite a fruit-growing State.

Last week the Water Valley Progress gave a long and interesting account of the enterprise and improvements in that little city. It contains 5,000 inhabitants and is surrounded by a rich agricultural country. Its schools are thoroughly organized and conducted on the latest approved methods. It has two newspapers and ten handsome churches.

The Water Valley Progress says:

A postal card containing 503 words, written by a Water Valley girl attending school at another place, was received a few days since by one of her former schoolmates. Who can beat it?

The Democrat-Star says:

The contract for building the Presbyterian Church at Scranton has been let to Mr. J. L. Ostrom, he being the lowest bidder. His bid was $596. He is to complete the building, except painting, for that sum.

The Vicksburg Herald says:

The machinery of the Consumers' Ice Company is being rapidly set up, and there is a vast quantity of it, apparently miles upon miles of coiled iron pipes and any quantity of immense iron tanks. The bed on which the freezing tank is to rest is filled in to the depth of five or six inches with cork shavings, an excellent non-conductor.

The late cold weather severely injured the peach, pear and plum crop, as well as tender plants of all kinds. The early peach trees, and some varieties of pears and plums, had not bloomed and were not hurt. Even where the trees were apparently in full bloom we find some fruit buds not quite open, and they may not be injured sufficiently to make them fall off.—Brookhaven Leader.

Of Whitworth's Conservatory of Music the Brookhaven Leader has this:

It affords the Leader pleasure to say, in conclusion, it does not believe any female college in the country offers such musical advantages as Whitworth. Every teacher in the conservatory department has enjoyed the finest advantages and training, and Prof. McKenan, the director, is not only a master and an enthusiastic lover of the art he teaches, but has the rare faculty of imparting his own enthusiasm to all under him, teachers and pupils alike, as is evident to even the casual observer.

A Beau of 1830.

When grandpa went a-wooing,
He wore a satin vest,
A trail of roaming roses
Embroidered on the breast.
The pattern of his trousers,
His linen, white and fine,
Were all the latest fashion
In eighteen twenty-nine.

Grandpa was a fine-looking young fellow then, so the old ladies say, and he is a fine-looking old gentleman now. For the past score of years he has been a firm believer in the merits of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. "It renewed my youth," he frequently says. It is the only blood purifier and liver invigorator guaranteed to benefit or cure, or money promptly refunded. It cures liver disease, dyspepsia, scrofulous sores, skin eruptions, and all diseases of the blood. For lingering coughs and consumption (which is lung-scrofula in its early stages) it is an unparalleled remedy.

A great deal of time is contracted in opportunity—which is the flower of time.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. No singer or public speaker should be without it., Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, April 2, 1891.

Briefs.

The greatest gifts ever made to benevolence in this country have been made by Daniel B. Fayerweather, recently deceased. During his life he assisted 20 colleges and 11 hospitals to the amount of $2,042,000. By his will he assisted 20 colleges and 5 hospitals to the amount of $2,195,000. Thus by will and deed of gift he has distributed for benevolence and charity the great sum of $4,237,000. Thirty-five colleges and eleven hospitals have felt the effect of his beneficence.

A great deal has been published about transfers; some things good, some things bad, some things indifferent. The best article on the subject that we have seen appeared in the Nashville Advocate, of March 21, and was signed, "A Traveling Elder." We do not know who he is; but we think he takes the proper view, especially of what is called "special transfers." Many writers have ignored the fact that there are two grounds for transferring a preacher. Sometimes a preacher desires a transfer. Sometimes the Bishop needs a transfer. This latter is always a "special transfer;" that is, he is needed for a special work. It is all bosh to talk about "pot luck" in such a case. He does not go of his own motion. He is sent.

The Sunday-school Workers' Association, of this city, have opened a subscription to raise $1,000 to employ "one trained, magnetic, union missionary, whose field shall be the entire city of New Orleans, and whose duties shall be to make house-to-house visitations, inviting and persuading children who are not attending any Protestant school into the Sabbath-schools already established, strictly observing parents' wishes as to denomination; to distribute such religious literature as may be furnished him; to make reports to this association monthly, showing his work separately each day; to meet this association or its committees at their stated meetings; and to do such other work as may approve itself to the committee having this work in hand."

We verily believe that nothing else in this world is treated so unfairly as the religious newspaper. This paragraph from the Mid-Continent shows how it is done:

Usually our church papers are looked upon as outsiders and left to scramble for themselves as they may. Many good people seem to want to get all that they can out of them and begrudge them the slightest lift. They are expected to write up all the ministers and church workers; to keep the congregation posted in church movements, general and personal; to record all calls, revivals, dedications; to represent all the charities; to advocate the Boards; to supply the Sunday-school lessons; to keep temperance and each moral reform booming; to supply our families with every variety of pure religious literature; to print sermons and lectures and appeals and everything needed by religion. And then people want to secure them at less than cost of production, at half rates, as donations for slight contributions for news items about their own work sent in; or for the slightest help rendered in their circulation. Dues for subscription are thoughtlessly left to drift behind and then to be compromised on condition of continuance of subscription. And they are used as creatures to be milked and not fellow-workers to be fed.

The wonder to us is that any man can be found willing to publish or edit a religious paper after one year's experience. Nothing but the desire and hope of doing good can account for it.

Millsaps College.

The Board of Trustees of this institution have taken another and important step towards the inauguration of a Methodist College in Mississippi. This Board is composed of an equal number of members from each of the Mississippi Conferences. After long and mature deliberation the Board has decided to locate the college at Jackson. As a matter of course, this is a disappointment to some of the North Mississippi Methodists, especially to those who made bids for its location in their midst. It was, however, a foregone conclusion that somebody would be disappointed, for no college, no matter how wisely located, will be or can be located to please everybody. Doubtless, the Board was in possession of facts which no one place could have; and for this reason was better qualified to act wisely than any single community. And, being true men and loyal to the church, they saw that the location selected would best answer the ends in view.

We understand that Jackson offered $21,000 in cash and the choice of several eligible building sites, either one of which is worth $15,000 more. That is a pretty good start, and if the committee appointed to inspect the sites selects the Hamilton property, there will be a handsome building which, by some changes made, can readily be converted into class-rooms and a chapel. As the college is now located, the thing to do is for everybody to rally to the support of Bishop Galloway and the Board of Trustees. This is very important, because the real work of establishing a college has just begun. If anybody suffers his enthusiasm to die down now, just that far will the progress of the work be crippled. There is now more need for earnestness than ever. Now is the time for every man and woman to feel that the success of the institution depends upon special efforts to secure it. The success gained up to the present point is very gratifying and reflects great credit upon the promoters of the scheme, but they need now the earnest co-operation of every loyal Methodist.

We understand that beside the committee to select the site, there are two other committees appointed: one to draw up plans and specifications for the buildings, and the other a "Committee on Faculty." The appointment of these committees shows that the Board will not halt in its work until the institution is in running order and running.

There were several places that offered handsome sums as a bonus for the location of the college. It is not to be supposed that these places will now give that amount of money direct to the college. We have a suggestion to make which we think will do those places a great good and be of immense benefit to the college. It is this: Let the money which was offered to Millsaps College be invested in academies at home, which shall be tributary to the college; training-schools for preparing boys for college. This would be of invaluable benefit to the boy, keeping him at home until he is prepared for college studies, and it would save the college from the burden of carrying a preparatory department. All our college professors testify that a preparatory department ought not to be a college appendage. Suppose Holly Springs and Grenada and Winona and Wesson and the other places that offered money and land to secure Millsaps in their midst, would now erect on that land with that money first-class training schools, and put them under the management of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, it requires no prophet to see that in five years the whole plan would be working to the delight of the church and for the best education of the Methodist boys in Mississippi. We throw out this suggestion to our friends in Mississippi, and hope they will think it over. The same plan ought to be worked in Louisiana with respect to Centenary College. All our colleges need to be freed from the burden of preparing boys for college, and this plan, if worked, will give them that freedom.

A Doctor Wanted.

Dr. Koch has won a world-wide fame. A world-wide fame is awaiting some church doctor. The church is afflicted with a disease that has baffled all ecclesiastical skill. It is not sporadic. It is endemic. We hear that it afflicts every congregation. In our branch of the church the stewards were the first to diagnose it. Having done this, they called upon the pastors for a remedy. The pastors have ransacked all the denominational therapeutics and find no remedy. To-day they stand helpless and hopeless in the presence of a disease that is slowly, surely crippling the power of the church.

We do not know how to state the case except by giving a bit of personal experience. Several weeks ago we worshipped with a congregation with whom we have not been accustomed to worship. When the introductory services were ended the pastor announced that the Board of Stewards wished to make a statement to the congregation. One of the stewards read a very short paper, in which there was a statement of how much money was needed to carry on the church work and how much had been paid to date. Of course, there was a deficit, for there are nearly always deficits. We were not surprised at that statement. But the statement which disclosed the disease to which we have alluded, was this: "There are 787 members, and of this number only 175 have contributed to help the church work with their means." We hear that this thing is common in the churches, though the ratio may vary, being sometimes greater and sometimes less. Now, the ecclesiastical doctor who will discover a remedy for this evil will win everlasting renown and his name be sung by poets yet unborn, for he will solve the whole problem of the world's evangelization.

An Old Record.

On the fly-leaf of an old record-book, denominated "The M. E. Church Book for New Orleans City and Fauxburg and La Fayette Mission," I found written the following: "Joseph Travis and Seymour B. Sawyer having been appointed to this station from the Alabama Conference, they arrived here on Jan. 13, 1836; and after due inquiry for a church book containing the names of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, no such book was to be found—no, not even a class paper for the whites in the whole city. In the Fauxburg and La Fayette Mission, a class paper was found, but no church book. And the mission and the city station having this year been united by Bishop Soule, we have procured a book (as a church book), recording the names of such members as we can find, both white and colored in both places." Bros. Travis and Sawyer were married, as the record shows opposite the name of Elizabeth Travis, "Removed with her husband, December, 1836," and of Martha Jane Sawyer, "Removed with her husband, July 1, 1836." The stay in our city of these itinerants and their wives was a short one.

There are records made against the names of some of the members, showing that wholesome discipline was had in those days. Here are a few: "Expelled, June 3, 1836, for going to the theater and not attending her trial," and of her daughter, the same day, it is recorded, "Expelled on the same ground with her mother;" "Expelled, Feb. 14, 1836, for profane swearing;" "Dropped for neglect of duty and impiety;" "Removed unrecommended, 1837;" "Dropped for intemperance, June 7, 1836;" "Dropped for non-attendance and other reasons." There are records against some of the colored members as follows: "Expelled for disorderly conduct, and such has been his disposition to breed disturbance in the church, that the preacher in charge should be extremely cautious of him, and not receive him back to the church, but upon manifest and genuine repentance. Reference to the colored leaders would always be necessary in his case. He has been of doubtful character for some years past, and the church is evidently better without him than with him;" Expelled for breach of good order and immoral conduct;" "Expelled for improper conduct;" and others still were "dropped for profane swearing" and "for drunkenness." There are some leaves gone from the list of white members, but the names we counted number 270, and, adding 635 for the colored members, the Methodists of New Orleans, as recorded in the old book, amounted to 905 communicants. Against a sister's name (the leaf having the name being lost) is this record of her union to the founder of Louisiana Avenue Church: "Married, July, 1837, to Richard Keen." Among the names of white members we notice some of those who lived and wrought for God and who have fallen on sleep, yet whose memories as pioneers of Methodism must ever remain green and fragrant with us of to-day and our children after us. We might mention William and Ann Sherry, Thos. K. Price, William Dameron and Richard Keen, and then we find the record of the still living and venerable John C. Huey, as joining by letter May 1, 1836. We find in the old book a bill as follows:

Stewards of Methodist Church, Corner of Poydras and Carondelet Sts.

To E. McGehee, Wm. M. Curtiss, James Ross and Wm. Deacon, Jr., Dr.

January 16.	To bill of gas one month to date	$34 30
" 16.	To bill of sexton's wages one month to date	30 00
		$64 30

There is a vast amount of self-sacrifice and heroic devotion that is not recorded of our early New Orleans Methodists in this or any other book on earth. God has the record, and we of to-day enjoy the rich fruits of their faithful labors. Would we were as deeply pious as were many of the dear old fathers and mothers of our Methodism!

JNO. T. SAWYER.

Still Loyal.

Bishop Galloway, in a letter to the Nashville Advocate about his recent trip to Florida, has this pleasant bit of reminiscence in regard to his four years' term in this office:

En route I spent several hours in New Orleans, and in the old ADVOCATE office at 112 Camp street. The memories of four laborious, but delightful, years were vividly revived as I sat again in the editor's chair, greeted the brethren as of yore, looked over the exchanges, and thought of "copy" going up, and "proof" coming down. Years were they of blessed toil, though often turning night into day and life-blood into thought and type. For journalism I had fondness amounting to passion, and for its responsibilities respect even to profoundest reverence. However lacking in large results, each issue was prepared with prayer, and every editorial written as under the eye of the great Head of the Church. Though not exempt from the complaints of subscribers, the chidings of disappointed correspondents, the criticisms of would-be editors, and the generous advice of the multitudinous omniscient, the work was congenial, and words of appreciation were not wanting. I wish for my honored successor, in his bright, freshly-carpeted and beautifully-tinted sanctum, every needed gift and grace for great service. Though varying in editorial style with each administration, I think it can be said, that from the first "specimen copy" in February, 1851, under the conduct of young Holland N. McTyeire, then scarcely past thirty years of age, down to the last issue in this year of our Lord, the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has been pronounced in loyalty to the connectional idea in American Methodism.

Is Gambling a Sin?

The following from the editorial columns of a large city daily, of wide circulation, indicates the necessity for earnest and repeated exhortation against the most subtle and fascinating of Satan's devices. That the question should ever be raised as to the moral turpitude of gambling is evidence of sad spiritual obtuseness. And that distinguished leaders in the church should by specious definitions condone or encourage it, must occasion sincere sorrow. By games of chance—by prizes, lotteries, etc.—we are raising up a nation of gamblers. Any scheme that proposes to secure something without paying its fair valuation is harmful and sinful, whether found in a pool-room or at a church festival. Read the following; see what is being read in our families, and circulate the Christian Advocates.

G.

In the great Episcopal Convocation of Canterbury, in which were recently assembled the Lord Bishops and all of the other magnates of the English Church, the question of "Betting and Gambling" was exhaustively discussed. The sentiment of that great body was expressed by the Lord Bishop of London, who declared that he did not consider there was anything sinful in a small wager or in the playing of any game for small sums of money.

Commenting on the foregoing expression of the Lord Bishop of London, the Church Times, the leader of Episcopal thought in England, says:

If his lordship is right, then betting and gambling are not sinful in themselves, but only in their abuse. The practice stands upon precisely the same moral level as drinking to excess, or inordinate indulgence of any other naturally harmless pleasure. There is no doubt that moralists have always found a difficulty in bringing them under the operation of any recognized principle; indeed, it is impossible to condemn betting and gambling per se, except on the far-reaching assumption that a man has no right to take and profit by money which he has not earned. There has been a good deal of confused talking about this matter, and the remarks of their lordships will help to clear the way and make plain the moral basis of the question in debate.

The Catholic Champion, published in New York, and one of the most prominent organs of the Episcopal Church in America, quotes the foregoing extracts from the speech of the Lord Bishop of London and from the editorial of the Church Times, and delivers its judgment in the following terse and explicit paragraph:

We are of opinion that the view of the Bishop of London is the true one. The sin in betting and gambling is exactly akin to that of drunkenness, excess in that which is lawful; in the one case in drinking wine, and in the other case in taking chances.

That the doctrine as stated by the Lord Bishop of London is the correct doctrine; that the sin of any form of betting lies, not in the betting itself, but in the excess to which it may be carried, is too obviously true to admit of serious debate.

And surely none will be prompter to concede this than those distinguished members of the anti circle, who nightly adorn the parlors of their social clubs, and who, in small games of draw and setback, hive the loose cash of their bosom friends.

The Arkansas Methodist had an interesting editorial, last week, on the Church Extension Anniversary, recently held in Little Rock. Among other things a paper was read from our Bro. Beard, of Rayne Memorial Church, in this city, on The Province and Work of the Annual Conference Board.

Notes.

If you want a man to quit evil work put him to doing good works.

Mr. Wesley's observation in regard to the influence of money upon Christians was this: "Nine in ten decrease in grace in the same proportion they increase in wealth."

It sounded strange to us to read in the last Wesleyan this notice: "The Board of Missions of the North Georgia Conference will hold its spring session April 28, in the First Methodist Church in Atlanta." What do our Mississippi and Louisiana Boards think of this?

In one of his speeches during the celebration of the Wesleyan Centennial in London, Hugh Price Hughes uttered this sentiment: "The day is coming when in every quarter of the globe the mechanical and oppressive unity of Rome will be confronted and mastered by the spontaneous and joyful unity of the people called Methodists."

Randolph-Macon College has got two male academies worth $100,000 apiece and a woman's college worth $200,000. These are to be "feeders" to the old college. Now, let Mississippians and Louisianians establish academies in various sections as "feeders" to Centenary and Millsaps. Here is an opportunity for a useful expenditure of cash.

The report of the thirty-second and thirty-third years of the New York Sabbath Committee is before us. Among other interesting things in it we find that the first week in April, 5–12, is set apart for special prayer for the cause of Sabbath observance. Pastors are respectfully exhorted to present to their congregations during that time the duty and privilege of Sabbath observance.

One of our best ecclesiastical lawyers says that when a man is appointed to a given charge, with a missionary appropriation, he is not entitled to the money unless he does all the work which the appointment involves. And yet there are numerous instances where preachers are receiving missionary money without attending to the work assigned them, and following other avocations for a living. What are our Mission Boards about?—Central Methodist.

We understand that a prominent gentleman recently announced in a public meeting that he intended to give $25,000 to Centenary College. That is one of the best intentions we have heard of in some time, and we sincerely trust that the Lord will so order his providence that the brother will be able in the near future to make the donation. And we pray that there may be found several others who will be "provoked" to a like good work. Why not?

Ministers of the gospel should diligently study "the signs of the times," and should faithfully proclaim the truths of the gospel as the only remedy for individual misery and social discontent.—Nashville Advocate.

Not only "ministers of the gospel," but "all God's people" are called to proclaim by earnest words and loving deeds the "truth as it is in Jesus," as the only remedy for the evils of the individual soul and of society. When the people who know Christ begin to preach him to all who knew him not things will begin to improve on all lines.

The most remarkable church we ever read about is Peach Creek Baptist Church, Cold Water Association, Mississippi. A writer in the Southern Baptist Record says:

Every member contributes to pastor's salary and foreign missions.

Our Saturday conferences are well attended.

You may expect nearly every male member to pray in public when called upon.

We pay our pastor $200 per annum quarterly in advance.

We have four members who give their tenth.

We gave last year $150 to missions, over $200 to endowment, about $50 to ministerial education; have a large W. M. S. and sixty Sunbeams at work for Jesus; an evergreen Sunday-school, a large Bible class of heads of families and they study and learn their lessons—in other words, we have a Bible church.

Can any Methodist Church come up to that or excel it?

This word is from General Booth:

Preaching about the rescuing the perishing is good, very good; praying that the perishing may be rescued is, I think, better still; singing "Rescue the perishing," with musical accompaniments, and wonderful trilling and bass voices, and all that, may produce some effect—I suppose it does—although I must confess I never observed much, perhaps through the want of opportunity. But the world—the unbelieving, rebellious, godless world—wants some desperate laborers, if anything is to be done on any large scale to rescue the souls of men, and change their course down to eternal woe.

On the subject of "The Man for 1891" the General says:

Then, again, the man we need for 1891 is a man of the people. He loves men as men, finds pleasure in them. Others may find their life's satisfaction in flowers, and in mountains, and in seas, in animals, in wealth or in art; his delight is in the sons of men. He sees of how much greater worth men are than cattle or gold, or fashion, or a lifetime amusement. He studies men, discerns their worth, is familiar with their miseries, sympathizes with them, and strives to carry to them deliverance.

Personal and Otherwise.

The third Annual Congress of the Scotch-Irish people of America will be held in Louisville, Ky., May 14 to 17, next.

Rev. F. R. Hill, of Saint Louis, has been transferred to the Baltimore Conference, and stationed at Trinity Church, Baltimore.

We acknowledge our indebtedness to Dr. F. L. Reid for a copy of the Minutes of the fifty-fourth session of the North Carolina Conference.

Dr. Howard Crosby, an eminent Presbyterian, and pastor of Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City, died on March 29. He was sixty-five years old.

Revs. F. S. Parker, of New Iberia, and S. S. Keener, of Pisquemine, called last Tuesday. These brethren represent their respective works as progressing favorably, and the outlook encouraging.

President Nicholson, of the State University, gave us a call last week, which we enjoyed very much. He is a genial gentleman, a good Methodist and one of the foremost mathematicians of this age.

We had the pleasure of listening, last Monday night, to the world-renowned explorer, Henry M. Stanley. His lecture was interesting and instructive. Mr. Stanley is a pleasant speaker, both as to voice and manner.

A letter from Bro. Weems, our missionary to Mexico, states that Sister Weems will leave Mexico for Mississippi about April 14. She comes after the daughter. She will find a warm welcome among old friends.

The brightest and best, it seems to us, of all the special numbers recently published by The Youth's Companion, is the one for Easter. The illustrations by Taylor, Gibson, Vogt, Myrick, and Miss Johnson have unusual merit.

Bro. Bowen, of Aberdeen, Miss., writes that Sam Jones will begin a meeting at that place, April 19. Arrangements for the meeting are progressing with good success. The new tabernacle is going up rapidly and is much larger than the one used last year.

By comparing the Minutes of the Louisiana Conference of 1880 with those of 1890, we find that the average salary of the preachers in charge has risen from $475 to $538, while the average salary of the presiding elders has risen from $557 to $978 in the same period.

We have received the Mississippi School Journal, the official organ of the department of public education in Mississippi. It is edited by T. F. McBeath, and published at Meridian for $1 a year. It is an interesting monthly, and will, doubtless, prove a valuable adjunct in the cause of popular education.

The report of the Vicksburg preachers' meeting represents the work of Christ as progressing in that city. Last Monday the meeting considered the question: "How to prepare a sermon"! The association consists of the preachers of the various denominations, and holds its weekly meetings in the rooms of the Y. M. C. A.

Our readers will, perhaps, be surprised at the large number of obituaries we publish this week. We are compelled to it by the large number on hand. Ordinarily, we have only two columns for obituaries; but they accumulate so fast that occasionally we must leave out other matter in order to "catch up." We have on hand now twenty-six obituaries. Again we ask the brethren to make obituaries brief.

Go and do likewise. If your whiskers are grizzly and unbecoming use Buckingham's Dye and they will look as when you were younger.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. Joseph S. Oakley writes: "We are in the midst of a gracious revival of religion in Columbus. Rev. George S. Inge is preaching with great acceptability and power. The whole town is stirred. Rev. G. W. Brown, of our Conference, died a few days ago."

—Rev. J. T. Moody writes from Moscinsko, Miss.: "Rev. G. W. Brown, superannuate member of the North Mississippi Conference, died in Rosser, Ala., on March 16. His friends at Durant have just finished a new house for him to live in during his lifetime. He never saw it. They give it to his wife while she lives. Don't know particulars of his death."

—Rev. H. D. Howell writes of Purvis circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We are now comfortably settled in our new parsonage at Lumberton. In the Minutes of our last Conference a parsonage is reported from this work, valued at two hundred dollars. We have never seen or heard of it. There was none here. Have added over forty to our membership, and succeeding well with the collections. Last Saturday night, at Poplarville, there were eight penitents at the altar, and one professed saving faith in Christ. Our people here are very kind to us, which is duly appreciated by us. The prospect is encouraging."

—Rev. J. H. Callaway reports from Trinity, La.: "We were blessed in our meeting at Vidalia. The membership was doubled there. Praise God! I am now preaching in Trinity. Will continue here this week. Hope to do much good. Our Holiness Association will convene at Colfax, to-morrow. I regret very much that I could not go. High water and other circumstances forbid my going; but I am praying for the dear brethren there. May God be there in sanctifying power! is my prayer."

—Rev. R. D. Norsworthy writes: "I report a good meeting in progress in our church at Crystal Springs. Rev. John Boring, of the Holston Conference, is conducting the services. We have two services a day. He is preaching to large congregations, and much good is being done. I wish to say to my brethren of the ministry, that if they wish the services of a holy, useful, powerful preacher, Bro. Boring is the man. He goes from here to Wesson, and from there to Brookhaven. We will report farther on as to the success of our meeting."

—W. L. C. H. writes from Centenary College: "At the invitation of the two societies of Centenary College, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, of your city, came up yesterday and delivered a very delightful and edifying address on the occasion of their annual March Debate. The audience were decidedly charmed with his manner of saying things as well as with the things he said. He attended our preachers' meeting this morning, and then left for New Orleans; all regretting that he could not stay longer with us. Mrs. Edward J. Gay has donated one thousand dollars toward the endowment, and a brother has announced his intention to give $25,000 in a short time. Let the professorships be endowed and named, and the scholarships likewise."

—Rev. S. J. Davies reports from Campo Bello, La.: "The work of the church on this part of our spiritual heritage is progressing favorably. The people seem interested and appreciative. The ADVOCATE grows in interest and favor. Those expositions of the Sunday-school lessons bear evidence of a student's brain, a master's hand. I have not the remotest idea who is the expositor; only I wish to say, he understands his business. Those letters to young preachers! They are a rich treasury of garnered wisdom. That man has long been in the harvest field. He brings his sheaves with him, and sensible men join in the rejoicing. Let the young preachers read them, and the older ones meditate thereon. We need that sort of writing in our papers. May great peace be thy portion!"

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Without the newspaper great advertisers can not exist. Without the advertisers, great and small (but mainly the small advertisers), the newspaper of to-day would be impossible.—James H Beals, Jr.

Long-standing cases of asthma are relieved by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment taken internally.

Locock's Cough Elixir.

It is unsurpassed for the relief and cure of all Throat and Lung Troubles. Coughs, Colds and Incipient Consumption yield readily to its medicinal virtues.

TESTIMONIAL.

LINDEN, ALA.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.
2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.
3. It never swaps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.
4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.
5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

DONALD KENNEDY Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. OBITUARIES.

GOODMAN—Miss CARRIE A. GOODMAN was born in Mobile, Ala., in the year 1835, and died in New Orleans, La., at the home of her nephew, Isaac B. Ellis, Sunday, March 1, 1891. The deceased was the daughter of Rev. Duke Goodman and Harriet Goodman, an elect couple, prominent for many years in the Methodist circles of Mobile.

It may be said of her religious life, that it no more had a beginning than it had an ending, being from infancy a trophy of divine grace, and able to say at almost any period of it that for her "to live was Christ." She came to New Orleans in the year 1855, and during the greater portion of the time subsequently was a member of the Carondelet Street Church, where for years she taught a Bible class in the Sunday-school. In the Autumn of 1888 she became a member of the Rayne Memorial Church, where she continued until her death. Though never married, she partially raised two sets of children, the offspring, respectively, of her sister and niece, and no mother could have been more faithful to such a trust or more affectionately reverenced by its subjects. Her illness of three or four weeks from internal cancer, though painful and protracted, was like a saintly unrobing for the better world, and it was a privilege indeed to frequent the chamber when this good woman met her fate. Brighter and brighter grew the manifestations of changing light until they merged into "the perfect day," and those who watched by the bedside of the sufferer, the long night through and into the Sabbath dawn, though they saw no vision and heard no voice, felt that they were "quite upon the verge of heaven." How beautiful such a life; such a death, how suggestive of the radiant beyond!

J. M. BEARD.

SHERRELL—Mrs. O. SHERRELL, daughter of Capt. J. R. Owen, of Hillsboro, Miss., died at the residence of her father, Feb. 24, 1891. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at Hillsboro, 1884; was married to Mr. Charles Sherrell, of Kerns, Tex., Sept. 8, 1886. She died of that dreadful disease, consumption. Her father, on hearing of her critical condition at her home, in Kerns, Tex., went for her and returned with her and her dutiful husband, where she lay for three weeks before her death.

She possessed a brilliant mind and was firm in what she conceived to be right. Before her death she became very much concerned about her soul's salvation. There were many earnest prayers offered up for her by relatives and friends. About thirty minutes before her death she said to her mother that she would soon be gone, but God had saved her soul. She called for her babe, kissed it, and said she would soon be at home. She requested her husband to join the church and meet her in heaven. She leaves many friends to mourn her loss. May God comfort the bereaved ones, and may her death be sanctified to their good!

SHELL—ETHEL, infant daughter of William and Agatha Shell, born Jan. 29, 1891, and died March 3, 1891.

This little bud burst forth to gladden the hearts of its parents, entwining itself about them; then passed on and up to bloom in all its loveliness in the garden of God's Eden above. Look upward, father, mother; she is waiting for you.

W. F. HENDERSON, Pastor

BALL—JEFFERSON DAVIS BALL, the son of D. Newton Ball and Mary E. Tyler, was born July 12, 1861. He joined the church in 1873; he died Oct. 20, 1890. These dates mark the boundaries of a noble life which was calmly and hopefully closed at the rustic home of his parents among the pines near Tylertown, Pike county, Miss.

He is sadly missed in that home circle, for no one of them all was so intimately and indispensably intertwined into the plans and possibilities of each. No scheme for getting an education or entering life could dispense with the masterful head and hand of "Brother Jeffie." This means that he was self-sacrificing. Indeed, I never knew anyone more unselfish, more thoroughly devoted to the welfare of others. His fatal illness was induced in a self-sacrificing effort to make money with which to aid in the education of his sisters. Led thus, he had sought employment in the malarious districts of Louisiana, where, by the exposures incident to his work, he fell ill of "swamp fever."

Early in his boyhood he had felt called to preach; but, hoping to be better prepared by and by, he had deferred beginning, but was making arrangements to enter Centenary College, that he might fit himself for the ministry, when death put an end to all his plans and toils.

He talked about dying, he was ready to go; he has gone to that bright land of our faith and hope. Let us meet him there!

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

FOOTE—Died, at his home in Port Gibson, Miss., Jan. 21, 1891, Mr. JULIAN L. FOOTE, in the seventy-ninth year of his age, after a long and painful illness, which he endured with Christian patience and fortitude. Bro. Foote was born in Clermont county, Ohio, Aug. 30, 1812. He came to Port Gibson in 1834, and has lived here ever since—nearly fifty-seven years—and during all these long years, through many sad vicissitudes and trying experiences, he bore himself as a Christian gentleman, and endeared himself to all our people; as was well attested by the very large concourse of people who attended his funeral at the Methodist Church, and followed his remains to the cemetery.

For nearly half a century Bro. Foote was a member of the Methodist Church, and most of the time an official member. He had been a Mason for about fifty-five years. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor of the Methodist Church here, assisted by Rev. J. A. B. Jones. At the cemetery, after the ritualistic service of his church, he was buried with masonic honors.

Thus one of our oldest and most highly esteemed citizens and one of our warmest and best friends has been called away from this world to that better world beyond the stars. He leaves one son, two daughters and several grandchildren to mourn his loss.

W. T. MORRIS.

BASS—J. J. BASS was born in North Carolina, Jan. 28, 1818; died near Corinth, Alcorn county, Miss., Feb. 14, 1891, aged seventy-three years. His father moved with him to middle Tennessee—Franklin county—where he grew to manhood; then came to Tippah county, Miss., 1841. He was first married to Miss Louisa Claxton in 1842, who lived only two years and died, and then to Miss Eliza C. Mathis in 1856, which union was blessed with fourteen children—ten of whom are still living. Bro. Bass first joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Tennessee; but after coming to this country he attached himself to the M. E. Church, South, which he loved. He has two sons in the ministry—Bro. W. D. Bass, of Pontotoc circuit, and S. Q. Bass, local preacher, in Houston and Wesley.

May God bless his dear companion and children who are left behind to mourn his loss, and may we all meet him at last over the river! A. B. DEARING.

McCLURE—At her home, near Jonesville, La., Miss OLIVE McCLURE, in the nineteenth year of her age. A convert of the Methodist Church, she was a devout Christian. Amiable, kind and gentle to all, she was esteemed and beloved by all who knew her. She leaves behind a mother, several little brothers and sisters and a host of warm friends to mourn her loss. Sad as it is to part from her, we feel that our loss is her eternal gain.

MRS. B. KING.

DAVIS—Mrs. MARY B. DAVIS, of Hermanville, passed away on Feb. 12, at the residence of her son, A. R. Chunn. She was the daughter of Col. E. E. Hankinson, of Claiborne county, and spent most of her life in that county.

The summons found her waiting and ready, even wishing for the time to come which would release her pure spirit from its frail tenement so wasted by long suffering. As she grew physically weaker her faith grew stronger, and she rejoiced continually in hope, patient in tribulation, serving the Lord.

This dear, good woman was a great worker in the church, and let her light shine. She delighted in doing the will of her Lord and prized his heavenly ways above her highest joy, and for years had not known a pleasure unmingled with the church's good. She leaves three children—two sons and a lovely frail young daughter—who rise up and call her blessed, for she taught them with wisdom, and lived to see them all shining lights and workers in the church, and she has left them the sweet, the blissful hope of being reunited when this mortality shall have put on immortality.

M. D. M.

FORD—B. H. FORD, the subject of this sketch, was born in Noxubee county, Miss., April 22, 1861, and died Oct. 8, 1890. He made a profession of religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in his twelfth year, at his home at Mashulaville, Miss. At the same time his father joined the church. It was a fulfilment of prophecy—"A child shall lead them."

Bro. Ford was married to Miss Lizzie Boon in the fall of 1881, and the Lord blessed their home with five children, three of whom still survive. The other two were waiting at the beautiful gate to receive a loving father as he entered in. Bro. Ford was always ready to do what he could to advance the cause of Christ. He was a faithful steward and Sunday-school superintendent. The church greatly misses him; but the loss to the church militant is the gain to the church above.

He leaves a wife, three children, his parents and one sister, besides a large circle of friends, to mourn his departure; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. We bow in meek submission to the will of God, and say, Farewell, dear brother, until we meet again. R. A. BURROUGHS.

ROBERTS—Mrs. SARAH ROBERTS was born in Ulster county, N. Y., March 30, 1827; was the youngest daughter of her parents. Her maiden name was Gingee. Deprived by death of the love and care of a mother while an infant, she deeply felt her irreparable loss through a long life. On Jan. 6, 1848, she married Benjamin Roberts; was the mother of eight children—six of whom survive; died Jan. 22, 1891. In early life she consecrated herself to Christ, and from the day that fixed her choice on the blessed Savior she rejoiced in the love of God shed abroad in her heart by the Holy Spirit, till in life's latest hour she bowed and blessed in death the bond so dear.

Since 1871 she has lived at Rolling Fork, Sharkey county, Miss., an earnest and consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, loved and honored by the community. The universal kindness of her nature made her forgetful of self. She gave her life for others. Her daily conduct demonstrated the religion she professed, and gave testimony clear and assuring. Her end was peace. J. A. B. J.

LENOIR—WALTER A. LENOIR, son of Jno. T. Lenoir, was born June 27, 1881, and died Feb. 19, 1891.

He was affectionate and obedient to his parents. He seemed also to have a special fondness for preachers. He obeyed the Savior's injunction to "seek first the kingdom of God." Though not ten years of age, he had given his young heart to God and joined the Methodist Church. His example in this respect is worthy of imitation.

Just why God cut so short a life that seemed full of promise for good, is beyond our comprehension. But we know that "God is too wise to err, and too good to do wrong."

His young spirit has gone to him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." To the parents and relatives I would say, you "weep not as those who have no hope." Though you can not call him, live so that you will go to him where parting will never come.

M. H. MOORE.

RHODES—On Jan. 1, 1891, the home of Bro. O. A. and Sister M. A. Rhodes was saddened by the death of their little son, WILLIE ANDERSON, who was born unto them April 6, 1881.

It was hard for papa and mama to give little Willie up, especially so when they consider the cause of his death: shot accidentally. He was up stairs at play. Finding a key hanging on the wall, he tried it in the lock of one of the trunks. It fitted, and he opened the trunk, in which he found a pistol. He began playing with it. Somehow he discharged it, the ball entering his stomach. He died the third day. His parents were away from home at the time, spending the day. When the news reached them it was a great shock, and on reaching home, to find there was little or no hope, it was almost enough to crush their hearts. They still sorrow for little Willie, but, as Christians, not without hope. Having faith in God, they also have faith in the promises of his Son, who said, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." R. S. GALE.

RAY—NETTIE FLORENCE, daughter of Rev. J. R. and Mrs. M. M Ray, was born in Ruston, La., Jan. 8, 1886, and died in Jackson, La., Feb. 3, 1891, aged five years and twenty-five days. She was taken sick with swamp fever about Jan. 15, in Ouachita parish. Her parents came to Jackson, Jan. 2, little suspecting that their precious and only living child was so soon to be taken from them. But God's ways are not as our ways. Jesus said to Peter, "What I do thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter." So many of God's dealings with us, that are now dark and mysterious, will after awhile be made plain. Here we must walk by faith, not by sight. It is ours to be submissive to God's holy will, knowing that "all things work together for good to them that love God." After awhile "we shall know even as we are known."

L. CARLEY.

WAFER—NANCY WAFER (nee Clements), wife of T. B. Wafer, was born in Jackson county, Ga., June 6, 1811; died Jan. 18, 1890, at her home in Bienville parish, La.

Sister Wafer was converted at the age of twelve, joined the M. E. Church, South, and continued a consistent member until the time of her death. The writer visited her a short while before her death, and his heart was made glad as she related her Christian experience and her love to God.

She leaves a husband and five children to mourn her loss. Weep not, loved ones, for while the body of wife and mother is at rest in the tomb, her spirit has gone to be with Jesus.

B. H. SHEPPARD.

BROWN—Little CLAIRENCE was born Jan. 2, 1891; died Jan. 13, 1891. The only child of C. M. and C. E. Brown, his stay in this world was short; but the young parents that were becoming so much attached to their little babe only have more to encourage them to live as God would have them live, and meet the little bud that God has called to heaven to bloom for ever. God bless the parents in this sad time!

OBITUARIES.

MOORE—Mrs. ROSA MOORE, beloved wife of the late Robt. Moore, was born in Tuscumbia, Ala., July 1, 1838, and died at her home, in Paola county, Texas, Feb. 19, 1891.

Mrs. Moore united with the M. E. Church, South, whon quito young, since which time the life which she lived she lived "by tho faith of the Son of God," evidencing to all with whom she came in contact that she had not only been with Christ, but had partaken of his nature, and was being confermed to his lmage every day. Her life was remarkable for self-denial and devotion to others and forgetfulness of self.

The end was very unexpected to all who knew her, and, although having little or no warning, she bravely, peacefully and happily met the last enemy which is death, and came off more than conqueror through Christ, who had loved her, and given himself for her.

Sister Moore leaves three daughters, upon all of whose character is the impress of her godly training and Christ-like example; one of whom is the wife of W. L. Van Horn, M. D., of Columbia, La. They "sorrow not as those without hope," and look forward in faith to the morning of the resurrection, where ties severed on earth shall be reunlied never more to be severed. C. MARCY LYONS.

HOLCOMBE—Sister MARY IDA HOLCOMBE was born June 30, 1870; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Marvin, Steens Creek, Rankin county, Miss., September, 1886; was married to K. S. Enochs, Nov. 21, 1889, and died Feb. 20, 1891, aged twenty years seven months and twenty days.

She was truly a consecrated Christian. She gave many evidences of her love and devotion to God in her last illness, as well as before. When the lamp of life burned low, she was told the doctors had but little hope of her recovery. She sang tho first verse and chorus of that soul-stirring song, "The Great Physician," and, again, a few hours before she passed away, she sang, alone, the chorus, "And I'll sing hallelujah and you'll sing hallelujah," etc. As she sang "she pointed away to where she saw the light." She afterwards said to her husband, "I want to get well for you and haby; but God knows best, and if he takes me home, take good care of my boy and bring him up for God." She called the family around her bed just a short time before she left, and said: "Oh! I do hope we will all meet in heaven, where there will be no more parting." Thus passed away one of the purest young Christians, I think, I ever knew. I knew her well, having been her pastor for more than two years. J. F. ROBINSON.

FELDER—Miss LULA S. FELDER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R H. Felder, of Topisaw, Pike county, Miss., was born Sept. 12, 1867, and sweetly "fell on sleep," Dec. 16, 1890.

She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the Topisaw Camp Meeting in 1881. The church knew no more devoted and consistent member. She graduated in Lee College in 1886. At the organization of the Topisaw Woman's Missionary Society, in 1888, she was elected corresponding secretary, and afterward elected president, in which office sho continued. She was also an efficient Sunday-school teacher. Hers was a gentle, symmetrical, model life, loving and lovely. All were her friends, and precious was she to the hearts of her loved ones. Hers was indeed a most beautiful character. How bright her crown in heaven and how glorious will be the day of reunion with such precious ones!

She was perfectly resigned to death. When the writer said to her: "The Lord has a better home for us. If he were to call you, you would not be afraid to go, would you?" with what emphasis she answered, "I surely would not," will never be forgotten. We will fondly chorish her memory till we see her again.

B. S. RAYNER.

McCRAINE—JOHN MCCRAINE was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., Dec. 4, 1847; was married to Miss Sarah Jane Swayze, Jan. 10, 1871; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1886, and lived a member of the same until he died, Nov. 8, 1890.

Bro. McCraine was very quiet. He seldom ever expressed his feelings. He attended his church as long as he was able. It was a privilege to him to take care of his preacher. The writer visited him a short time before his death, and his words were these—"I am trusting it all in the Lord's hands." His aged father went to his home to see him just before he died, and told him there was a change to be made with us all. He said: "Papa, I have made that change already. I wish I could talk to you, but I am too weak." He suffered for a long time, but he was a patient sufferer. He died with consumption. He leaves a devoted wife, three sons and a large number of relatives to mourn on account of his death. May God bless and save his loved ones with him in heaven! is the prayer of His pastor, W. M. SULLIVAN.

BENETT—Mrs. JANE ELIZABETH BENETT was born in Westville, Simpson county, Miss., Feb. 12, 1839; was married to Chas. M. Stevens, Feb. 18, 1862; again, to Robert H. Bonett, Oct. 5, 1866, and departed this life in Camden, Miss., Dec. 18, 1890.

Sister Benett was endowed with rare gifts of mind and heart. She was remarkably intelligent and devoutly pious. She was eminently qualified for great usefulness in the church of God. This was demonstrated by her prominence in every good work. She was peculiarly gifted in prayer, often leading the devotions of the public lecture, conducting prayer meetings, "Wesleyans," missionary societies, etc. This beautiful Christian character was, no doubt, the fruit of her early training and consecration to God. She joined the M. E. Church, at the age of twelve years, and from thence ever cultivated and exemplified the graces of the Holy Spirit, which so pre-eminently characterized her life, and which were so beautifully blended in her amiable spirit.

E. F. EDGAR.

TERRY—Maj. THOS. L. TERRY was born on Long Island, June 16, 1814, and died in Coushatta, La., Feb. 12, 1891, in the seventy-seventh year of his age. Bro. Terry came to Mansfield, La., some twenty years ago, where we first had the pleasure of his acquaintance. He came with a well-organized Christian family. They were members of the Methodist Church, and were devoted to its various interests. With open arms and hearts of love they welcomed its ministers and were devoted to every good work.

We are not apprised as to the date of Bro. Terry's espousal to Christ. Religion seemed to have been a life-work with him. For many years he had been a resident of Coushatta, La. Last fall, after an absence of many years, we had the pleasure of visiting the family again. And while we were received with the same cordial kindness by the father and children, there was wanting in that circle the good cheer and cheerful smile of the devoted wife and mother. Age, affliction and bereavement had sadly told on the appearance of Bro. Terry. For several weeks longer he still lingered and wasted; but grew more patient and resigned to the last. Buoyant of hope, he would say, "I shall soon meet your dear mother in the better land." On Feb. 12 Bro. Terry "fell on sleep, and was gathered to his fathers and his sons buried him." J. P.

McFERREN—Miss MARY ANN MCFERREN died at her home in Washington, Adams county, Miss., Feb. 22, at 3:40 P. M., 1891. She was born in Washington, June 27, 1834, and commenced life as an assistant teacher in 1849, and after the death of Rev. W. Wheildon she was regularly installed as teacher of the public school in Washington, which relation she sustained, with one or two short intervals, until the day of her death.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, some time during the year 1890. Although not uniting with the church until late in life, she always bid it God-speed and earnestly worked for its success. Few have lived to be more useful and so universally loved as she. A loving sister, a true, sympathizing friend, an exemplary Christian character. She has fallen asleep in Jesus, and her mortal remains quietly rest in the old hill-side cemetery, where no troubled waves will ever roll across her peaceful breast, where the tutelar angel will keep vigil over her sacred dust until the herald of eternal light ushers in the resurrection morn. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." "He giveth his beloved sleep."

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

WILDER—TALBERT G. WILDER was born Dec. 12, 1828, and died in Camden, Madison county, Miss., Jan. 11, 1891, aged sixty-three years. He was twice married: first to Miss Mary Ann Adams, Aug. 26, 1858; last to Mrs. Lou. E. Byors (nee Tucker) July 16, 1868.

Bro. Wilder became a member of the M. E. Church, South, in 1854, at Sulphur Springs, in this county. Subsequently moved his membership to this place (Camden), where he has ever lived a faithful, consecrated Christian life. He was for many years, and to the day of his death, a faithful, liberal steward. He was a warm friend and a strong help always to his pastor. He loved the church, and spared no means to advance the Master's cause. The family altar was never neglected, however busy or tired he might be. The last night previous to his fatal illness he remembered the new pastor and the church during family worship, praying earnestly for them. Oh, what a worthy example! Bro. Wilder was universally esteemed, and the unanimous verdict when he died was, "A good and useful man is gone; his place can not be filled."

E. F. EDGAR.

WALL—Mrs. JOSEPHINE WALL (whose maiden name was Pharis) died at her home in Wilkinson county, Miss., Feb. 24, 1891. She was forty-five years old. She died near the place of her birth. When she was young she joined the Christian church.

She had been a sufferer for years, but was confined to her bed for ten weeks to suffer the will of God, which she did without a murmur, but said she was ready when it was God's will to take her. Sister Wall said but little about dying. It was not necessary, for she had long since prepared to meet her God, and death was sweet to her. She would never fail to see to the sick in her community when she was able. She was loved by all who knew her. She was a loving mother, a faithful wife and, best of all, a consecrated Christian. It was a common saying: If she was not a Christian, there is none. This shows that her influence was for good. We feel the assurance that, though we no longer see the familiar face in the church militant, she is now numbered with the redeemed of the church triumphant. She leaves a husband, two daughters and a number of friends to mourn. W. M. SULLIVAN.

"Who shall Decide, when Doctors Disagree?"

We shall endeavor to answer this question farther on. As to the frequent disagreements of doctors, their conflicting opinions, their controversies, their different diagnoses in the same case, who can deny the fact? The existence of the various "schools" of medicine, we have no time to enumerate them, is alone sufficient to convince anyone. The faculty are generally in accord on one point, you are ill. To be sure, you might have determined this without their aid, but this being settled, why not decide for yourself? But, before you decide, investigate the claims of the Compound Oxygen Treatment of Drs. Starkey & Palen, weigh carefully the evidence, and we are certain you will find it just what you need. To aid you in your investigation, send for our brochure of 200 pages, a Treatise on Compound Oxygen, and read it carefully. Sent free. It contains abundant testimonials and records of cures in obstinate and chronic cases. No other genuine. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

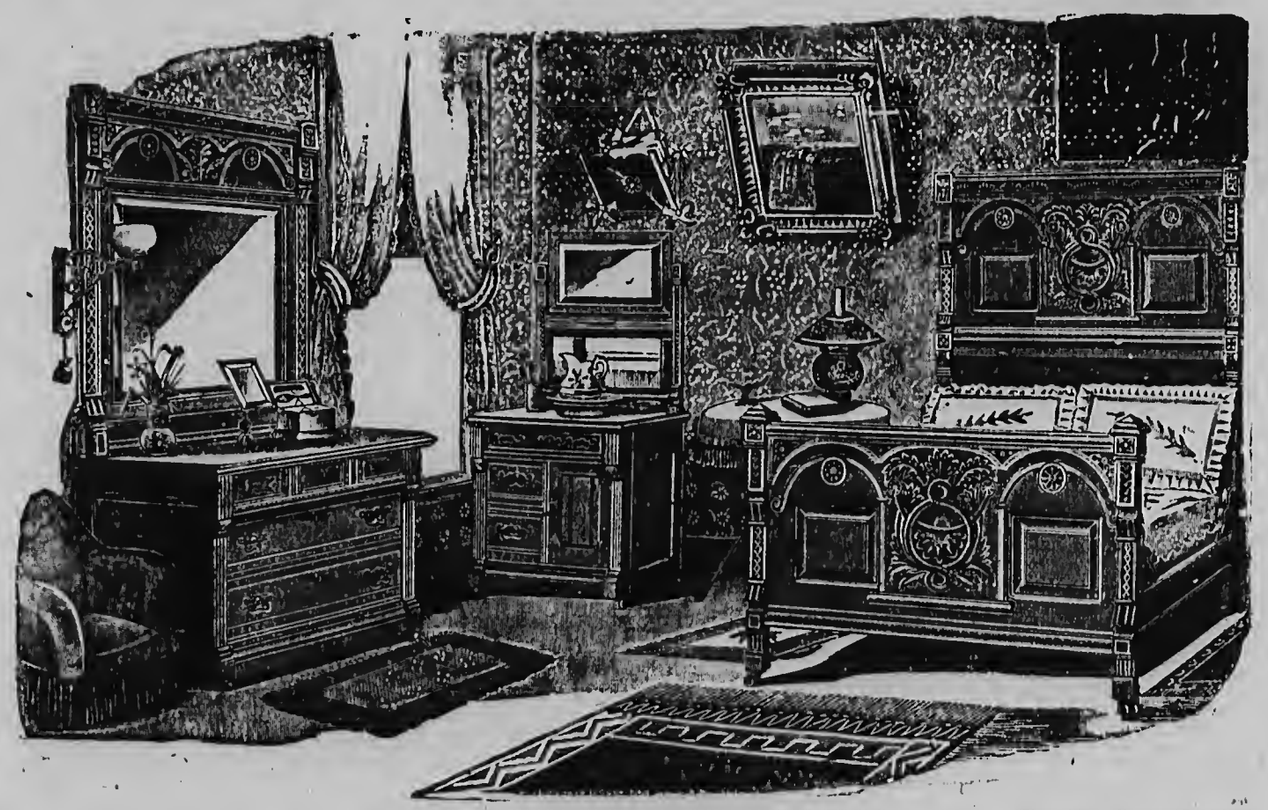
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

JNO. A. MILLER, P. E.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

A Handsome Catalogue.

Heath, Schwartz and Co., Limited, are in receipt of their catalognes for 1891, which are unusually handsome. On the front corner is a representation of an urn from which a sprig of holly herries springs and twines itself gracefully over the page. On the back cover a wiseacre owl gazes at you over a skillfully drawn design representing a sign board. The last pages of the book are blank and very useful for memorandum, but most useful are the contents of the other pages, a list of the goods carried by this well-known house, with prices. The book is sent free of charge upon application.

Flower Seeds Free—A Liberal Offer.

All of our readers who are interested in Flowers and have a place in which to cultivate them, should accept the liberal offer of S. H. Moore & Co., 27 Park Place, New York, who agree to send their charming paper, "The Ladies' World," on trial three months for only 12 cents, and 200 varieties of Choice Flower Seeds free as a premium, with every Subscription. See their advertisement on another page of this issue.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

We will mail free, on receipt of two cents in stamps, a sample box of Dr. Davis' Liver Pills. They will cure costiveness, biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, piles, and all disorders that arise from a diseased liver and impure blood.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Dr. Howard Crosby died in New York City on March 29.

H. M. Stanley, the eminent explorer, lectured in this city this week.

Hon. John McEnery, ex-governor of Louisiana, died, on March 28, in this city.

There have been serious riots in the Pennsylvania coke regions. In some instances the strikers have attacked the furnaces and destroyed property.

A bill was passed in the lower house of the Maine Legislature, on March 27, providing that no person shall be allowed to vote who can not read and write his name.

The bill to prevent unjust discrimination by insurance companies has passed the Illinois Senate. Notice was given, however, of a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

The Wisconsin House has passed a bill prohibiting the manufacture of cheese and butter out of substances other than milk, but also providing for the proper making of oleomargarine.

Because of the grip, which prevails to an enormous extent in Chicago, the death rate is increasing, and it is said that the undertakers and coffin manufacturers have all they can do to keep up with the rush of business.

A farmer living nine miles from Peoria, Ill., has discovered a rock vein of silver ore on his farm about thirty feet below the surface. The vein is said to be a rich one. Arrangements are being made to develop the mine.

The Texas Lumbermen's Association meets in Houston on April 13 and 14. Every arrangement has been perfected for its entertainment. Delegates from Louisiana, Arkansas and other lumber-producing States are expected in large numbers.

Governor Eagle has approved the joint resolution urging the Arkansas representatives in Congress to use their influence to secure an amendment to the Constitution providing for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

The national real estate congress met in Birmingham, Ala., on March 30, with representatives from nearly all the Southern and Western States present. There are some fifty delegates present. The convention will be in session for several days, and a national exchange will be formed.

The Reading Iron Company has notified 2,000 employes that owing to the continued depression in the iron trade, a slight reduction in wages will be made on April 1. The employes will accept the reduction, as a restoration of the old scale of wages is promised by the company with improved business.

Two Iowa saloon keepers have had constructed a saloon building in sections, so that it can be taken apart and stored away. Recently the district court granted an injunction against the saloon, and the other night the proprietors took down their building and stored it away in a warehouse, so that when the sheriff comes to serve the injunction he will find no saloon.

Dispatches from the northern border of Texas say that no small amount of excitement among cattle men has been caused by the announcement that Government Agent Miles has sent marshals to the Osage Nation in the Indian Territory to notify stock men that they will not allow cattle to go into that reservation. The cattle men have leased large tracts of grazing lands in the Osage country at a heavy expense, and for the last two weeks a small estimate places the number of cattle shipped there at 10,000 head.

FOREIGN.

It is said that the excitement in Italy caused by the lynching at New Orleans has completely subsided.

The Bulgarian Minister of Finance was assassinated, on March 27, by an individual who, after firing three shots, escaped.

The opposing factions in Ireland came together at Sligo, the other day, and many heads were bruised by stones and clubs.

The northeast departments of France have been visited by heavy snow storms. The mountain road in the Vosges is impassable.

Since the alliance of France and Russia has been consummated, reports coming from various sources indicate early aggressive action on the part of the two nations.

The Spanish minister of the colonies has designated the director of the finance department to represent Spain in the negotiations with General Foster for a treaty with the United States.

There will be a brilliant period of court festivities in June during the stay of the Emperor William at Buckingham Palace. The programme will include receptions, balls, concerts, and other entertainments.

Queen Victoria, who is visiting France, is gratified at the manner in which she has been received. President Carnot has telegraphed to the Queen, placing himself and the French officials at her service during her stay at Grasse.

Archbishop Walsh has been summoned to Rome by the Pope, who is anxious in the present crisis to arrest the decline in the Catholic ascendency in Ireland by forming a united Catholic party in that country, which shall proceed by reasonable methods, but which shall discountenance Mr. Parnell.

Walter Besant, Wm. Black, and others, are discussing the formation of a society of English authors and copyright owners, with the view of establishing or securing control of a printing house in the United States. The Athenæum refers to the scheme as an indispensable preliminary to any attempt to derive advantage from the American copyright act.

Health and Happiness are Inseparable.

This depends largely upon the state of the liver, which a dose of Maguire's Cundurango one hour before breakfast will keep in good condition. Prevents indigestion and costiveness. 75 cents per bottle.

There's safety behind it as well as in the use of it

But there's nothing ahead of it. The reputation of Pearline covers a multitude of imitations. Their names may end in "ine," but their use may end in trouble. Don't be persuaded that they are "the same as Pearline," or "as good as Pearline." The peddlers who try to sell them will tell you that they are; if you're reckless enough to try them, you will know that they are not. Get your Pearline of some good grocer, for it's never peddled. It's the best thing to get, and it's the only way to get it.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette

Nutshell of the Church Question.

would be injustice to the church
lo the readers of the ADVOCATE me to suffer the church question, ed by the Rev. Alexis Bowman, to in the awkward and covered-up ner in which he proposes to leave his rejoinder of March 19. If I ember right, I said the main ques-must not be evaded. When I d him to name a few of the very y authors he said in all time past the doctrine of no new church at ade in apostolic times, I very well he could not produce them. He correctly names Dr. Summers. If thought of it, and had deemed it eary, he would have been men-ed; and there may be others that I ot chance to know. Dr. Summers' is new. He was my very intifriend for near forty years, and I, ourse, knew him to be one of the ors of Ecce Ecclesia, where this le subject is elaborated, and the church theory opposed.

o. Bowman quotes from Mr. Ralas follows, italics and all: "In of detail pertaining to church pol-the Scriptures give no specific inctions; and, in relation to all such ers, churches are left to be guided e principles of reason and expe-ey." (Divinity, p. 858.)

is brings out the point exactly. estabished, or organized, the ch—that is, the government of the ch—in this way: The Scriptures, ing church polity, establish only e leading foundation principles," give no "specific instructions" as alters of detail. That is very
, and is a correct statement of Mr. on's teachings on this point. The e fixes the "leading foundation ciples" of church government, and hurch arranges the minor details.
this there are two objections:
, it is High Churchism fully in all ndamental principles. Dr. Hook, s "Two-Sermons," and every Oxtraciarian writer, take exactly ground, and no other. All the about Bishops, "historic episco-
," chain of ordinations, etc., grow, rally and legitimately, out of this
ine. Secondly, it is a clear mak-of Scripture, out-and-out, out of whole cloth, for there is not one word of teaching in the New Testament on the subject of church government. You might as well look there for prescriptive teaching on astronomy, agriculture, how to build a sheepfold, or how to prune or plant fig trees. I repeat: the Savior did not teach "certain foundation principles," nor any other principles, in "much," nor in little, on that subject. Let one word be shown.

Mr. Bowman is a High Churchman, and is not aware of it—that is, he teaches High Church doctrine, not in its details, as avowed prelatists do, but in all its great destructive, anti-biblical and "fundamental principles." Grant the new church theory, either as to its "fundamental principles," or "the detail pertaining to church polity," and you concede all that a consistent High Churchman could ask.

I am aware that that was the general teaching prior to some forty or fifty years ago; and it is further known that Dr. Ralston, like many others, right along there, followed the crowd, and that Dr. Summers was among the first—I might say that, so far as my limited knowledge goes, probably the first—writer of large note to deny that Christ taught any principles of church government, either fundamental or in detail.

Mr. Bowman's complaint, that I modified his meaning by a too short quotation, is not warranted by the facts. I quoted every word that was germane to the point under consideration. And he himself, with his additional quotation, does not change the matter an iota, as is shown above.

Here is the nutshell point: Dr. Ralston, Mr. Bowman, and many others hold that Christ taught "some leading foundation principles" of church government. I hold up the New Testament, and deny that he taught anything on that subject. Is that sufficiently explicit? R. ABBEY.

Yazoo City, Miss.

Brookhaven District.

I like to follow a good man; a clearent, sound preacher; one who is no hobbyist, and is neither an optimist nor pessimist; one who is firm in his convictions of duty, yet meek and gentle in his life and official administration. I like to hear the people speak well of my predecessor. Bro. Lewis captured the people of this district, and, in turn, the people have captured me. All who knew my feelings on the subject knew I was not an aspirant for the office of presiding elder. But my convictions of duty led me to heartily acquiesce in the appointment.

We reached Brookhaven, the proposed center of operations for the district, at early dawn on the first day of January. There being no district parsonage, the warm-hearted pastor and generous president of Whitworth College had made the next best possible arrangement for us. Our New Year's dinner was taken at the station parsonage, and an elegant one it was, where our urbane host and hostess did the honors in just such style as all who know Bro. Huntley and his excellent wife can anticipate. But, as a full quarter has elapsed, too much space devoted to our reception would seem out of date; hence the superb dining at the college on the second, and the unstinted hospitality of fifteen parsonages, and the hearty welcome and good cheer around the hearth-stones of many noble laymen, as I have passed around the district, can only receive this bare mention, though worthy of all praise. The fact is, the great kindness of the preachers and people has overwhelmed me.

I have completed one round, reaching every appointment in due time, and holding every Quarterly Conference, despite inhospitable weather, swollen creeks, and forbidding roads. God has been with us graciously at all times. The spirit of revival is kindling all through the district. New churches and parsonages are being built, and others repaired. We dedicated a neat and comfortable new church, called Bethesda, on the Caseyville circuit, on the fourth Sunday in March. God filled the house with his presence, and we had a most precious time. Such a love-feast I have not witnessed for years.

Lebanon Church approaches completion, and will be fully up to the demands of the community.

Bro. Galloway, at Magnolia, with his excellent wife and precious babe, rejoices in the occupancy of their new, cosy parsonage; and he deserves much credit for the energy, muscle and brain he gave to its construction.

Bro. Wood, of China Grove, has reconstructed and beautified the parsonage, so that its old friends would hardly recognize it. He has good prospects on the circuit.

Bro. Havers, on Pleasant Grove circuit, with his elect lady, occupies the new parsonage. Though not finished, it is quite habitable, and will be all that is required soon.

Other places are planning for new parsonages and churches. In the midst of all these improvements, the district parsonage grows apace, and will soon be ready for occupancy.

Bro. Norsworthy has just closed a meeting of great interest at Crystal Springs. Bro. Boring, of the Holston Conference, who was with him, is now with Dr. West, at Wesson, and at the close of that meeting will be expected at Brookhaven.

Bro. Inge is to be with Bro. Cooper, at Hazlehurst, about the middle of May.

Finances, considering the unfavorable winter, are well up. Bowerton circuit carries the banner thus far. It paid pastor and presiding elder, at first quarterly meeting, one full quarter, and thirty per cent. on the second. Caseyville circuit was only ten per cent. behind it on second quarter, paying first in full. I need not say Bros. Miller and Ellis are measuring up to the demands of their liberal people.

We have four ex-presiding elders in the district. They are valuable counsellors, and know how to appreciate the delicate points in the experience of the inexperienced in the office.

I have visited our superannuates, Bros. Strickland and Nicholson. Bro. Strickland's natural vision is growing dim, and his step feeble, but his spiritual vision is clear, and his hold on the promises firm. Bro. Nicholson has been disabled from the effects of a fall; but he was regaining his physical strength to some extent. He is growing old gracefully; ripening for the kingdom. It did my soul good to talk and pray with these veteran soldiers. The same spirit stirs their hearts that did when they were in the heat of battle. They still hear the clash of arms, and see the smoke of battle from afar, and are eager for the conflict; but God says, "Rest on the banks of the river."

Epworth Leagues are being organized at many points in the district, with good prospects.

Whitworth College is doing good and faithful work. President Fitzhugh is a good disciplinarian, and has an able faculty. The standard of scholarship is high, and the teaching thorough. The social home-life of the college is delightful. Dr. Murrah, with unaffected suavity and gentleness, coupled with intellectual dignity, exercises a commanding influence, and is a universal favorite with faculty and students. A better location, buildings, apparatus and faculty for a college would be difficult to find, North or South. R. S. WOODWARD, P. E.

Holy Week in Mexico.

To-day is being celebrated the feast of flowers, and Indians from far and near are here. The flower decorations are beyond description. I don't believe in all the world there can be found a people with more artistic taste than the Mexicans. The poorest naked Indian can arrange the loveliest bouquet it was ever my privilege to see. Mr. Weems and I were walking on the paseo a few evenings since, and saw another bull-ring being torn away. He said to me: "Little by little we are doing something for the Master." The missionaries have brought this about. This week is called "La Santa Semana" (holy week), and the hideous rattle of the "matracas" is heard, whose ceaseless din will deafen us the entire week. I think they originated from the rattle used in the churches, instead of bells, during the last days of Lent; but are said to be a representation, a ridicule of the cries of the Jews, "Crucify him! crucify him!" as Jesus was urged on to his death. It is said that the ceremonies during these days in many of the churches are strangely wedded to the Azteo. The whole week is pregnant with interest, beginning on "Viernes de Dolores"—Friday of Sorrows—which is the Mexican May festival. Indian canoes glide out from the villages by sunrise on this day, with their lovely freight of choicest flowers. Mexico has been noted for her beautiful flowers since the time of the Aztecs. In holy week tents and booths are erected on the Plaza Square and in some of the streets, and Mexican drinks of all descriptions are sold. Open-air concerts are given, and everyone who can afford it is in the streets dressed in new clothes. The grand Mexican ladies are dressed simply in black. On Holy Thursday it is the custom to visit the churches, and many of the leading churches in this capital are kept open until ten o'clock at night. On Holy Saturday the strangest of Mexican customs is followed, which is the burning of Judas. Effigies of the arch-traitor are made in every conceivable size and description, and are filled with the crackers. Sunday morning, at ten o'clock, the cathedral bells break from the silence held during the time of the Lord's passion; these firecrackers are lighted, and the modern Judases burst. The burning of Judas takes place in the zocalo, the streets, the squares, houses, and everywhere. But this holy week is not a season of delight to us Protestants. Many of our people are thrown out of employment, and others have much trouble. There came a poor woman in our society to-day, saying she had been maltreated, and then turned into the street without her pay.

Before I finished my letter my natal day arrived, and the children in our school had found out what day it would be, and celebrated it in a charming manner. Thinking I would be most pleased to see what interest they felt in mission work, they had a reunion of the boys' and girls' school in the Mission House; and I know you would have enjoyed seeing how eagerly they poured their centarers in my lap. The teacher of the male school then arose, and spoke of how they celebrated his birthday a few years ago, when he was in the Romish Church. He said they had brandy on the table, and saints hung all around; "but now," he said, "blessed be God! all is changed." Then followed an earnest talk to the Catholic children, with a voice choked with emotion. He then asked all to sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul." The Bible woman prayed a fervent prayer that Julio Roldan, whom I will carry with me to the States, may return as a missionary to her own people. I don't know that I ever felt more happy than on this day, surrounded by all these dark faces, so eager to do something. I had dinner at the Mission House for the whole school, and they seemed to enjoy it greatly. If the railroads are all right, we expect to leave next month for the United States. Pray for us more and more, and for Mexico.

S. G. WEEMS.

Betting and Gambling.

BY THAIN DAVIDSON, D. D.

There are just six ways that I can conceive of by which one may come into the possession of money. Either, first, he must earn it by his own industry, or, secondly, it may come to him by his father's will, or in the form of a legacy; or, thirdly, he may get it by begging—and there are many varieties of this art—a man may be a genuine beggar, though he does not come knocking at the door with a piteous story, or stand bare-headed at the street-corner with a tattered hat in his hand; or, fourthly, he may get it by borrowing; or, fifthly, he may get it by stealing; or, sixthly, he may get it by betting and gambling.

Of all these methods of acquiring money, I do not hesitate to say that the first is the best and the last is the very worst.

No money is so pleasant to have and to spend, no money has such blessing resting on it, as that which has been earned by honest labor, whether of brain or brawn, of mind or muscle. But to acquire it by betting is the meanest method of all; and the fact that it looks more respectable than deliberate stealing makes it all the more dangerous.

I confess to have less respect for the gambler than I have for the honest thief (if such an expression may be pardoned). His conduct is not so likely to be followed by repentance, and the habit once acquired almost invariably grows until it becomes a fierce and ungovernable passion.

It would be easy to show that this vice is of ancient and world-wide existence; that it is distinctly opposed to Scripture, to conscience, and to all morality; that it saps the foundations of virtue and commerce; that it is acquiring gigantic proportions, and is working untold evil in the land, and that the testimony of all good men has been emphatic against it.

The disposition to betting and gambling in some form or other is innate in fallen human nature. We see it in Samson's wager with the lords of the Philistines, when thirty shirts and thirty tunics were staked on either side on the solving of a somewhat poor riddle.

The Prophet Isaiah clearly refers to games of chance in the remarkable passage (lxv, 11) which is thus rendered in the Revised Version: "Ye that forsake the Lord, . . . that prepare a table for fortune, and fill up mingled wine unto destiny." The Hebrew words are Gad and Meni, the names of two heathen deities, who were supposed to preside over all matters in which chance was concerned, and were worshipped with games of hazard, in which this deep-rooted propensity for gambling would find scope. * * *

Games of this kind were practiced by the ancient Romans, both under the Republic and the Empire; and Cicero tells us that laws were enacted against them, because they tended to render the citizens effeminate and unmanly. According to Tacitus, they were not unknown amongst the early Britons. Amid the ruins of the disentombed city of Pompeii were found sets of dice, and on examination several were found to be loaded, thus showing the early association of gambling with dishonesty.

The truth is, that the practice has always been linked with the darkest side of humanity; and at its advance, honor and truth and benevolence have vanished! * * * * * *

The habit prevails in the highest and lowest ranks of society. It appears to lose none of its extraordinary fascinations amid the refinements of noble and aristocratic circles. From the courts of royalty to the slums of Whitechapel you find it the same. The land is filled with the blight from the one end of it to the other. All society is inoculated with the poison, from the wealthy to the unwashed urchins who toss coppers on the street. It prevails in many political and friendly clubs, turning them into nurseries of dishonesty. Such manly games as cricket and football are turned into occasions for staking money; public houses are made common centres for so-called pools and sweepstakes; whilst coursing and pigeon-flying are simply opportunities for the indulgence of the passion. But, indeed, there is hardly a thing into which the element of uncertainty enters that is not made the occasion of a betting transaction. In the mining districts, on a holiday, grimy colliers may be seen standing on the brink of a stream, intently watching several floating straws. * * * * *

Against the hideous vice I bring the sevenfold indictment: it engenders idleness; it encourages dishonesty; it is prejudicial to commerce; it is demoralizing to society; it emmaddens the brain; it indisposes a man for religious duty, and it effectually cuts at the root of happiness.

Millsaps College Notes.

The college endowment fund was increased by a collection at Bolton recently, amounting to $158; and on last Sunday the "Clara Chrisman scholarship" was presented to the good people of Hazlehurst, and a subscription of $52.40 was made. When we remember that within the last two years fully $1,200 have been given by this liberal people to Millsaps College, this additional contribution will be seen to be very creditable.

The following letter, from a noble Christian woman of this State, will be an inspiration to many of your readers. My friend will pardon its unauthorized publication, and will forgive me for saying that this is not the first time she has shown her interest in "our noble enterprise."

Dear Bro. Watkins: I have fully intended all the while sending a contribution to the "Clara Chrisman scholarship." I am now giving $5 per annum, for five years, in her precious memory, to the "Bible Training-school," to be located in Kansas City.

We did not have preaching on the day appointed for collections for that purpose, and yet I must render my mite, and enclose my note for $10—as an Easter offering—hoping that our risen Lord will accept it, and bless it in the preparation of those who feel it incumbent on them to obey his last loving injunction to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

The books that I promised you are ready, and at your command. I have many other volumes which will never be of any use to me, and may be useful in the college library. If I knew how to select, I would cheerfully send them. I might send you a list with authors, and allow you to select.

Permit me to extend congratulations upon your judicious selection of a location for Millsaps College. It is the very place for many reasons already given in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I earnestly hoped all the time that it would be at our capital. Accept many kind wishes for the speedy establishment of our noble enterprise.

Sincerely, your friend, ——— ———.

Bro. Wyatt suggests a "Robert Payne Mitchell" scholarship. Good! Start the fund with a collection at Como, Bro. Wyatt, and the agent will gladly present this claim to our people.

A. F. WATKINS.

To Namesakes of Bishop Marvin.

During the past few weeks the trustees of Marvin Chapel have sent out about 1,500 letters to the namesakes of Bishop Marvin, asking for a contribution of $5—either given by themselves or collected from others—to assist in the building of a Marvin Memorial Church, in place of present dilapidated and unsightly frame building. In return, each of these, or any other person contributing $5, will receive a handsome memorial chart, containing the names of all the namesakes engraved on parchment, and surrounding a large picture of Bishop Marvin, the whole elegantly gotten up. Some of these charts will be framed and placed in appropriate and conspicuous places in the new church.

We take this means of notifying other namesakes whose addresses we have not received, and soliciting from them a contribution for this worthy enterprise. In order to publish a full list of namesakes with the proposed chart we would be thankful for any names and addresses which have not already been sent us. Address the pastor,

JOSEPHUS STEPHAN.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Winona district, North Mississippi Conference—

Please write me the names of the local preachers and the names of the delegates-elect to the District Conference. I desire also that those who are coming by private conveyance notify me of this fact. If the Woman's District Missionary Society is to meet here the day before the Conference, as it did at Vaiden last year, I desire and request immediate notice, and the names of those who are coming. J. C. LOWE.

P. S.—If any of the preachers or delegates find that they can not come, they will please notify me. It would give us pleasure to have the editor with us. J. C. L.

"How Shall They Go?"

Two men in the Meridian district are not only under conviction that it is their duty to go to the foreign mission fields, but they are in every way qualified to do the work. They are well educated, wise, prudent, religious; not too old nor too young. But how shall they go? Where is the money to send them and to support them while in Japan? Two brethren—and only two—are committed and pledge to pay $100 annually to send out a missionary and support him while in the field; but others delay making the covenant, and so "the King's business" is delayed. Oh! that hearts might soften and purse-strings loosen! T. L. MELLEN.

Notice.

To the Members of the Ministers' Relief Association of the North Mississippi Conference—

Rev. Geo. W. Brown, a member of our association, died at Rosser, Ala., on March 16. Your mortuary fee of $5 each is now due, and must be paid within sixty days from this date—March 31, 1891.

THE STARS.

What are their years? The night's unfathomed sleep
Rings back no answer gives no glimmering key
And still unknown and beautiful, they keep
The silent courses of eternity.

What are their memories of creation's days,
When startled Chaos, from its kingdom hurled,
First knew its Master, and with glad amaze
They sang the birth-song of our trembling world?

What have they looked on since, with patient eyes,
While million years uncounted rolled away?
Who claims antiquity for man that dies,
Before such records of the past as they?

Can they to man his mystery explain,
The why, the whence, of his uncertain state?
Unlock the riddle that he seeks in vain,
And clear the tangled problem of his fate?

Can they a fashion to the future give,
And tell the whither of man's anxious quest?
Make life a less than weariness to live,
Or stay the hazard of his wild unrest?

O stars! what midnight message do ye bear
To minds grown weary with the year's increase?
The wistful eyes that watch you shining there,
Look out of troubled hearts that know not peace.

Woman's Work.

These two words open up a broad field of thought. This has been called the "Woman's Century," and it would seem justly so called, since woman is coming to the front, or striving to do so, in nearly all the issues of the day. In Church and State she would claim equal rights with her co-laborer, man. Not content with Joan's "woman's work," which is "never done," she would broaden her field of action; would add to her already unceasing toil by taking upon her weak shoulders the heavy burdens of State-craft; would claim a right to a station at the helm of the "old ship of Zion," which is to anchor her into a haven of rest. O woman! great is thy ambition!

The subject has many phases, and by no means least important of these is woman's work and place in the church. Indeed, this question is creating quite a stir among some of the D. D.'s of the sterner sex. Perhaps they do not like the idea of sharing their dignity and honors with D. D.'s "in petticoats and bangs." Samantha Allen's pictures of the "wimmin workin' for the Methodist meetin' house" are not altogether overdrawn. The point to be made in this sketch, however, is not the advocacy of "equal suffrage" in Church or State. The writer holds that woman may find sufficient scope for the improvement of her talents—be they one, five or ten—without seeking to enter the pulpit or the forum; but we believe while the brethren preach Saint Paul's injunction, "Let the women keep silence," they ought also to practice his injunction, "Help those women who labor with us in the gospel." All we ask is a helping hand and a cheering word by the way.

The women of the church are awaking to a realization of the fact that Christian duty implies something more than a name upon the church register. There are many duties both in the home and foreign field adapted to their delicate natures and gentle hands which none others can fulfil. Organized and systematic work among the women of our church is becoming universal. Not such organized effort as is limited to fancy fairs, bazaars, suppers, etc., but dignified organizations whose women meet and take sweet counsel together after the fashion of men; and many are the grand enterprises schemed and engineered by these noble women; many are the nickels, dimes and dollars, even into the thousands, which find their way into the Lord's treasury by the way of these gentle hands. If these gifts could be made to tell their story, in many cases it would be an almost heart-rending one of self-denial, the gift prompted by overflowing gratitude from a heart knowing little of the joys of earth, but rich in the assurance of "an inheritance incorruptible and that fadeth not away." Sometimes it would be a story of devoted love for the Master from a heart filled with thankfulness for the many blessings bestowed upon the giver.

We do not claim that all the women of the church do everything they can for the advancement of the cause they profess to love. Alas! how far we fall short of our duty! If each and everyone measured up to the full limit of her responsibility and her privileges in this matter, what a gathering in there would be of lost ones into the fold! What a glorious birth of nations into the "household of faith" in the "only wise and true God!"

Let us now consider some of the efforts being made by the women of the church, and some of the enterprises in operation under their management. In the Sunday-schools, as a rule, most of the teachers are women, and in some cases, when a man can not be found to fill the place, the superintendent is a woman; the pupils, for the most part, are girls from among whom are to come the future teachers of the Sunday-school; then woman stands head in this branch of work, allowing that she does her work in this line even as well as the male teacher.

In the foreign missionary field it is woman's work that must sap the very foundation of heathen idolatry. In the home and in the school her influence is felt. As the mother in the home, in our Christian land, is shaping the character of the future men and women committed to her care, so the Christian missionary is shaping the character of the future men and women of heathen lands in the homes to which she may have access and in the school in which she labors. Twelve years ago the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, was inaugurated with one missionary in the field. To-day forty-six names stand upon the roll of that noble band. Some have answered to the roll-call on high and are basking in the light of his presence who died to redeem the world. Those who remain are "toiling on" in the realization of the promise, "Lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," rejoicing in the hope of the "crown of life," which is offered to those who are "faithful unto the end."

Now, we of the M. E. Church, South, have within the past few years engaged in another branch of work in which the women are active agents—parsonage and home mission—considered by many the most important work of the church. This branch of work is yet in its incipiency among us; has recently changed its name, being formerly called the "Woman's Department of Church Extension." Whether this name was too broad or too narrow is difficult to decide. Perhaps it was too narrow for those who believe in home missions and too broad for those who do not believe in missions at all. At any rate, it did not move on very extensively. The new name embraces so much that is dear to the heart of the many parsonages, around which cluster the interests of pastor and people; home mission, which opens up an opportunity for so many church members who have hitherto had no church work to do, to put their hands to the plow and put into practice their pet theories on this subject. But, alas! alas! the progress of this work in our own Mississippi Conference since its inauguration, three or four years ago, indicates that it is the many who believe it to be the most important work of the church and the few who carry out that belief.

Too often—we pen it with exceeding hesitancy and in no spirit of fault-finding—the lack of zeal and interest in church work lies at the door of the pastor. No matter how it may be said that too much ought not to be exacted of the pastor, people are going to continue to exact, at least, that he shall take the lead in all matters pertaining to church work; and it is a hard people indeed who are not moved to some degree of activity by the example of an earnest, zealous, active and aggressive pastor. We believe that whenever every pastor, no matter whether he be domiciled in a well-carpeted, handsomely-furnished, finely-appointed parsonage or in the kind of which we most frequently hear—those which let in the rain from above and the chill air from around and beneath—we say, whenever every pastor shall arouse to an active, earnest interest in the parsonage and every other church enterprise, then the wheels of the enginery will be so lubricated that the whole machinery will move on at much greater speed than at present. We would not, however, lay all the blame on the pastor. Not by any means is he responsible for all, and, in many cases, for any of the clogging of the wheels of church machinery. Yet it is to him chiefly that the few workers in the church look for aid and encouragement, and if the fountain be dry, the machinery must cease to move.

When the scheme of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was first proposed, it was deemed inadvisable, lest it might be "robbing Peter to pay Paul." The result shows that Paul is paid, and Peter is as well, if not better off, than before. This same organization began its operations in the Mississippi Conference one year after the Woman's Board was organized amid difficulties and discouragements, with a little handful of women who did not see how they were going to do anything. Yet the thing has been done, and the Minutes of the annual meeting held at Meridian, last June, reports over one thousand members and over $2,000 gathered into the missionary treasury in one year by their efforts.

In the Sunday-school woman receives more encouragement than in any other branch of church work. This is probably owing to the reason that there she is more needed than elsewhere. There, too, she finds the greatest scope for the exercise of her influence; the young mind and heart being "like clay in the hands of the potter," there she may mold "vessels fit for the Master's use at his coming."

When we consider the magnitude of God's blessings upon our feeble efforts for the advancement of his cause and kingdom, not to speak of his infinite love and mercy toward us, our indifference and slothfulness in regard to church work is amazing beyond conception. May the Lord continue to bless our efforts, and arouse us to greater zeal and earnestness!

PARTICEPS.

"God Giveth the Increase."

Pursuant to call, a meeting was held at Winona, Thursday, March 19, to organize the North Mississippi Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society. At eleven o'clock the meeting was called to order by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, who led the devotional exercises. Temporary organization was effected by the election of Mrs. Robert Somerville as president; Mrs. S. M. Thames, secretary. By invitation of the president, Rev. J. D. Cameron addressed the meeting. Members present were enrolled, and reports called for. Corresponding Secretary Mrs. Hargrove reported twelve auxiliaries, eleven of which were organized since last December. (Here I will add that two others, Aberdeen and Coffeeville, reported organizations the day after our meeting.) Conference Treasurer Mrs. J. R. Bingham reported $180 receipts during her term of office; $62.90 now in treasury subject to appropriations. District secretaries and delegates reported in order. Four district secretaries were present, and a good representation from auxiliaries. The president declared the election of officers in order. The election by acclamation resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Robert Somerville; first vice-president, Mrs. H. W. Foote; second vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Finlay; recording secretary, Mrs. S. M. Thames. The meeting adjourned with benediction by Rev. J. D. Cameron.

At two o'clock the meeting was called to order; opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. J. F. Evans. The first item of business was the disposition of our funds. After discussion, it was resolved to dispose of money on hand as soon as practicable, and hereafter to make appropriations quarterly. The president was instructed to publish request for applications, and was authorized to call meetings of Executive Committee to make appropriations and transact any necessary business. Inquiry and discussion followed in regard to the following points: Plan of work, spiritual interests, attention to the sick and to prisoners. After prayer, hymn, and words of farewell, the meeting adjourned with doxology.

A number of the ladies of Winona and several visitors from a distance were in attendance upon this meeting, and added greatly to its interests. The occasion was enjoyed by all, and, no doubt, will result in great good, as each one seemed profoundly impressed with the importance of this department of our church work. We now feel a healthy glow of life in the whole body, and the spirit is ready for a greater effort. May God speed the day when the whole church, working together in love and harmony, shall take the world for Christ!

Opelousas District Conference.

The Opelousas District Conference was in session at Lake Charles, La., March 19-21. The attendance of lay delegates was unusually good, and the intelligent interest in the concerns of the church manifested by this class of the members was an encouraging indication of strength. The Conference was disappointed at the absence of Bishop Haygood, who had been expected, but was detained by illness in his family. Under the genial presidency of Rev. John A. Miller, presiding elder, however, the business of the Conference was satisfactorily and pleasantly accomplished.

Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College, was present, representing educational interests. The endowments of Centenary was increased by $750 in notes. Dr. Potter, missionary secretary, was also in attendance, and greatly edified the church by his preaching.

The religious features of the session were strongly marked. Crowded houses manifested the public interest in the services. Dr. Potter remained after the session to assist the pastor, Rev. T. J. Upton, in a meeting already promising a revival. A committee was appointed to buy or build a district parsonage; and an assessment was made upon the several charges to raise money for this purpose.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. J. L. Gibson, W. T. Blackshear, H. Huffpauir, O. M. Marsh; A. M. Mayo and A. H. Trotter, alternates.

The place for the next session was fixed for Franklin. Special honrs were devoted to the discussion of the Sunday-school interests and the Epworth League. Important and interesting facts in both these departments of the work were brought out. The pastor of Abbeville said that at one service over forty children of the Sunday-school had united with the church; and that almost all the children in the Sunday-schools on that work were members of the church. Except at Abbeville and New Iberia, young people's societies have not been organized. It is hoped that the good results reported from these two works will induce pastors throughout the district to organize their young people into Epworth Leagues.

The reports of pastors were interesting, and, with few exceptions, showed advance. Some collections were reported, although it was early in the year. Several charges showed very marked progress, notably Franklin, which seems to be on a boom. The most interesting feature under this head was the missionary work. There are several missionary appointments within the district that have been barely maintained by the Conference Board for some years seeming not to move at all towards becoming self-supporting works. The presiding elder spoke most hopefully of these. Sabine Mission, Sulphur Mine, Grand Chenier and Indian Bayou were showing healthy growth, and, the presiding elder thought, with a little further assistance, would cease to be missionary works, and would become radiating centres of gospel light. Churches were being built, Sunday-schools organized, and new appointments being taken in.

The work of Dr. J. L. Gibson, a local preacher of rare gifts, who has recently come to Louisiana, would read like romance: it has the savor of the pioneer work of the early days. At Lake Arthur, out of nothing, he has gathered congregations, built a church and brought Protestantism before a people, many of whom hardly knew before his coming the meaning of the word. He and a few immigrants from Kansas are in the midst of a French Romish population, and their work has been, contrary to all predictions, and in the face of discouraging advice, successful.

The extent of the mission fields within the Opelousas district was never appreciated by the writer until he heard the reports of these consecrated men, who, in number altogether inadequate, and under the disadvantage of ignorance of the French language, are striving to bring these priest-ridden, ignorant people into the liberty and light of the gospel. Everywhere a spirit of inquiry into the Protestant religion is awakened by the Methodist preacher. Bro. Blocker has preached with success through an interpreter. Bro. Hocutt, Dr. Gibson and Bro. Pilley are anxious for the coming of more laborers into these whitening harvest fields. They believe that the grip of Rome upon the people may be shaken if we have means and workers.

This work must be largely educative. Here is an open door for the Woman's Board. A French missionary is needed. The readers of the ADVOCATE will remember an effort of this sort made under Mr. Picot, several years ago, which seemed to end disastrously. The work was not in vain. The writer knows French families who can not speak a word of English who, without any pastoral attention, have remained true to Methodism during the years that have elapsed since they were converted under Mr. Picot's ministrations. They call on the pastors of our church at New Iberia for the baptism of their children, the burial of their dead and the marriage of their young men and women.

Secretary.

In Memoriam.

Rev. Franklin Wilson Sharbrough was the son of Malachi and Martha Sharbrough. He was born in Alabama, April 24, 1827, and died in Orland, Cal., Feb. 24, 1891, aged nearly sixty-four years.

While Frank was yet a boy, the family moved to East Mississippi, and settled on a farm in Smith county. Here he grew to the estate of manhood. When about grown, becoming deeply conscious of his sinfulness, he went to a camp meeting to seek religion, and there found "the pearl of great price," with which he never parted. He joined the Methodist Church, of which his parents were life-long members. He felt called to preach, but felt ill prepared, and the means of a thorough preparation were not at command. He did the best that he could. He entered the home of Rev. Mr. Wiggins, presiding elder of the district, superintended his farm, and gave all his spare time to reading under his direction. After two years spent thus, he joined the Mississippi Conference in the year 1849 or 1850.

He was married on Nov. 3, 1852, to Mrs. Amanda Neil (nee Bridges). Two years after his marriage he settled on a farm in Jasper county, where he lived for several years, traveling neighboring circuits, as he was appointed by the Bishop. He then moved to Brookhaven, where he lived four years, still traveling as appointed by the constituted authorities. While living in this place his wife died, leaving ten children, the oldest scarcely grown, while the youngest was a babe.

Having been appointed to the Cayuga circuit, in Hinds county, he left Brookhaven, and located within the bounds of his charge. Finding it impracticable to move from place to place, or to be long absent from his family—consisting, besides his children, of an aged and infirm mother—in December, 1874, he located. One year from this time the name of his eldest son, Malachi B., first appeared upon the Conference roll as a "preacher on trial."

Bro. Sharbrough had once before located, but only for one year. After his final location he engaged in secular pursuits until his family grew up, so that only his youngest daughter was dependent upon him. With this daughter, May, he went on a visit to his son, then a pastor in the Pacific Conference, California. He fell in love with the country, and, instead of returning to Mississippi, made California his home. From the time of his coming to California he was almost constantly employed as a supply on some of the charges of the Pacific Conference, and was in charge of the Orland circuit, Colusa (now Glenn) county, at the time of his death, where he was greatly beloved and honored.

He felt called of God to preach the gospel, and was never contented unless engaged in this work. He was a good preacher, and well posted on the doctrines and polity of the church, and was familiar with God's Word. Had he devoted himself wholly to the ministry, he would, no doubt, have been a stronger preacher, and the fruits of his ministry would have been more abundant. As it was, he was a useful man, and many will call him blessed. He was a man of convictions, and had the courage to maintain them, while respecting the convictions of others. Genial and warm-hearted, he made friends wherever he went. Those who knew him best bear witness that he was a kind master, a devoted husband, and one of the best of fathers. He lived for his children best as was to have been expected; was particularly devoted to his baby.

He leaves ten children, all grown, all members of the church, and respected citizens. Seven are in Mississippi, one in Texas, and two in California. His eldest son, Malachi B., is a prominent member of the Pacific Conference, and is now serving his fourth year as presiding elder of the Colusa district. No matter upon what charge he (the father) was employed, nor how far away, this son's house was his home. All that a devoted son could do to add to the comfort and happiness of his father in his declining years, was done. The son believed in the father, and the father in the son.

He was not at the home of his son, but on his charge at Orland, when he was stricken by the disease that resulted in his death. Malachi was called to him six days before the end, and tenderly watched by his bedside for four days and nights, taking almost no rest, when he himself was taken sick, and compelled to leave his dying father in the hands of others, and was not able to attend the funeral.

Bro. Sharbrough's end was peace. His was the true Christian resignation. He said to Bro. Cooper, one of our pastors: "I may die; but have not given it any thought, or can. I am trusting in the Savior, and would not give my trust in him for all the world." He talked much of his work, even in his delirium, and seemed to think of nothing else. He was called from labor to reward, from earth to heaven. Blessed thought!

His body lies in the cemetery at Orland, Cal., to await the resurrection. Appropriate funeral services were conducted by the pastor of an adjacent charge, assisted by two others; also memorial services were held on the following Sunday at Chico, the home of his son.

Rev. G. W. Brown.

On yesterday, at Reid's Chapel, in Sumter county, we buried the remains of Rev. Georgo W. Brown, who was at the time of his death a supernumerary member of the North Mississippi Conference. For eighteen years he was a member of the Alabama Conference. When the Alabama and North Alabama Conferences were formed, he was laboring in the part of Mississippi which was included in the bounds of the Mobile Conference, and from that time held membership in the North Mississippi Conference.

Last year his health and that of his wife declined, and he came back to Alabama to rest and recuperate, making his home with his brother-in-law, in the bounds of the Cuba circuit. When well enough and opportunity offered, he preached with acceptability and profit to the congregations of the circuit within his reach. Rendered very efficient service at a protracted meeting held at Reid's Chapel in the fall of the year. He attended the session of his Conference very much inclined to take work, but, through the advice of the Bishop and his presiding elder, took a supernumerary relation. After his return he took something like the grippe, then prevailing considerably in the community, complicated with bowel trouble, and continued to decline until on the morning of the sixteenth, he quietly fell asleep, surrounded by his wife and a circle of sorrowing friends and relatives.

The friends of this faithful man of God at Durant, Miss., where he had labored for some years, were erecting and furnishing a home, at which, without expense to himself, he might spend the evening of his life. The house was well under way when he was taken down, and, in place of occupying a home furnished by earthly friends, he has gone to the mansion prepared by the Savior he had so long loved and served. He was licensed to preach in 1851, and was in the traveling connection thirty-six years, and died in his sixty-first year. We met him on only two occasions after he took his bed. In conversation, after having prayed with him, he said: "The Savior is with me all the time. Preparation for this hour does not have to be made; that has been done a long, long while ago." He gave his wife explicit direction in regard to the place of burial and the burial ceremonies. He will be remembered by the older members of the Mobile and Alabama Conferences as a true laborer and yoke-fellow in the gospel. "Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his."

BOOKS.

THE MEMOIR OF JEFFERSON DAVIS. The Life of the President of the Confederate States as Told by His Wife.

Belford Company, of New York, have just issued "Jefferson Davis, Ex-President of the Confederate States, A Memoir, by His Wife," in two large octavo volumes of more than 1,000 pages, liberally illustrated. For a considerable time Mr. Davis had meditated an autobiographical work which should not only give to the world the salient facts of his personal history, but should also include his public acts both under the Federal Government and under the Confederacy, as well as his correspondence, documents, relations with the celebrated personages of the country, and the beliefs and principles which guided him as the President of the seceding States during the four years' struggle. After he had collected a vast quantity of memoranda and had written many important sections, but before he had arranged a portion of his work as he intended, he was suddenly cut off by death. His wife, however, had, during her many years of close union with him, become so thoroughly acquainted with his whole history, his ideas and aims, as had aided him so far in the project work, that she was enabled to take up the pen where her husband had dropped it, and continue the work to completion.

The book is written with candor, earnestness, and force; with a desire to avoid offense, and yet with a rigid insistance upon fact; unsparing, and yet without bias. It is, in reality, the first authentic voice with which the South has yet spoken—the voice of a leader, claiming to be heard and judged as he was, and for what he did to receive the verdict of to-day and posterity. Whatever opinion may be held upon the principles involved there can be no question of the perfect fairness, earnestness, and scrupulous justice of these remarkable volumes.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE CONGRESS, 1890. 12mo. 425 pp. cloth, $1.50. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

At this great Congress, held in New York City, at the Broadway Tabernacle, June 11 and 12, 1890, representatives of every shade of anti-liquor views discussed the different phases of the temperance question. This volume furnishes 425 pages of highly interesting matter, and supplies "food for thought" from cover to cover. It is a thoroughly faithful and uncolored report. Nothing will do so much to show prohibitionists why good men oppose prohibition, what points need to be explained, and what most needs defended as to read the far-reaching discussions of this volume. It should find a place with all temperance workers and should be found in every public library in the country.

THE SHADY SIDE; OR, LIFE IN A COUNTRY PARSONAGE. By a Pastor's Wife. D. F. Randolph and Company, New York. G. F. Wharton & Bro., New Orleans. Price, $1.

This book was first published about twenty years ago and found favor and a wide circulation. It was reissued then, and this new edition will be read now with unflagging interest. It is a picture of rural society and parsonage life drawn with a graphic pen.

PAMPHLETS.

The "Early Conversion of Children," by L. Rosser, D. D. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, 25 cents. Dr. Rosser treats this subject under several aspects. Justification, regeneration, and the relation of children to the church, and the obligation of the church to the children are considered.

—The Primacy of Faith. By A. Gordon, D. D. The Message of Jesus to Men of Wealth. By Rev. Geo. D. Herron. These estimable tracts are published by Fleming H. Revell Company, New York and Chicago. Price twenty cents each. They are worth ten times as much.

—Childhood and Conversion. By G. Smith, D. D. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. It has an introduction by Bishop Haygood, and is an interesting little volume.

TIME.—841 B. C.

PLACE.—Samaria, the capital city of Israel.

INTRODUCTORY.

The lives of such men as the subject of our present study are fraught with interest and instruction, as well as suggestive of warning. Jehu represents a class of biblical characters that has a peculiar claim upon our sympathies. In a word, he is a pronounced type of those that have fulfilled God's purposes, and yet have failed to effect them in accordance with his own plans. True, they have performed the Lord's work; but they have done it in their way, thus robbing themselves of all that would otherwise have characterized them as his true servants. Our first acquaintance with Jehu is the command given to Elijah in Horeb to anoint him king instead of Ahab. He was then a young man of some twenty-odd years. Ahab's temporary repentance delayed this event for another score of years. At last, when Israel's sin could no longer find forbearance, Elisha delegated an attendant to repair to Ramoth-Gilead, and there anoint Jehu king in Joram's stead. The injunction was that the utmost secrecy was to obtain throughout the transaction. This the young prophet carried out fully. His sudden appearance, his secret interview with Jehu, and hasty departure from the camp naturally excited the curiosity of the other captains. They demanded of their chief an explanation. Finding concealment impossible, he told them the object of the prophet's coming, and that he was their king. They received the news with joy; with their garments improvised a throne and blew their trumpets, saying, 'Jehu is king.'" The newly made king was a man equal to emergencies. He was quick to take in a situation and quick to act on the strength of his observations. His master, Joram, was down at Jezreel. No intimation of the revolution must reach his ears prematurely. So Jehu commanded all the gates of the encampment to be closed and none allowed to pass out. Taking with him his former chariot companion, Bidkar, he rode with furious haste to Jezreel, some fifty miles distant. Long before he reached his destination, sentinels from the heights perceived his coming and made known to Joram that some one was approaching. Two messengers were dispatched to seek his object; but they only received the command to follow as prisoners. Then the king himself assayed to go, having previously learned that it was Jehu, the captain of his army, that was coming. He naturally thought that he was bearing some important news from the seat of war; perhaps Hazael's army had been defeated; or, better still, maybe the Syrians were suing for peace. Some such hope, no doubt, prompted the question, "Is it peace, Jehu?"

I.—WHAT JEHU DID.

The quick response that Joram received to his anxious question dispelled all his hopes and sent a thrill of terror through his soul. "How can there be peace, when the wickedness of thy mother is so great?" Israel's king saw then that the long pent-up wrath of an injured nation had burst forth in all its relentless fury, and it would be the height of folly to seek to stem the raging tide. With the despairing cry of "Treachery," he turned to flee; but Jehu's steady aim and strong arm were quicker than his chariot, and he fell pierced through the heart. Over twenty years before Jehu had heard a prophecy on the very plat where Joram's body lay; now he saw it fulfilled to the letter. Naboth had been nobly avenged.

Ahaziah, Judah's king, the cousin of Joram, was the next victim. He had accompanied Joram, and fled at his death; but Jehu overtook him and inflicted a wound which caused his death at Megiddo. Though two kings had been slain, the work of destruction had hardly begun. Jezebel's horrible end; the slaughter of Ahab's seventy sons; the butchery of all his kinsfolk and great men; the killing of forty-two of the relations of Ahaziah, followed in quick succession and serve to stamp Jehu as a human monster. These all were political measures. He had waded through blood to the throne and had slain all that might set up an opposing claim.

He now turned his attention to the extirpation of Baal worship. He makes bold to proclaim, "Come see my zeal for the Lord." At Samaria the same carnal scenes of bloodshed were enacted in regard to Ahab's seed, and then followed that great sacrifice to Baal—a sacrifice that only a Jehu could have performed. See the deceitfulness of the man! Under guise of a worshipper, he called together all the priests in one place, and at a given signal they are cut down to a man. Baal's statue was torn down, his altars destroyed, and his temple made a receptacle for refuse. Baalism was never rooted out from Israel. The treatment was fearfully drastic; but, it must be remembered, that the disease had well nigh proven fatal to the civil and religious life of God's people. That it was necessary to eradicate this monster is readily admitted; but that the means employed were perfect we have a right to deny. The comment of Scripture on the whole transaction is: "Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel." God's method, we believe, would have been different. What that method was we know not; but had Jehu's zeal for the Lord been as great and sincere as his boast to Jehonadab would lead us to infer, we should not have been kept in ignorance of God's way of conquering evil.

II.—WHAT JEHU FAILED TO DO.

The ability and willingness to fight well does not necessarily constitute moral worth. We need not only to abhor that which is evil, but also to cleave to that which is good. It is more essential that we should love God than that we should hate Satan. The former includes both, while the latter may not be so comprehensive. Jehu failed to depart from the one particular sin for which he had so violently persecuted others. Though, perhaps, the most ardent destroyer of idolatry the world has yet seen, he remained an idolater to the end. Here recurs that saddest of all Scripture biographies—that mournful refrain of the dirge chanted over the lost opportunities, misused advantages and finally blighted life of Jeroboam. The Scripture never notices him without giving the epitome of his life-work in the few, but awful, words: "He that made Israel to sin." Fearful is the position of the individual sinner! Who is he that shall bear the responsibility of a nation's iniquity? Into this "way" Jehu fell. "He took no heed to walk in the way of the Lord"; and how could he?—"for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam." He would not repent; consequently he could not serve God with all his heart. This is the last statement of the record in his case. "The good and the evil in Jehu." Which was predominant?

Louisiana Notes.

Commissioner Adams reports the crops three weeks later than last year, and believes the acreage in cotton will be much less.

The police jury of Red River parish appropriated $150 to defray the expenses of a beneficiary cadet of the State University.

The People's National Bank, of New Iberia, opened for business last week, and its work up to the present indicates a successful venture.

Lake Charles will soon commence the erection of a large central sugar factory. It is to have a capacity of 500 tons, but so built as to admit of increase.

The citizens of the town of Plaquemine have subscribed a sufficient sum to insure the establishment of a bank at that point, with a capital of $50,000. She also has an ice factory, two brick factories and about the best shingle mills in the State.

And now the people of the city of Monroe are talking hopefully of a railroad from that city to Ouachita City. The enterprise is being furthered by our friend, O. B. Steele, State auditor, who thinks the project can be carried through this summer.

Dispatches from Baton Rouge say that Northern land speculators continue to purchase large tracts northeast of this point, thus strengthening the hopes our people have that a railroad will soon be in course of construction between this place and Meridian, Miss.

An epidemic of glanders on Mr. C. W. Caruth's plantation in Rapides parish necessitated the killing of twenty-one mules, valued at $1,200, to prevent the spread of the disease. Glanders also appeared in Madison parish, but the police jury adopted measures to check its progress.

The Secretary of War has approved the Mississippi River Commission's allotment of the $1,000,000 appropriated by Congress in its closing days for improvement of the Mississippi river, as follows: First district, Plum Point reach, $450,000; third district, Lake Providence reach, $330,000; third district, Greenville, $100,000; general, $70,000; plant, $30,000; dry dock, $20,000.

We are glad to note in the Shreveport Times that a Methodist Mission Church will soon be erected on Jordan street, near the Fair Grounds. "The management," says the Times, "is in the hands of the First Methodist Church, and it is the aim to erect a building which will be a credit to the community and an honor to God." We like the way that "First Church" is acting towards this new enterprise. It is what all our large churches should do.

There is no doubt now that we will have a large barrel factory located here (Franklin), with a capital stock of $75,000 or $100,000. This is an enterprise that is bound to pay, for the simple reason that St. Mary parish alone will use most of the output. We use a great quantity of barrels; why not manufacture them at home? —Banner.

The Lake Charles American gives the following:

Last Sunday was a great day at the M. E. Church, South. In the morning, Rev. W. H. Potter, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., one of the missionary secretaries of the church, preached a very able sermon, to a crowded house, from the text, "For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost." The sermon was clear, deep and convincing, and was delivered in the best style of pulpit oratory. At the close of the sermon a collection for missions was taken, amounting to $150.

The following from the Crowley Signal is commended to the consideration of those who regard Southwest Louisiana as a hog-hole for the breeding of disease and death:

Mrs. Briscoe, who lives near Church Point, in this parish, will be ninety-seven years old next October. She walks about her house without any support and has never used spectacles. She raised twelve children; the older is 77 and the younger is 46 years of age. Mrs. Briscoe has 49 living grandchildren, 40 living great-grandchildren and 49 living great-great-grandchildren. How does this speak for the health and longevity of life in "fair Acadia?"

Mississippi Items.

The City Council of Greenwood has appropriated funds to build a fine school-house.

Dr. E. A. Guilbert, of Jackson, has been commissioned by the governor, assistant adjutant general, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

It is said that in Jackson real estate transfers are very active, and many buildings are expected to be erected during the Spring and Summer.

The Southern Building and Loan Association, of Huntsville, Ala., has organized a Mississippi department with an office in Jackson, where it will remain permanently.

The State Medical Association will convene in Meridian, April 15. Col. J. R. McIntosh will deliver the address of welcome, which will be responded to by Dr. Luther Sexton, of Wesson.

The Democrat-Star, of the last date, call the attention of the merchants of Scranton and Moss Point to the fact that it is high time they were planting their spring advertisements in its columns.

The famous pine forest southeast of Hazlehurst is falling before the woodman's ax. An Iowa syndicate, having bought thousands of acres of this pine timber, will run a railroad and thus bring it to market.

Mississippi's State treasury is in splendid condition. The legitimate receipts for 1890—that is, the receipts from ordinary sources, as no bonds were sold during the year—exceeded the disbursement by $177,922.28.

A commercial company comprised of business men of Greenwood and planters of the Yazoo and Tallahatchie country has been organized as the "Yazoo and Tallahatchie Commercial Company." The capital stock is $100,000.

The people of West Point are moving in the matter of manufacturing and other enterprises. Subscriptions amounting to $10,000, looking to the establishment of a foundry and machine shops, have been made, and in the course of three months a plant will be in operation.

The Lincoln County Sunday-school Association will hold a two-days' convention in Brookhaven, April 15 and 16. The object of the convention is to awaken interest in Sunday-school work throughout the county and appoint delegates to the State convention at Greenville, April 28-30.

Of the location of Millsaps College the Mississippian says:

The people of Jackson are under lasting obligations to the trustees, and will take an especial pride in contributing to the welfare of this college. They will not rest until the obligations are in the other side of the balance.

The crop-bulletin of the Mississippi weather service says the past week has been favorable to farming operations, the temperature, sunshine and rainfall having been about normal, except in the southwestern part of the State, where rain has been needed. In the southern and central portions of the State corn-planting is progressing well.—Clarion-Ledger.

A new enterprise for Jackson is the "Capital Cooperage Stock Manufacturing Company," with George Van Swearinger, Wm. Henry, A. Virden, Jr., and John Hart as incorporators. The purpose of the incorporation is to manufacture all kinds of cooperage stock. The capital stock is twenty thousand dollars, divided into shares of $100 each. The near proximity and accessibility of timber makes Jackson a very desirable point to carry on such an enterprise.—Clarion-Ledger.

Racing with Wolves.

Many a thrilling tale has been told by travelers of a race with wolves across the frozen steppes of Russia. Sometimes only the picked bones of the hapless traveler are found to tell the tale. In our own country thousands are engaged in a life-and-death race against the wolf Consumption. The best weapons with which to fight the foe, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This renowned remedy has cured myriads of cases when all other medicines and doctors had failed. It is the greatest blood-purifier and restorer of strength known to the world. For all forms of scrofulous affections (and consumption is one of them), it is unequaled as a remedy.

Hon. Polk Talbert has withdrawn from the editorial management of the Gloster Record, and is succeeded by Mr. Caulfield, who is also proprietor of the paper.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, April 9, 1891.

Briefs.

Our editorial on Millsaps College, last week, meets with the hearty approval of Bishop Galloway. He says in a private note: "Many thanks for your editorial on Millsaps College. It was just the thing; well and strongly put." We trust that our suggestions to the unsuccessful places bidding for the college will be earnestly thought over. We are sure great good will come if they are acted upon.

The Atlanta preachers' meeting has by resolution designated the second Sunday in May as Wesleyan Christian Advocate Day, and invited the preachers of the North and South Georgia Conferences to unite with them in presenting on that day the interests of the paper and urging the people to subscribe for it. We have often thought of suggesting that same thing in regard to our paper, and we would be glad to know if the brethren think favorably of it or not.

Bro. Stephan, of Saint Louis, writes, April 3: "Last Monday night we had a meeting of official members presided over by Bishop Hendrix—the most enthusiastic meeting of the kind I have ever attended. Seventeen thousand three hundred and fifty dollars were pledged for our proposed Marvin Church by the various churches. It was done cheerfully and quietly and on the basis of missionary work among the masses of this city." Our brethren in Saint Louis are continually giving evidence that they are in earnest in the Lord's work! What can be done to wake up New Orleans Methodism?

Mr. Stanley's second lecture, which we had the privilege to hear, was one of thrilling interest and thoroughly appreciated and greatly enjoyed by the large audience present. His story of the trials, hardships, endurance and indomitable pluck of the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition was told in a style that elicited breathless attention. His picture of the great forest, in whose dark and dreadful shades the expedition spent one hundred and sixty days, will not soon fade from memory. His account of the discovery of the Mountains of the Moon was exceedingly poetic. His description of the Pigmies made the little fellows stand right out before you. Altogether, Mr. Stanley's lectures gave us a pleasure we have not had before.

It seems that thus far the dynamics of the Mississippi river are past finding out. We have been trying the "levee system" for years and years. An immense amount of money has been consumed. Time and energy and pluck and perseverance have been put to the test to control the mighty waters. And yet every year the river comes up all along its length and threatens every place and breaks through somewhere, carrying destruction before it. We ought to have learned a great deal in this time; but if we have, our knowledge don't seem to avail to keep the "Father of Waters" between the levees. It seems to us that we ought to try something else. Why not work in accord with the plan nature seems to suggest? Let all the water, that will, flow out through the channels which nature digs for it. Open all the natural outlets while keeping up the levees. Combine the levee system with the outlet system, and see how it will work.

Tulane Medical College turned out last week 105 young doctors and 13 pharmacists.

Sacraments.

The word sacrament means an oath, an obligation. Under the gospel dispensation there are two sacraments, two oaths, two obligations: Baptism and the Lord's Supper. The obligation in each case is an obligation we owe to God, and not to man, nor to any set of men, such as a church or organization of any kind. The obligation in each case inheres, in the nature of things, in the relations of God to man and of man to God.

Baptism is a sacrament of dedication, consecration, a sacrament of cleanness. We owe it to God to dedicate, consecrate ourselves to him, to be clean before him. This obligation is primal. It existed before the formal or visible sign of it was instituted or called into being.

Under the first economy, that which anticipated the completion of a system, the sign of this sacrament, or obligation, was circumcision, a bloody rite, for the simple reason that personal cleanness, cleansing from sin, was to be by blood. The sign of this sacrament anticipated, pointed to, the blood of cleansing. A refusal to accept, or receive, the sign was equivalent to a denial of the obligation. So great was this sin that the uncircumcised were cut off from among the people of God, and they were turned over to the uncovenanted, the unsacramental, mercy of God.

Under the New Dispensation, in the New Testament, the sacrament, the obligation, has not been changed, repealed, altered or amended; but the sign of the sacrament has. The sign is baptism, a sacramental application of water. This is true of baptism without regard to the mode, or manner, of applying the water.

Now, that the blood of cleansing has been shed the cleansing element of water has been made the sign of the sacrament of cleansing, the oath of perpetual cleanness. Hence all who accept Christ, believe on him, are commanded to be baptized in his name, to use the sign of an obligation then recognized or admitted to exist. Baptism creates no obligations. The obligations of a baptized man are, really, no greater than the obligations of an unbaptized man. The man who receives baptism puts on Christ, and by receiving the sign publicly acknowledges an obligation that always existed.

The church creates no obligations. All the obligations implied in the organization existed before the church was organized, before the church existed. The church is an organization, or association, of men, women and children who publicly and openly avow a pre-existing obligation to serve God, and to live free from sin. Pause here and consider this matter, ye who are in the church and ye who are out of it.

The Jewish Passover was a visible and bloody sign of an important event in their history. The whole of it was bloody and bitter, and unseasoned with salt or leaven, because it anticipated, pointed to, a bloody and bitter death as a propitiation for sin—a passing over, or forgiveness of, sin.

The real sacrament, real obligation, the absolute need for a sacrifice of propitiation in order to forgiveness, existed before the anticipatory feast was instituted. The feast was only a visible sign of a real, though to man invisible, need. The keeping of it was a visible and public acknowledgment of the pre-existing obligation.

Now that Christ, the true passover, has died, has shed his blood for sin, we keep a feast of remembrance, not a bloody and bitter feast, but a supper of bread and wine in remembrance of him who died in our stead.

The supper of the Lord, or Lord's Supper, is a sign of the sacrament, or obligation, of Christ, or to Christ. Our obligation to him, to love and serve him, to believe on him, existed before we came into the world. The obligation, the real sacrament, is neither greater nor less, whether we do, or do not, partake of this feast. The eating of the bread and the drinking of the wine is only a public avowal of an obligation and a public profession of faith in the blood of Christ as the only remedy for sin.

Some silly people, ignorant of the nature of a sacrament, and of the significance of the Lord's Supper, habitually stay away from the Lord's table. They foolishly imagine that by so doing they are under less obligation than are those who eat the bread and drink the wine in remembrance of Christ's death.

Now, let me say again: All the obligation you and I are under to God exists whether we do, or do not, partake of this feast. The partaking of these emblems is the Christian way, the Christ-ordained way, of publicly saying, "I recognize my obligation of love and obedience to Christ, my Savior, who shed his blood for the salvation of my soul."

An illustration or two may be helpful to the reader. I owe you ten dollars, and I am under obligation to pay that amount. That obligation is just as strong, just as binding, before I give you my note as it is afterwards. My note, signed and sealed, is an open and public recognition of a previously existing obligation. My note is a sign of the obligation. It does not create or cause the obligation to exist.

Again: I am as much bound, am under as great obligation, to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, in any matter, before I am sworn, as I am after I kiss the Book. The oath does not create the obligation to tell the truth. It is a public, open and a legal sign that I will do it.

There are some silly and very wicked people who think they are under no obligation to tell the truth unless they are sworn to do so; and with some the obligation is small after they are sworn.

A sacrament is an oath in recognition of an obligation. It is giving God your note for what you are justly due him. The obligation is as great before the paper is signed as afterwards. To stay away from the table is to refuse to acknowledge your obligation.

Other persons, with a kind of humility, say, "I am not worthy." You ought to be. If you are not, it is your own fault. Worthy, or unworthy, the obligation is just the same. A refusal to recognize it, to give God your note, to swear to love and serve him, will not excuse you, will not in any way lessen your obligation, but it will the rather increase your sin.

Still others say, "I can not commune because I am not in love and charity with my neighbors." Well, suppose you are not? You ought to be. If you are not, you are living in sin. You have no right, and really no cause, to be out of tune with your neighbors. Perhaps you are allowing some silly, little, childish, personal pique, some impulsive, thoughtless remark, utterly unworthy of your manhood or womanhood—to say nothing of your Christianity—to keep you from publicly recognizing your obligation to the great God above. Be ashamed of yourself and quit your sin.

Pray tell me, if you hate your neighbor, how on earth can that particular sin release you from your duty and your obligation to God? You allow an ill feeling towards your neighbor to destroy your religious life and to sink you deeper into the mire of sin. Turn the devil out of your heart and come to the Lord's table and recognize your sacramental obligation to him. Don't sit, and pout, and swell all your days. Sin will damn you. It will never make you worthy, never!

Finally, it is not a matter of personal choice with you and me as to whether we will or will not go to the Lord's table. Christ commands us to go and to eat. The obligation is in the command of Christ. You and I can not stay away without sin. It is sin to refuse obedience to our Lord.

No excuse, no unworthiness of our own, no want of love to our neighbor, will release us from our covenant relations and sacramental obligations to God.

Genuine repentance for sin and faith to discern the Lord's body are the prime conditions, the only real worthiness, for the proper eating and drinking the body and blood of Christ.

A Mission Church Dedicated at Lake Arthur, La.

Lake Arthur is a new, growing town in Calcasieu parish, situated on the west side of Lake Arthur, a beautiful sheet of water, through which the Mermentou river (a navigable stream) flows into the Gulf of Mexico. West of this town is a vast prairie extending thirty miles to the Calcasieu river, and north and south from the Southern Pacific railroad to the Gulf a distance of fifteen to twenty miles. These are fine, nice lands now occupied by settlements of French Creoles, and being now rapidly settled up by Western immigrants. Then east of Lake Arthur to Abbeville, in Vermillion parish, situated on the Vermillion Bayou, a distance of forty miles, is a fine stretch of beautiful prairie, fertile and adapted to rice, cane, cotton and oranges. In all this territory there has never been erected a Protestant Church or a place of worship for a Protestant congregation. About one year ago Dr. J. L. Gibson, a local elder in the M. E. Church, South, moved from Kansas with two or three other families, some of whom were members of our church, and settled at Lake Arthur. There were no religious services anywhere around, nor any place for worship. Bro. Gibson found a small vacant house that was built for a whisky shop. This he rented for $3 per month and established an appointment for preaching. He soon began to agitate the question of building a church. By many it was thought impracticable; but he pressed the matter. He soon had a liberal subscription, received some help from the Conference Board, and visited several points in the bounds of the district, and the people responded liberally to his enterprise.

Now a beautiful new church stands on an eligible lot, with its spire pointing heavenward, silently telling the people of a home and a rest for the good and weary. It is of good dimensions, well proportioned, beautifully lighted, a Bible on the pulpit, our standard hymn book for the congregation, an organ, bought and furnished by the ladies. Last Sunday (Easter) was set apart for dedicating this house to the worship of Almighty God.

The writer preached, at eleven o'clock A. M., to a large, appreciative congregation. A debt of $140 still remained on the church. After the sermon this was presented to the audience, and they were asked to pay it. In a few minutes the amount was subscribed, and the house was formally dedicated to God. At the night service the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, which was greatly enjoyed by the members of the church. The doors of the church were then opened and eight persons came forward and joined the church. It was a happy time; it was good to be there. Bro. Gibson's joy was overflowing; he is reaping the reward of his labors. The church cost $1,000, and it is all paid or provided for. The organization has grown from six to over twenty-five. These people are poor, just moved to the country and struggling against great difficulties to make a living and get a start in this new country; yet their first offering is to the Lord in the erection of this neat church for divine worship, while some of them can only boast a shelter for their families. This house was a necessity for the Lord's mission in this country; it is the establishment of the gospel in this destitute field. It is the planting of Christ's kingdom in this wilderness where sin has abounded. It is the dawn of a better day to this country. "The field is white, ready to the harvest." The reaping will give us grand results. One thing is needed to complete the outfit of this "mission station," and that is a bell for our church. A bell has a wonderful effect upon this Creole population. We must have the bell for this beautiful church; but the people here have done all they could.

This is emphatically a mission field. We appeal to the missionary spirit of our friends and brethren. Come to our help. Send us $5, $1, 10 cents—any amount your Christian generosity may dictate and your ability justify; but send us something. We need it. Send by postoffice money order to Rev. J. L. Gibson, Lake Arthur, La., or to the writer at this place.

JNO. A. MILLER, P. E.

Lafayette, La.

"An Organized Racket"—"Three Fits a Day."

The Nashville Banner, of March 27, contains a rather full report of an address delivered the evening before in that city by Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop. Her subject was, "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Its Mission," and is said to have been "able and eloquent." In the report this paragraph occurs:

The movement has been facetiously called "an organized racket." Well, it is a racket which has just begun. A Northern Methodist Bishop is having three fits a day caused by his holy fear that some woman may get into the General Conference.

Aside from the lack of delicacy and refined taste in that utterance, it indicates peril to the temperance movement under such leadership. There is a radical intenseness and intolerance in that manner of speech that impedes all great movements and prophesies no great good to the cause of temperance. However popular such feminine facetiousness on Northern platforms, it is at a discount in the South. "Devout women" have respectful hearing among us when burdened with a message and mission for our social and spiritual good; but the pleaders and pioneers of "rackets," organized or unorganized, may not expect a very large following. It is unfortunate that the undignified word should be so readily accepted as indicating the spirit of the woman's movement, and the challenge flung down that the racket "has just begun."

Friends of the temperance work being done by the W. C. T. U. will be pained to see it freighted with the suffrage and other issues. This is the logic of Mrs. Lathrop's reference to the question of admitting women into the General Conference of the M. E. Church. And she grows merry over the fact that a revered and learned minister of the gospel has grave apprehensions over what he honestly and prayerfully believes to be an innovation upon the teachings of the Word of God and the whole history of the church. Such caricaturing of God's ministers bodes no good. The good women of the W. C. T. U. surely can not condone, much less endorse it. "Three fits a day," says the lecturer, with a laugh—and that an argument for temperance and woman's work! It is sincerely to be hoped that the temperance women in these parallels will not allow their great cause to be complicated with and impeded by irrelevant issues. In their specific work they will have the hearty sympathy and support of all Christians. But when it becomes the propagandist of woman's suffrage and the disorganization of family life and church government, the church assemblies will cease to encourage it, and Christians who are not able to surrender the historic interpretation of the Bible will summarily drop it.

Notes.

What a wonderful government we have! It is said that only three States of the Union require that voters shall be able to read and write!

In 1885 the number of members in the Louisiana Conference was 14,468; last year they numbered 20,370, being an increase of 5,902 in five years, which is about forty per cent.! Is that much or little?

The average salary of the Louisiana Methodist pastors last year was $538, while the average salary of the presiding elders was $978. We are inclined to think that Louisiana will compare favorably with other Conferences on the line of preachers' salaries.

"To what do you attribute your success?"

"To devotion to duty. If a man selects a worthy object and labors faithfully in that direction, with honesty of purpose and determination to succeed, he will come very near to success. That sounds like preaching, but the last letter I wrote contained almost those very words. The letter was to a young friend who is about to undertake an important work, the success of which will bring him fame. Steadfastness of purpose is the best rule to follow in everything."—Henry M. Stanley.

Mr. Stead, editor of Review of Reviews, speaking of Mr. Wesley's influence upon English national life, says: "The politicians and statesmen little appreciate the extent to which the solidarity and homogeneity of the English people have been strengthened by the labors of Wesley. For forty years this man was little more than a highly vitalized human shuttle flying backwards and forwards in the national loom and weaving together into one organic whole the isolated and widely scattered communities which made the English people." In regard to the Methodists of to-day, the same writer, in the same article, has this encomium: "The Methodist bodies, with their itinerating ministers, are continually weaving closer and closer the many colored strands of our national life."

While in this city Mr. Stanley was asked by a Picayune reporter what he thought of the American newspapers of the present, and answered as follows: "Outside of the London Times, they are fully equal to the best English papers. I think, however, they devote too much space to crime and sensations. Much that is minutely and attractively detailed could best be put into paragraphs and not given so much prominence. Writing of crime in an attractive way has the effect of inducing some people to commit similar offenses." Our readers will recollect we said that same thing in nearly the same words, some weeks ago, in an article on "The Reporter and the Churches." Mr. Stanley evidently thinks the newspapers are responsible for a good deal of the crime committed, and he is right.

There is a regular gradation in unbelief. No man or woman becomes a full-fledged unbeliever at once. The downward course goes one step at a time. Christlieb, in his "Modern Doubt and Christian Belief," has brought this fact out clearly in one short paragraph. He says: "The first thing given up is the personal existence of the evil one; then (for the sake of Balaam's ass, or Joshua's address to the sun and moon, or the Mosaic history of creation) the authority of the Old Testament; then, one after another, the single miracles of the New Testament; and finally the doctrine of our Lord's divinity, his resurrection and ascension, and all the other revealed foundations on which Christian faith is built." It would surprise many people to know that there are quite a number of people in the church to-day who have taken the first step. They have rejected the belief in a personal devil. And they are on dangerous ground and facing the wrong direction.

Personal and Otherwise.

A man in Philadelphia has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for stealing an umbrella! Look out!

Bro. Wimberly has held interesting revival services at Louisiana Avenue during the past week. Several of the brethren preached edifying sermons.

The oldest itinerant minister in American Methodism died in Fairhaven, Mass., March 20: Rev. Dr. Frederick Upham, aged ninety-two years.

During last week our pastor at Algiers, Bro. Johns, held quite a successful revival meeting. He was assisted by Rev. J. G. Sibley, of Summit, Miss.

Send us some new subscribers, if you want to feel good. The way to feel good is to do good. To put the ADVOCATE to going where it has not been is as good a thing as you can do.

We call attention to the article, on the second page, on "Woman's Work." It was written by one of the foremost of our Mississippi missionary women, and will richly repay a careful reading.

Read Bro. Miller's account of the struggle and success of our little band at Lake Arthur, La. That is our mission outpost in that inviting field and needs strengthening. Can't you help?

The papers announce the death of Dr. John E. Edwards, of the Virginia Conference. Dr. Edwards was one of our oldest men and has been in the front rank for many years. He goes full of years and honors, and the church mourns over her great loss.

Dr. J. B. Walker, who for several weeks has been confined to his bed, was so far recovered as to be able to see his friends and will soon take a trip to his country home, where he will remain until sufficiently recovered to resume his pastoral and pulpit duties.

Speaking of Mr. Stanley's second lecture here, the staid old Picayune innocently remarked: "Mr. Stanley, without any peroration, entered at once upon the details of the organization of the expedition." The idea of a lecturer beginning his lecture without peroration seems to have struck in.

The Mississippi State Sunday-school Convention will be held in Greenville, Miss., April 28-30. All Sunday-schools of any Protestant denomination are entitled to one delegate and county conventions to two delegates each. The published program gives promise of great things to be said by earnest workers in the sacred cause.

Hon. J. L. M. Curry, agent of the Peabody Fund, has procured from the Board of Trustees of that fund an apportionment of $8,500 in aid of the educational interests of Louisiana for the present year. The State Board of Education acknowledged the donation by a handsome resolution of thanks, and we are sure that our people will appreciate the gift.

That men love to be thought well of and spoken well of everybody knows. But not many have the simple-heartedness to speak right out and ask for such thoughts and speech. It has fallen to Mr. Ruskin's lot to reach the culmination of a refreshing naivete. He comes right out, and says: "I like to be flattered both by pen and pencil, if it is done prettily and in good taste." There are thousands like Ruskin who like to be flattered, and yet very few who are willing to acknowledge that liking. Is there anything the matter in either case? If so; what?

Pneumonia and consumption follow colds. Johnsen's Anodyne Liniment will prevent both.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. C. Carnline reports from Pecoco, La.: "Our Quarterly Conference was held at Holly Grove Church March 28. Our presiding elder was with us, and we had a delightful time in the Conference. Bro. Harp preached with power, is full of the Holy Ghost, and his visit to Holly Grove will not be forgotten for many years. His most delightful address to the children will be felt for many years."

—Rev. C. McDonald, presiding elder, writes of the Woodville district: "We have completed the first round and have just begun on the second round. The preachers are all at their places and hard at work. Collections have been much better since the good weather came. The delegates to the District Conference were elected on the first round. There are some interests deserving special mention. The church at Zachary is nearing completion, and will be beautiful to behold. The station parsonage here (Jackson, La.) will be ready for the occupants in two or three weeks. The Sam Jones Camp Ground is to have a new and commodious hotel and additions to the tenting departments. We hope to collect money sufficient on the second round to secure the district parsonage. Our association with the three new charges added to this district was very pleasant indeed."

—Rev. Geo. H. Thompson writes: "The Training-school program was observed by the Madison Sunday-school on Easter Sunday, which resulted in a very enjoyable occasion and a collection of more than twenty dollars. This school has only about twenty-five members."

—M. C. Shell, superintendent, writes from Houston, Miss.: "We observed Easter Sunday with suitable program, which resulted in a collection of $17 for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. Our Sabbath-school here is very large, thoroughly organized and doing most excellent work."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis writes from Raymond, Miss.: "Yesterday and to-day (April 3) this community is sadly bereaved. Our beloved brother, H. D. Austin, fell asleep on the first of April. He seemed well as common; complained of feeling cold. He said to the family he would retire in order to get warm. He only coughed and died instantly. We will deposit the remains in the cemetery at Raymond to-day (April 3). Pray for us."

—Rev. S. J. Davies, secretary of the Church Extension Board, writes from Campo Belle, La.: "Your article of recent date about surplus machinery, though true in its general application, does not strike our Conference Church Extension Board. We are working steadily throughout the year. Shreveport, New Iberia and Greenwood are each projecting new churches. We are doing all we can for these enterprises, and see no good reason why all should not succeed. I have on hand blank applications to both General and Conference Boards, which may be secured by writing for them. Sanballats and Tobiahs are dying out amongst us. Nehemiah's progeny is increasing."

—Rev. F. M. Williams writes: "Our first Quarterly Conference for Providence charge, Brookhaven district, was held at Bahala Church, March 28 and 29. We had a good representation from all churches on the work, and a very interesting and profitable occasion. Our presiding elder, R. S. Woodward, was on time and in good condition for his work. Ours was the last Quarterly Conference of the first round. He has met every appointment, notwithstanding the excessive rains, swollen creeks and muddy roads. As a preacher, the district is perfectly charmed with him, and he is delighted with the district. As president of the Quarterly Conference, he seems not to realize he is in the chair, but dispatches business rapidly and commands due respect. The outlook on the district was never better for glorious results than at present."

—Rev. J. W. Price, presiding elder of Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, writes as follows: "The district is in a much better financial condition than it was this time last year. Bro. R. M. Davis, P. C., of Tecopela, is in poor health. Bro. A. C. Johnsen has charge of the work for the present. With this exception, the preachers of the district are well and at work. Last year we built several new churches and repaired many old ones. The good work goes on this year. The new church at Oxford is going up and will be finished before the next Conference. Our people at Oxford have had a hard time. Within two years they lost by fire both church and parsonage. They now have a good parsonage well furnished, and in a few months will have one of the best churches in the North Mississippi Conference. Bro. A. D. Long, the pastor at Oxford, is a faithful worker."

—Rev. G. E. Greene reports from Brodnax, La.: "My work is one well known to you, Lind Grove circuit, in Morehouse parish. It has about 200 members; three appointments in the swamp, and three in the hills. Much sickness has existed on my work, and a good many deaths have occurred, mostly from pneumonia. Have done a little pastoral work in the way of visiting. Have preached at four places on Christian education and taken four collections for the Centenary College Endowment Fund, resulting in sixty cents cash and $1 promised. I have two appointments to preach and collect at yet. I have nine collections to work at this year, and I am wondering how to raise them. People generally on my work are not much interested in church extension, foreign missions and Christian education. They seem to realize the claims of presiding elder, preacher and Conference claimants. I lay it mainly to the fact that out of the 200 members only about ten subscribe for the ADVOCATE. I approached a brother lately to subscribe for the ADVOCATE; but he doubted that he would be able this year to pay for it—crops had been bad, etc. Yet, if I mistake not, he is a regular subscriber to the National Economist and the Vidette. Being a member of the Farmers' Union, he, of course, keeps up on the affairs of his order. As a consequence, a vast number of our brethren, such as he, are much better informed about interstate commerce and the sub-treasury than home missions and the church extension fund. Hence the annual collections are up-hill work. I, therefore, push the ADVOCATE all I can. It's a mighty lever on a circuit. We have ordered a new stove for the parsonage, and are otherwise adding little improvements to the house so well kept up by my worthy predecessors. Sunday-schools are only here and there. One, at Bonne Idee, has gone through the winter."

[All this on one postal card!—ED.]

—Rev. T. S. Raidle writes from Opelousas, La.: "Our work is encouraging. The indications are such as lead us to believe we are making an advance movement. We have good and attentive congregations at most of our appointments. Our prayer meetings are increasing in interest and numbers. The Sunday-school work is improving. Interest in missionary work is increasing. We have organized a juvenile missionary society here with thirty-three members. Last Sunday (Easter) we carried out the program furnished for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. The service was delightful and profitable. We collected by card and public collection $33. A sermon on the resurrection was preached by the writer to a large and appreciative congregation. The Woman's Missionary Society have reorganized and started out with a determination to accomplish much good in this field. They have received twelve new members, and seven new subscribers for the Woman's Missionary Advocate. Thus they are preparing for the work, and we expect great results. Oh! if our men were as much interested and in earnest in all church work and religious movements as our women, we would soon see our church enlarging her borders and taking in all this land for Christ."

Children's Day.

The programme of exercises for the approaching celebration of Children's Day (third Sunday in May) has been prepared and printed, and is now on sale by Messrs. Barbee & Smith, Agents. It contains eight pages of the usual size, and is sold at ten cents per dozen copies, or sixty cents per hundred. We hope this appropriate and beautiful programme will be ordered and used by all our Sunday-schools.

Board of Missions.

The annual meeting of the Board of Missions, as provided for in the Missionary Manual, will begin "on Friday after the first Wednesday in the month of May."

This year it will meet in Wilmington, N. C., May 8.

It is desired that all the members of the Board should reach Wilmington by the evening of the seventh, to participate in the services for which our friends are preparing.

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery glides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. About Cyclopedias.

"The COLUMBIAN CYCLOPEDIA seems to me to strike a happy medium between the loose, superficial works and the too elaborate and profound ones, which few are competent or desirous of using. Most of the larger general cyclopedias are overloaded with a mass of technical science and official detail that is embarrassing and useless to ordinary readers. The COLUMBIAN is eminently practical, sufficiently full, and carefully compiled, well got up, convenient in form and extent, remarkably cheap, and, as I should judge, admirably adapted to families and general consultation. I think that if properly presented to the public, it will have a very wide sale, and be an exceedingly useful work. There is ample room in the market for a Cyclopedia like this, which combines, likewise, the advantage of being an excellent Dictionary of the English Language."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

They Were All Poor Boys.

John Adams, second President, was the son of a farmer of very moderate means. The only start he had was a good education.

Andrew Jackson was born in a log hut in North Carolina, and was reared in the pine woods for which the State is famous.

James K. Polk spent the earlier years of his life helping to dig a living out of a new farm in North Carolina. He was afterwards a clerk in a country store.

Millard Fillmore was the son of a New York farmer, and his home a very humble one. He learned the business of a clothier.

James Buchanan was born in a small town in the Alleghany Mountains. His father cut the logs and built the house in what was then a wilderness.

Abraham Lincoln was the son of a very poor farmer in Kentucky, and lived in a log cabin until he was twenty one years old.

Andrew Johnson was apprenticed to a tailor at the age of ten years by his widowed mother. He was never able to attend school, and picked up all the education he ever had.

U. S. Grant lived the life of a common boy, in a common house, on the banks of the Ohio river, until he was seventeen years of age.

James A. Garfield was born in a log cabin. He worked on the farm until the time he was strong enough to use carpenter tools, when he learned the trade. He afterwards worked on a canal.

Taking the Children.

A little boy had been deeply interested in reading Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," the characters in that wonderful book being all living men and women to him. One day while his grandma was busy with her needle-work, he took his slate and pencil and seated himself by her side; and, thinking of what he had been reading, he said:

"Grandma, which of all the people in the 'Pilgrim's Progress' do you like the best?"

"I like Christian," was the reply, giving the little boy her reasons. "Which do you like best?"

Slowly but thoughtfully, the little fellow replied, "I like Christian."

"And why, my boy?" inquired the old lady.

THE MERCHANT'S PROPHECY.—As we were coming down to the office to-day we overheard a paragraph from a conversation between two gentlemen who occupied the seat in front. They were talking about a young man who had evidently entered the employ of one of them quite recently. "He'll reach the top if he keeps on this way," the gentleman remarked, "for he works as though my business were his own." We repeat the warm commendation of the business man for the benefit of the boys who may be putting in long hours in factory or store or office. Duty done in a mere perfunctory manner never wins the appreciation of an employer. He likes to see an employee take vital interest in what he is doing. One who thus identifies himself with the business of the firm, and zealously pushes the work of his department, lays the foundations for promotion which is never long delayed. That is a piece of history which has repeated itself again and again. The hint may be worth something, boys. Tack it up on memory's wall.—Epworth Herald.

MR. EDITOR: This is the first little letter. I have tried to send you a few lines. I am going to school now. I am only ten years old now. I am in the fourth reader, and in the geography, and in the arithmetic also. I had a little pet lamb, and I found it dead the other morning. Rev. G. W. Huff was our pastor last year, and Bro. W. P. Meador is our pastor this year. We have a little Sunday-school here. It was broken up for awhile; but now it is up again. We are living by the Catholic people, and the priest talks about us here in this country. You must excuse bad writing and spelling. With much success to the ADVOCATE, I hope this will not go to the waste-basket. I will close, hoping to see this in print, as it is my first attempt. So good-by.

Your young friend,
ALUSANTINE BRIGNAC.
French Settlement.

MR. EDITOR: Though not a subscriber to your valuable paper, my teacher, Mr. Hightower, is, and, through his kindness, I often read it. Having read some of the letters from the young people, I thought a letter from this part of the country would, perhaps, be acceptable, and if it isn't, I have no fear of the waste-basket, for I would far rather you would consign my letter to its lowest depths than expose my ignorance to the eye of the public. I am a little country girl of fourteen summers, and live about a mile and a half from Abbeville. Abbeville is a small town in Lafayette county, Miss., situated on the Illinois Central railroad, about ten miles north of Oxford and eighteen miles south of Holly Springs. Being one of the hill counties of Mississippi, it is the healthiest in the State. We have two churches here, the Methodist and the Baptist, and two regular Sabbath-schools. The society of Abbeville is plain, but of the highest moral type. I attend the Abbeville Normal School, and study Sanford's Higher Arithmetic, Scuyler's Higher Algebra, Lockwood's Lessons in English, Gildersleeve's Latin, Art and English History. We have six teachers, viz: Profs. G. R. Hightower and K. Harmon, principals; Miss Lou Bobo, primary teacher; Miss Susie Douglas, art teacher; Miss Mary F. Ivy, music teacher; and Miss Eccles Crosley, telegraphy teacher. The Abbeville Normal School has only been in existence two years, being organized in 1889 by the professors. During that time they have done splendid work, and I don't think that they have a pupil who would be willing to exchange them for any other teacher. In fact, there is a harmony between teacher and pupil that you seldom see in any school. This year we have over one hundred and fifty pupils. Our school closes the twelfth day of June. Hoping my letter will be acceptable, I will close.

Yours respectfully,
CLARA TROTTER.
Abbeville, Miss.

Grayness, baldness, dandruff, and all diseases of the scalp, and falling of the hair can be cured by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old. I am going to school. I study primary arithmetic, McGuffey's Speller and third reader. I will soon be out of my reader, and then I will go in the fourth reader. My teacher's name is Miss Julia Trudeau, and we like her very much indeed. The water is rising very fast. My papa is a farmer. He has a very fine mare, and she has a colt. We can't find a name grand enough for it, so we would like for some of the little cousins to send us a name for it. Our minister is Bro. Norwood. This will be his second year with us. We love him very much; he is so good to the little folks. Previous to him we had Bro. Lallance. He boarded with us four months; we loved him very much indeed. I will answer Addie E. Ball's question: "Riddle" is found in Judges xiv, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. I will close by asking a question: How many times is "girl" found in the Bible, and where? I remain as ever,

Your unknown friend,
ETHEL PALMER.
Arbroth, La.

HOUSEHOLD.

Mister and Mistress Jones.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones (or are their names Johnson?) are admirable people; both members in good standing of this grand old church. If they be not enthusiastic in the religious life, but take things quietly—why, they do but imitate their neighbors. It is hard to stand (as did Saul) head and shoulders above our co-religionists. Yet they are right good Christians, and have a number of children, whom they love with all their hearts and teach them (at least, Mrs. Jones does) their church catechism, and in so doing make proclamation to them "they are the children of God." But Master Tommy and Master Bob and Master Frank Jones do not always obey their parents; they have been known at times to say not only, "I don't want to," but, "I won't." Mr. Jones having transferred all discipline to Mrs. Jones, she shakes her head and does—nothing. Now, will these two admirable Christians be pleased to read some words spoken by Mr. Brush, a few days ago, at "the prison congress" held in Cincinnati? We may explain how Mr. Brush is the warden of that large prison in New York known as Sing Sing—mainly because the boys there and men do very little singing. Mr. Brush in this congress declares "that a large share of the men and boys in State prisons and penitentiaries are there because they had no proper discipline in the family and were allowed by over-indulgence to play truant instead of attending school, and therefore received no school discipline. The child, even in tender years, who is indulged in its natural waywardness and who is allowed to say to its father or its mother, 'I will,' or, 'I won't,' is in a fair way to become an inmate of our penal institutions."

Of course, the boys of Mr. Jones are not going to the penitentiary; but some parents' boys are in Sing Sing, no less than 1,383 of them, and their average age is less than twenty-eight, showing most of the crimes are committed by boys and young men. It is a mistaken idea that most criminals are old offenders. Of the whole 1,383 men in Sing Sing, 1,056 are there for the first crime. The number of the employed when the crime was committed and the unemployed are about equal. All of which is respectfully submitted to these excellent parents.—Southern Churchman.

DON'T BE TOO TENDER.—Don't be too swift to take offense. Many times the shot is not aimed at you. Don't cry before you are hit. But if your feelings are hurt, bear it in silence. Don't tell it. Don't parade it before others. Suffer in silence, and wait God's time to right the matter. Learn to suffer for Christ's sake. You can get the victory over the devil by not talking about your injured feelings. He likes for you to speak of it often. It adds fuel to the fire. "For Christ's sake" lightens many burdens, and makes it much easier to suffer. Paul's feelings were sorely hurt when beaten with many stripes, yet he suffered patiently. Peter and John were sorely hurt when they were unjustly imprisoned for preaching the gospel, yet they rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer for his name's sake. Stephen's feelings were hurt when he was stoned, yet he prayed: "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And One greater than all was humiliated in a mock trial and a crucifixion between two thieves, and he prayed: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Be Christ-like, and pray that the offenses against you may not be laid to their charge. Learn to suffer a little for Christ's sake. Under no circumstances allow your injured feelings to provoke you into saying hard things or hearing resentful feelings, or in neglecting a known duty to preacher, church, or Sunday-school.—Selected.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

SCIENTIFIC.

Indoor Exercise.

What are the best forms of indoor physical exercise? A careful observer in the gymnasia of the athletic clubs and in the private institutions will scarcely help reaching the conclusion that many young men get more harm than benefit, either because of an injudicious selection of their mode of work or by reason of carrying it beyond a reasonable limit. Lifting heavy bells is almost a mania with a large class of amateurs, though one might search the town in vain to discover a single case of a professional acrobat using a bell of more than one or two pounds weight. Another large class add to bell lifting various other labors of an exhausting nature; heavy work, as it is called, designed to abnormally develop the arm and chest muscles without the adjunct of running and jumping and bar work, which adds so greatly the wanted elasticity. The effect of this heavy work on the vital organs, especially in the case of those not used or bred to violent exercise, is noticeably injurious. Some lose their color and become sallow of visage, some grow pale and take on a tired, overworked expression, while not a few get sprains which force them to lie off for longer or shorter periods.

The case may be cited of a young man of slim figure, who, by long-continued work with heavy bells in a large and well-known gynasium, could curl and put up 180 pounds. Suddenly he was attacked with what appeared to be rheumatism, but which, later on, proved so serious an injury to the spine that for months he has not been able to do any physical work, and there is reason to believe is permanently disabled.

A curious fact in connection with the class of men who do heavy lifting is that their great muscles seem to be of no service to them except in lifting. Few of them are quick enough to excel in boxing—for of what use is a heavy blow if not quick enough to hit its mark?—and they seem to have little endurance; being unable to bear fatigue, as though the heart and lungs were enfeebled. A man who has had thirty years' experience observing lads and men training declares running in the open air to be the best of all exercises, making it a rule to recommend "all around" work, such as boxing, hand ball, jumping, and single and parallel bar exercises; these, to his mind, being adapted to most naturally develop the body as a whole, and normally develop the exterior muscles, while at the same time benefiting the vital organs.—Scientific American.

How to Cure a Headache.

In case of the ordinary nervous headache, from which women suffer so much, says an authority, remove the dress waist, knot the hair high up on the head, out of the way, and, while leaning over the basin, place a sponge soaked in hot water, as hot as can be borne, on the back of the neck. Repeat this many times, also applying the sponge behind the ears, and, if the assertion of the writer is not a mistaken one, in many cases the strained muscles and nerves that have caused so much misery will be felt to relax and smooth themselves out deliciously, and very frequently the pain promptly vanishes in consequence. Every woman knows the aching face and neck generally brought home from a hard day's shopping, or from a long round of calls and afternoon teas. She regards with intense dissatisfaction the heavy lines drawn around her eyes and mouth by the long strain on the facial muscles, and when she must carry that worn countenance to some dinner party or evening's amusement, it robs her of all the pleasure to be had in it. Cosmetics are not the cure, nor bromides, or the many nerve sedatives to be had at the drug shop. Here, again, the sponge and hot water are advised by the writer quoted, bathing the face in water as hot as can possibly be borne, apply the sponge over and over again to the temples, throat, and behind the ears, where most of the nerves and muscles of the head center, and then bathe the face in water running cold from the faucet. Color and smoothness of outline come back to the face, an astonishing freshness and comfort is the result, and if a nap of ten minutes can follow, every trace of fatigue will vanish.—Analyst.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.
There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of CONSUMPTION,
SCROFULA, BRONCHITIS and CHRONIC COUGH or SEVERE COLD.
All Druggists sell it, but be sure you get the genuine, as there are poor imitations.

OBITUARIES.

ALLEN.—Mrs. JULIA ALLEN (nee Cocke) was born in Maury county, Tenn., Dec. 9, 1817; married to Col. H. O. Allen in 1841; died at her daughter's, Mrs. R. A. Jones, Cold Water, Miss., Feb. 19, 1891, of pneumonia. She was converted when about fourteen years of age, and united with the Methodist Church, in which communion she lived a useful and ardent member till death ended her labors. Her last illness was brief; only four days of suffering were needed to break the bond that held spirit and body in one. Then was the spirit made free from the bondage of earth, and introduced to the glorious freedom of that country where pain and death are felt no more.

Mrs. Allen approached perfection in every good word and work. No ostentatious pride kept before it the sanctities of her creed; but the inner soul was so full of the sacrament of life that her radiant face was the objective expression of the inward grace. I write of her as I knew her. Her perfection was a grace possessed rather than professed. She was a model Christian woman. Her religion was not paroxysmal, but steady in its course and flow. At home her influence was felt and confessed. Hers was an unselfish life. To make others happy was a business with her. The poor found in her a helper, and never was there any abatement in the ministry of those sweet charities born of our holy religion.

She died well. As the death spray threw its misty shroud of icy chilliness over her, she asked the hour; the answer was given. "Well, I will be at home to-morrow," was the last that earth heard of the pean of victory which fitly closed so beautiful a life. T. W. DYE.

ALLISON.—Mrs. MATTIE PERIN ALLISON, daughter of the late Franklin Perin, attorney, of New Orleans, and Mrs. M. Y. Perin, of Water Valley, Miss., was born Jan. 28, 1862; was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pecan springs, under the ministry of Bishop Keener, in 1872; was married to Mr. A. J. Allison in 1882, died in Water Valley, Miss., of pneumonia, Dec. 21, 1890.

Our sister's life was not objectless, and, therefore though short, was not a failure. She lived long enough to impress her unselfish and gentle spirit on others. The world is better for her having had a place in it. Sister Allison lived more and to the highest, divinest purpose of life than many who pass on to the time limit of threescore and ten. She seems to have been one of those choice spirits that heaven lends to beautify and adorn the relationships of earth just for awhile, and then pass on to a higher sphere, from which they throw back to earth their attractions to draw us upward. Heaven will be more earnestly sought after by the members of the home circle now since the loved one has passed its portals.

Sister Allison's last hours were full of the baptism of suffering; but the grace of patience manifested by her was in proof of a prayer and its answer. She was not afraid to die, but would have lived if she could for the sake of her loved ones. Those little children, to be left without a mother's love and counsel in the battle of life, was a strong plea to rise up and live on; but God ordered otherwise, and she was content just it be so. T. W. DYE.

MCELROY.—Bro. W. B. MCELROY was born in Shelby county, Ala., in 1824, and died at Mr. E. E. Nabors', his son-in-law, in DeSoto parish, La., March 8, 1891. He was married to Miss Diggs, of Alabama, and with his family migrated to Claiborne parish, La., where they lived for many years. In 1851 Bro. McElroy professed conversion and joined the M. E. Church, South. From thence he was uniform in his Christian character, giving his affections to God and living for the interests of his church. Like most of those in this land, who lived in the last half of the nineteenth century, he passed through various scenes of prosperity and adversity. Having lost all their effects, and all their children but two, for the last three years they have lived with their daughter, Mrs. E. B. Nabors, in DeSoto parish, La. For several years Bro. McElroy's health and strength had been gradually giving way, and, though he suffered no special pain, his health was perceptibly declining for many weeks till on March 8 he breathed his last.

His mortal remains were laid to rest in the Mansfield Cemetery. He leaves a wife and two children in sadness for the time being; but the righteous hath hope in his death; yet how difficult to realize that loved ones will have a re-enough reunion in the sweet by-and-by! Lord, increase our faith! J. P.

WILSON.—Died on Dec. 26, 1890, near Slidell, La., Mrs. ELLEN WILSON (nee Saunders), wife of J. Wilson, aged forty-nine years.

The deceased was reared with her two younger sisters in Louisiana, and was a consistent and devout member of Felicity Street Methodist Church, in this city. Notwithstanding the vicissitudes which befell her in her latter days, she possessed all the fortitude which marks the Christian, and retained to the end that natural, cheerful, kind and unselfish disposition which constitutes nobility of soul.

Parting from those near to her, in an inclement season, she obeyed a call to administer to her husband's needs and comforts in a lonely district, and upon her arrival fell a victim to the prevailing epidemic, immolating herself upon the shrine of duty and devotion, and breathing her last on the day after the advent of that blessed Savior, to whom she confidently resigned herself in the hope of a glorious immortality. Nor can we who remain below doubt that her pure and lofty spirit has been received into those heavenly habitations where the souls of those who sleep in the Lord Jesus enjoy perpetual rest and felicity. B. B. E.

BUSH.—ALBERT DUDLEY BUSH, the only child of Mr. T. J. and Sister Maggie Bush, died March —, 1891.

Dudley died with a congestive chill. He was only seven months and twenty-two days old, but he was sprightly and beloved here. But now he lives in the bright beyond.

J. C. ELLIS.

POU.—Died, near Waynesboro, Miss., Feb. 22, 1891, FRANK SIDNEY, infant son of Dr. P. W. and M. E. Pou, aged ten months. Heaven is more like home to the parents since Frank has come there. J. W. T.

BOWMAN.—At a meeting of the Oak Ridge (La.) Woman's Missionary Society, Feb. 25, 1891, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father, in his wisdom, has taken from our midst our aged and beloved sister, Mrs. MARY E. BOWMAN; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in her death our church, our Sabbath-school and our Auxiliary have lost an efficient and zealous member, and the community a faithful, earnest Christian friend.

Resolved, That while we deeply feel our loss, and sincerely grieve for her, we will endeavor to follow the example she ever set for us in her many virtues and activity in good works.

Resolved, That while our hearts are saddened by her death, we humbly bow to the will of him who doeth all things well, and rejoice in the blessed assurance that for her the promises are fulfilled; that she has entered the heavenly rest and wears her crown of life, for she endured to the end and was faithful unto death.

Resolved, That we extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy, and commend them to the care of him who is ever ready to heal the wounded hearts of his children.

The secretary was requested to send a copy to the ADVOCATE for publication, and one to the family. REV. J. V. PATTERSON, for Com.

WILLIAMS.—On Monday, March 8, 1891, the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, South, of Baton Rouge, La., met in memory of Mrs. S. WILLIAMS, who died on Sunday, Feb. 22, 1891, and passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The hand of Providence has removed our beloved sister from the scene of her temporal labors and from our society, and in view of the loss we have sustained by the death of our friend and sister, and of the still greater loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to her; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply mourn her untimely departure and sincerely regret the loss of her services as a co-laborer in our society, taking refuge in the thought that she has joined the blessed society of the redeemed in heaven.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathies to the afflicted family.

Resolved, That we do honor to her memory by having her name arrayed in black on the roll.

Resolved, That the above resolutions be published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and a copy be sent to the family.

MRS. M. B. MAGRUDER, Pres't.
MRS. A. RUSH, Sec'y pro tem.

COOK.—EMMA ELIZABETH COOK, daughter of W. B. and M. P. Cook, was born November, 1854, at Covington, La., and died Feb. 27, 1891, at Covington. She was not a member of the church, but was a member of the Methodist Sunday-school; was baptized by Rev. G. T. Vickers in infancy.

Oh! how sadly we shall miss her in the Sunday-school, and in the home circle, where she was the pet of a large family. But grieve not, fond parents and brothers and sisters; the good Lord, in his wise providence and tender mercy, never makes a mistake. Whatever may have been her mission here on earth, she has served it and gone home. May the good Lord sanctify the death of our darling Emma to the saving of the rest of the family, so that they may all meet in heaven, where parting will be no more!

J. C. CAMPBELL.

COOPER.—Sister EMILY EMELINE COOPER (nee Denham), wife of Erbin Cooper, was born Jan. 1, 1851, and died in this parish, March 3, 1891, aged forty years. She was married to Mr. Erbin Cooper in November, 1872. In 1870 she was admitted into the membership of the Methodist Church, and became an active and faithful member, adorning the profession which she had made in many ways until the end of her life.

She was a devoted wife and mother, full of sympathy for and always ready to help suffering humanity. She bore her sufferings with Christian resignation, and gave to those around her the sweet assurance of peace with God and her willingness to leave this world for eternal bliss. She was conscious to the last. She leaves a husband and six children.

H. W. WALLACE, P. C.
Tallsheck, Miss.

ENOCHS.—Died, in Natchez, Miss., Jan. 10, 1891, OSCAR NORRELL, son of E. A. and Laura F. Enochs, aged three years five months and eighteen days.

It is hard to realize that we shall see him no more on earth, no more feel the loving clasp of his darling arms; but we know that the kind Father doeth all things well. He does not needlessly afflict, but in mercy gently leads his children. He has only transferred your precious one from this world of sin and strife to that land of joy and peace beyond the skies.

AUNT ELLA.

CHIEVES.—Mrs. AMANDA J. CHIEVES (nee Brown) was born in Maury Co., Tenn., Sept. 22, 1817, and died in Alcorn Co., Miss., February, 1891. Sister Chieves professed religion about twenty-five years ago, and joined the Methodist Church, in which she lived a consistent member till death extinguished the mortal flame. She was a sister of D. Brown, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference.

She left a husband, two children, an aged mother, four brothers and two sisters to mourn her death. May God bless the bereaved!

HER PASTOR.

WARD.—ADDIE MAY WARD was born July 23, 1881, and departed this life, March 9, 1891, at the residence of her parents, 308 Clay street, Vicksburg, Miss.

Our little darling was only sick about forty-eight hours with scarlet fever. She was a good, sweet, affectionate child and a source of great pleasure to her fond parents. We will miss her sweet voice. May we all live so that we may meet her in a brighter world above!

AUNTIE.

Chronic Cases.

In law, nearly all cases are chronic and a chronic case often adds to the celebrity of the practitioner. But it is not so in medicine. The aim of the conscientious physician is to effect a speedy and lasting cure. But he often fails. These are the chronic and obstinate cases. But there is a remedy which has cured many chronic cases, and there is abundance of evidence. It is the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. It is a vitalizer, which is inhaled into the lungs, and so is distributed over the whole body, imparting strength and vigor. But read what patients say of it. Here are a few of the hundreds of testimonials, which you will find in our brochure and quarterly.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment is a great vitalizing agent. I certainly feel that it has prolonged my life." MRS. E. H. HENDERSON, No 331 Decatur Street, Brooklyn, New York. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"MRS. CRITY, my daughter, has suffered very greatly from nervous prostration for nine years, and has lately been using the Compound Oxygen recommended by Judge Harris, of Athens, and has been very much benefited; mostly by being strengthened." S. P. RICHARDSON, Presiding Elder of Athens District, N. G. Conference, Athens, Georgia, July 29, 1888.

Dont fail to send for our brochure. It is sent free, contains much interesting reading, a history of Compound Oxygen and its results, with a vast number of testimonials, which you can verify for yourself. Address the sole manufacturers and dispensers of the genuine Compound Oxygen, DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

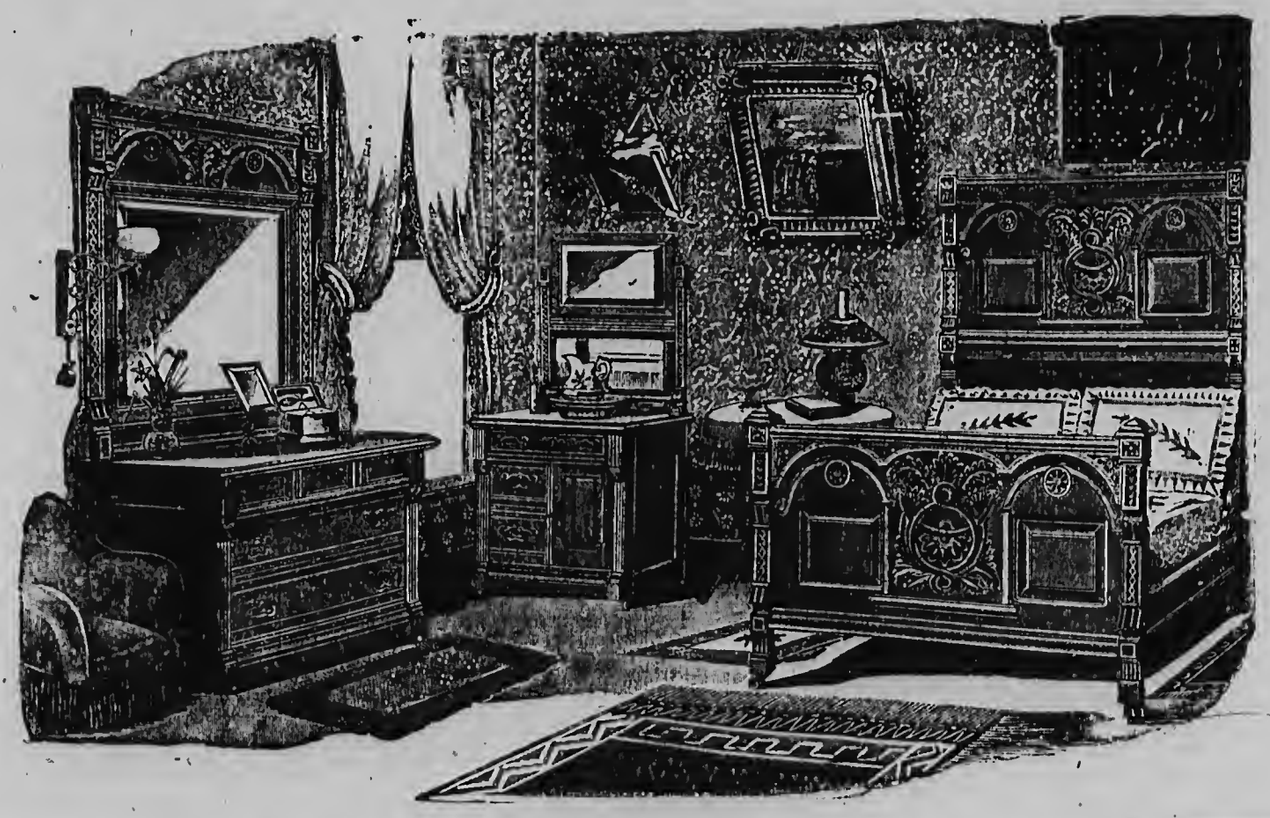
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

H. O. WHITE, P. E.

The Spring,

Of all seasons in the year, is the one for making radical changes in regard to health. During the winter, the system becomes to a certain extent clogged with waste, and the blood loaded with impurities, owing to lack of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated shops and homes, and other causes. This is the cause of the dull, sluggish, tired feeling so general at this season, and which must be overcome, or the health may be entirely broken down. Hood's Sarsaparilla has attained the greatest popularity all over the country as the favorite Spring Medicine. It expels the accumulation of impurities through the bowels, kidneys, liver, lungs, and skin, gives to the blood the purity and quality necessary to good health and overcomes that tired feeling.

To be of a touchy, a peevish and a persecuting humor; to be quick in discovering a fault, and ready to spring out into revenge; to kindle and rage like gunpowder at the least spark, are signs that we are perfectly wrapt in our own interests, and are overgrown with selfishness and conceit.—Collier.

Half Fare to Cincinnati.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

President Harrison, who contemplates a visit to the South and West, has been invited to visit this city by the Board of Trade and the mayor.

Henry Watterson will deliver the oration before the Washington and Jefferson Library Societies of the University of Virginia at the annual joint celebration on June 30.

Monday, April 6, was observed as Decoration Day in this city. The veteran and military organizations participated in the ceremonies of decorating the graves of the dead Confederate soldiers.

General Albert Pike, grand commander of the Scottish Rite Masonry of the southern jurisdiction and the chief of the British Royal Order of Scotland for this country, died on April 2, aged eighty-two years.

Attorney General Miller has received a telegram from the United States district attorney at New Orleans saying that he is now engaged in the investigation of the recent killing of Italians in the city jail in accordance with instructions from Washington, and will prepare and forward his report to the attorney general as promptly as possible.

A band of strikers, numbering fully 1 200 men, attacked the Morewood plant, in the coke regions of Pennsylvania, at two A. M., on April 2. The works were protected by 65 guards with Winobesters, who fired two volleys into the crowd. The rioters were driven back into the hills, with the loss of seven men killed and about forty wounded.

The difficulty between the United States and Italy has reached a position where the American people can regard it without anxiety. The Italian government, which previously showed much impatience, and threatened to proceed to extreme and violent measures to enforce its demands, has concluded to await the settlement of the matter after the accustomed methods.

The news received at the War Department as to the result of the efforts being made by western army officers to carry out the provisions of the army appropriation bill, authorizing the enlistment in the regular army of 2,000 Indian recruits, is very discouraging. The officers report that the Indians will not enlist in the infantry under any circumstances, as they abhor walking.

FOREIGN.

The Parnellite candidate for Parliament from Sligo was badly defeated by the anti-Parnellite.

Prince Bismarck is being severely censured by his friends for his determined opposition to the Emperor.

The police authorities of Buenos Ayres have closed the Salvation Army halls there, claiming that the army is not recognized by the church.

Rumors are rife in all the towns of Costa Rica that subsequent to the coffee crop having been gathered a general revolutionary movement will be made throughout the republic.

A disastrous explosion in a coal mine took place in Staffordshire, England, on April 3, supposed to have been caused by fire damp. Ten men were killed outright and several others seriously wounded.

In the negotiations for commercial treaty between Spain and the United States, the question of Havana tobacco is causing a deadlock. General Foster has assured the Spanish representatives that the American tariff prevents a concession.

A Frenchman in the province of Lorraine bequeathed France $800 with which to buy arms to fight Germany in the next war. As he was beyond the reach of the law, the Germans arrested his brother as accessory to the crime of sedition and conspiracy.

The King of Greece is about to become a guest of the Prince of Wales at Malborough Palace. He proposes to acquire an estate in England and to reside there permanently, abdicating the throne of Greece in favor of his son, the Duke of Sparta. He has an immense fortune due to bourse speculations.

It is learned that the Canadian government, at the conference to be held in Washington, will submit a proposition which, it is hoped, will be satisfactory to Mr. Blaine. This will not propose any radical departure from the present policy of protection, but will be based on mutual concessions which will not sacrifice vested interests.

Negotiations have been resumed between Mr. William Walter Phelps, the United States minister, and Chancellor Von Caprivi on the question of the withdrawal of the prohibition of Germany against American pork products, and there are more hopeful prospects of an early and successful issue than recent reports have led the public to believe.

Touching the talk of war between the United States and Italy, caused by the killing of the Italian offenders in New Orleans, the London Spectator ridicules the position of Italy declaring war against one of the greatest powers in the world, a power capable, within six months, of buying and building a fleet that would blockade every port in Italy. American ingenuity would be so stimulated to ontdo itself that it would turn every steamer that could float into an improvised iron-clad.

The first result of the miners' congress has been a declaration by Belgian miners in favor of a general strike if the government refuses to consent to the revision of the constitution. The temper of the speakers at the workmen's congress in Brussels point to wholesale Belgian strikes whether there be a revision of the constitution or not. The miners, relying upon the pledges of the English delegates to grant the strikers funds and to stop the exportation of coal to Belgium, have become eager for battle.

Spring Humors

Spring Humors, whether itching, burning, bleeding, scaly, crusted, pimply, or blotchy, whether of the skin, scalp, or blood, whether simple, scrofulous, or hereditary, are now speedily, permanently, and economically cured by the Cuticura Remedies when the best physicians and all other remedies fail. The almost miraculous cures daily effected by them prove this. No statement is made regarding them not warranted by the strongest evidence. They are, in truth, the greatest skin cures, blood purifiers, and humor remedies of modern times. They are absolutely pure, and agreeable to the most sensitive, and may be used on the youngest infant and most delicate invalid with gratifying and unfailing success. CUTICURA, the great skin cure, instantly allays the most intense itching, burning, and inflammation, permits rest and sleep, soothes and heals raw and irritated surfaces, clears the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, and restores the hair. CUTICURA SOAP, the only medicated toilet soap, is indispensable in cleansing diseased surfaces. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, the new blood and skin purifier, and greatest of humor remedies, cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus removes the cause. Hence, the Cuticura Remedies cure every humor of the Spring, from the simplest facial blemishes to the worst case of scrofula. Sale greater than the combined sales of all others.

☞ "HOW TO CURE DISEASES OF THE SKIN AND BLOOD" mailed free to any address, 64 pages, 300 Diseases, 50 Illustrations, 100 testimonials. A book of priceless value to every sufferer. CUTICURA REMEDIES are sold everywhere. Price, CUTICURA, 50c. CUTICURA SOAP, 25c.; CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1. Prepared by POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Boston.

Pimply, Blotchy Skin, red, rough, and oily skin and hands, painful finger-ends with shapeless nails, are prevented and cured by Cuticura Soap, incomparably the greatest of skin purifiers and beautifiers, while rivalling in delicacy and surpassing in purity the most expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. The only medicated toilet soap, and the only preventive and cure of inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, rough, red, and oily skin, and simple humors of infants and children. Price, 25c.

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never wrongs off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and acti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

Florida Furlough.

BY JOSEPH B. COTTRELL, D. D.

've had it in mind to communicate the ADVOCATE all along from nklin, Ky., to Tavares, Fla., where now seated. I came via Montgom-, Eufaula, and Jacksonville, to St. gustine, where I spent one week h the older of my two daughters, s. Sue Peet.

Passing through Alabama, many re the memories of the days I itiner-d; of the comrades I'm to see after hile, with others who preceded m in association with me in my boy-od. I've gotten into a habit of nam-to myself all who have died of the Alabama Conference—with whom net in Conference sessions—every ht after retiring. One hundred and y-two thus come up, and I fall ep as the procession of counte-ces file past. Time tests every-g; and I am impressed by what, in vidual character, operates cumula-ly in enhancement of esteem of, as the years and decades inter-e between the time they were in ciation with us and now. The e extemporaneous, natural, uncal-ting and unpresuming of them are who abide in affection; those who er had "an ax to grind," and whose ing was ever in deference to all s, but who could not be thought belonging to the church, or of pre-ing that any part of it belonged to . It might seem invidious to men-the names of those in the thought hom I have the luxury of tears, ose of this most admirable charac-tic; so I'll just let down the brakes, itch off from this line to another, name just a few incidents.

Augustine was a surprise. The nificence of the hotels, and of their ronment; of the churches and r structures making up the central hecy of an unlimited elaboration ity improvement, is as if the very t of New York, revised and more antly touched, were gathered up lifted off to this semi-tropical m. As I walked and stood and sat gazed at this expression of the er of money and thought in fur-anes of a city's rank, I was led to what if the church had such dar-not in self-aggrandizement and lay, but of evangelic determination ubjugating the kingdoms of the d into correlation with the king-of Him who is inspiration of wor-, how easily society could be taken he foretop and led progressively! I mused, the" water flowed; for in interior court-yards of the hotels lountains yielded copiously of the ; the golden-hued fishes circled d with almost imperceptible move-t of their gossamer-like fins; and vines and flowers, in almost bewil-g profusion, softened to the eye spect of as rare an assemblage of ecessary, useful and ornate as be-eth a resort for people who would surcease from the swirls of com-ce, the clatter and rattle of me-ical industries, or the stress of ical (and theologic?) engrossment. had a sail out to the peninsula on h the lighthouse stands, with a pany of twelve, six of whom were and girls. Across the peninsula quarter of a mile—we tramped to beach; lunched from our baskets, picking up shells, and then I my companions the slip, and went for the long-desired re-embrace in the arms of old Neptune. Clean white sand and salt water join in scrubbing one, under baptism of sunshine, where you feel that every breath is inspiration of vitalizing purity and power; and, oh! what an apocalypse, reminiscential! and what cumulative courage in respect of future utterance concerning the high and holy ministries whereof this solar, sheon and sand and salt-pervaded air and water are symbolic! It is the adumbrative, symbolic significance of phenomena that makes it powerful; and one, with the voice of the ocean in his ear, feels lifted out of the littlenesses of sect and sectional—yea, above even national limitations, realizing that through consciousness, and by varied media of cognizance whereby he is en rapport with all mystery, he is, in his own individual, personal being, the equivalent of the objective universe. The humbling of the soul is coincident with its discoveries of its own infinite worth. Its realization of the infinite value of what is counterpart of itself is revelation of its own royalty. Finiteness is merely a conceit. The paradox of this passage of the soul through experience of utter dependence into measures of government and service interminably cumulative, is accordant with all the seeming contradictions that make complete the circle of the infinitely varied unit with which each is incorporate. Whenever a human mind, smitten by the wand of the genius of life, vibrates from concussion incident to discovery of one organic, generalizing principle, in adaptation to a single exigency or venture, it has the key to the whole combination. It goes "from faith to faith," in evolution of the ever-the-same, never-the-same somewhat, wherein surprise from discoveries of an exhaustless benevolence intensifies delight.

But here I am writing about anything else than Florida. I can only mention what ought to have constituted themes of ampler disquisition. I came from St. Augustine to Tavares via Palatka, Ocala, and Leesburg. My son, Joseph, is engineer on the steamer plying from Leesburg to Tavares; and it was a surprise to him when I stepped aboard on the morning of the second of April. As I stood with him at his engine, and listened to his recital of anecdotes and incidents illustrative of the temper and talent of his four little children, and witnessed his aptness and skill in management of his engine, I managed to suppress, in a degree, the emotions that other fathers may imagine. And on arrival here, my older son, Jennings, with his step-brother, Henry Duncan, was at the wharf to meet me. As we walked up together to Henry's elegant house—recently built and furnished—thought was busy in reminiscence of the twenty-eighth of June, two years ago, when the form of the mother of these was borne to the boat, and carried over to Yalaha for burial!

Yesterday I preached here in the church where "mama" last heard me; a few days before Henry kneeled at her bedside, feeling her wrist in inquiry if she yet were alive; remarking to me, as I entered the room, "It is all over now, papa!" Sue got over from St. Augustine, Saturday night, and went yesterday, where she sat with "mama," to hear that last sermon to which I've alluded; but it was too much for her! The precious child drew out and came back to "brother Henry's," where she could weep unrestrained; and "papa" made out as well as he could from the text: "The love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead," etc. It was one time that heavy freightage of sentiment brought this craft down to the guards. Deliberation of utterance was imperative! But, oh! the promises! the historic event of the resurrection! the love that qualified Paul for all that through which he passed, and for such remembrances of men and women to whom, by name, he sent love in his epistles! For a little scrap of a Jewish bachelor, Paul had a marvelous capacity for loving. I imagine him, under pressure of that love, trembling down upon the knees of those fragile legs, on behalf of them of the church at Ephesus. Let the reader turn to the Epistle to the Ephesians, and read in the third chapter his statement how he prayed for them, beginning at the fourteenth verse. Amen.

Tavares, Fla.

Where Did John Baptize?

John the Baptist never baptized anybody in the main channel of Jordan, in any way whatever.

Notwithstanding the debate for centuries about what John did, how and where he baptized Christ and the people, I propose to show, beyond the doubt of anyone who is willing to take the inspired statements of the evangelists, that he never baptized Christ, nor anybody else, by immersion, or otherwise, in the main channel of Jordan.

As Christians, when we stand before infidels and skeptics, we must admit that inspired men make no mistakes nor contradictions. If they seem to, the difficulty is with our understanding, or our failure to consider carefully those statements.

In the Gospel according to St. John (i, 19–28, inclusive) we have the record which John gave of himself. In closing this record it is said that, "These things were done in Bethabara, beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing."

John was in Bethabara when this delegation "of priests and Levites from Jerusalem" came to him. Bethabara is a village beyond the main channel of Jordan from Jerusalem, within the valley of Jordan. How far, it is not necessary to know. The inspired statement puts it beyond the main channel clearly, and not in it. In the tenth chapter, fortieth verse, the same writer makes it very clear that he baptized in a place, and not in the main channel of Jordan. "Therefore, they sought again to take him; but he escaped out of their hand, and went away again beyond Jordan" (the main channel) "into the place where John at first baptized; and there he abode."

Here the evangelist, in giving an account of Christ's escape, says that he passed over Jordan (the main channel) and beyond this stream, "into the place where John at first baptized; and there he abode."

This is too clear to admit of a doubt. As John baptized at only two places—viz., Bethabara and Ænon—it is clear that his baptisms "in Jordan" were in Bethabara, and not in the main channel of Jordan. But was Christ with John at this place? Yes. The same writer says so. (St. John iii, 26.) "And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan," etc. He will say beyond Jordan—that is, the main channel. This is very clear. This writer is very clear in what he says, and how he says it. This being so very clear, it becomes the nucleus around which all other facts may be harmoniously arranged.

Mark, seemingly, does not write so clearly; but, after a little examination of his statements, it will be seen that he is clear and consistent. It should be borne in mind that unless the mud settles down here, that the infidel will make out a bad case, either a falsehood or a contradiction, in the light of his own statement, and clearly so in the light of St. John's statement, to which reference has been made.

In the outset Mark says, "John did baptize in the wilderness." This is very indefinite as to any particular place. The word "wilderness" explains his meaning. It is the valley of Jordan. Nor does he mean more or less in what he says afterwards, "and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan." This is an awkward statement. In speaking of a stream, we never speak this way. We never say "the river of Mississippi." We would say "the river Mississippi," or "Mississippi river." In no instance would we speak thus, if we meant the main channel. But if the valley was considered the river, as necessary to carry off the waters, we might say "the river (valley) of Mississippi," when valley is understood.

In II. Samuel xxiv, 5, we have a similar statement, which the translators have relieved by supplying in the margin the word "valley." "And they passed over Jordan, and pitched in Aroer, on the right side of the city that lieth in the midst of the river of Gad, and toward Jazer." Here they pass over Jordan, the main channel, and find "a city in the midst of the river of Gad." The translators saw the difficulty here. They also saw the absurdity of the case and its impossibility, unless there was an island there, which is not the case; hence they add, in the margin, the word "valley;" but, while they had as complete a contradiction of inspired statement in Mark's language, yet they failed to explain.

It is evident to all that if this explanation is not made, Mark speaks confusedly and contradicts himself, and makes mud muddy, and throws mud into John's very clear statement. Mark does not mean the main channel of Jordan when he says "the river of Jordan," else he would not have said, in his first statement, that he "did baptize in the wilderness." His second statement is in harmony with his first, meaning, thereby, the valley of Jordan.

Jordan has three banks, as is well known; and as Bethabara is within these outer banks, it is correct to say "in Jordan," and "in the river of Jordan," and, at the same time, say "in Bethabara, beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing." As Bethabara was not in the main channel of Jordan, but beyond Jordan, and as it has already been shown, beyond a doubt, that John baptized in Bethabara, therefore, it is impossible to speak truthfully, and say that he baptized "in Jordan," or "in the river of Jordan," if you mean, thereby, the main channel. Harmony of language and of statement puts John in Bethabara, which "is in Jordan" (valley), and in the river (valley) of Jordan.

"But," says one, "what will you do with Matthew's and Mark's account of Christ's 'coming straightway up out of the water?'"

Every Greek scholar knows that there is no difficulty here. Neither one says that he went into the water. This has been inferred. They both use the same words; so that what is true, in fact, in one statement, is true in the other. Both use the preposition "apo," which will be admitted by all who know the word, means simply "from." In Matthew's statement the New Version has, "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway from the water," etc., translating "apo" "from," as it should be; but, while Mark has precisely the same word, "apo," yet they fail to give it its proper meaning there.

Now, back of all these explanations there is a great and important fact, viz: that John introduced Christ to the Jews first through the law and the prophets, the testimony prepared of God for that purpose; and, as there was no demand or prophecy of the law or of the prophets that even hinted at, much less required, immersion; but, as both the law and the prophets did require a sprinkling as a baptism, it was only necessary that Christ should stand near to the water in some vessel, and receive his baptism, and come away from it; therefore, there is no testimony for a faith, nor any reason whatever, to believe that John ever baptized Christ, or anyone else, in the main channel of Jordan. Read "Baptism, The Question Settled," to be had of me, and you will not doubt my statement.

General Conference.

The committee appointed by the General Conference of 1890, to select the place for holding the General Conference in May, 1894, will meet in Wilmington, N. C., on May 9, proximo.

The citizens of any place wishing it to be selected will please communicate with one of the undersigned before the date of the meeting of the committee, giving the following information:

I. If free entertainment is proposed, what assurance can be furnished the committee "of simple, comfortable, and gratuitous entertainment for the next session of this Conference?"

II. If the citizens of any place desire it to be selected, upon the plan of paying for the entertainment of the General Conference, the following information is asked for:

1. Description of audience-room in which the General Conference may hold its sessions, proximity, number, and convenience of rooms for committees.

2. Rate per day at which board can be guaranteed at good hotels, and number that can be so accommodated.

3. Rate per day at which board can be guaranteed at first-class boarding-houses, and number that can be so accommodated.

4. About how many will be entertained gratuitously, anyway, by invitation to members.

5. Will the officers of railways centering in such place co-operate with the committee in securing lowest railroad fare for delegates and visitors to the General Conference?

The Corner-Stone of the Republic.

Bishop Coxe, of Western New York, had an able article in a recent number of the Christian at Work on, "Law and Public Morals," a paragraph from which we transfer to our columns and invite special attention to it. It is exceedingly timely.

A very grave matter, indeed, is the experiment which has recently become popular, of excluding the Book of books from our public schools; and one fears that the maxims of Washington are too thoroughly imbued with Scripture to be long exempted from a like indignity. But till Americans are so degenerate as to scorn the counsels and to cast out the wisdom of their great founder, it is worth inquiring whether this little volume might not wisely be introduced into all our public schools, and, in short, commended to all instructors of youth throughout the land. But far better let the Bible be everywhere restored. Apart from its incomparable teachings of human brotherhood and of the love of one's neighbor, it is a book of which nobody can be ignorant, if only because it is the first classic of the English language. It came with our first colonists to the shores of Virginia, and to the rock at Plymouth. It has been part of our history, and is associated with every memorial of the heroic lives and struggles of our ancestry. More than that, it is a living factor of our civilization, nor can our civilization long survive if it cease to hold its place. Kent and Webster, and the rulings of innumerable cases in our courts, have proved that the civilization which our laws have been erected to maintain is Christian civilization; not indeed the Christianity of creed and theology, but the Christianity of our social life, our marriages, our family relations, our homes, our community of ideas in education, magistracy, the claims of humanity and the nature of justice. All people are welcomed to share with us in these our institutions; and they are institutions which protect their rights and their equality with others before the laws of the land. But aliens are welcomed to enjoy them, not to overthrow them. Hence the alien is made a sharer in our privileges before he becomes a citizen; but he can only become a citizen by swearing to support the Constitution—a Christian Constitution in so far as morals and civilization are concerned.

In a celebrated trial on a charge of blasphemy, Chancellor Kent defined the relations of the Bible to our law as part of the law of the land. It is the recognized instrument of the law in giving its character to an oath. Men may be permitted to swear or affirm in other forms, but a Bible oath has peculiar dignity. Nobody, the great chancellor said, could regard an oath upon a book which it was no offense to the law to insult opprobriously—that is, to blaspheme; and his ruling has been generally accepted throughout the land. Washington not only laid his hand reverently upon the Book when he took his oath as first President of the United States, but he gently repressed the effort of Livingston to raise it to his lips, in order that he might bow his head in giving it the ceremonial kiss.

Now, the Constitution is law; but the "sessions laws" of Legislatures are only legislation, which often fails to become law. To become law, it must be sustained by the moral sense of the people. That moral sense can not preserve itself; it must rest on the knowledge of God, and of our moral duties as prescribed by him, and for which he will hold his intelligent creatures accountable. The great Athenian orator told his countrymen that to enact laws was nothing; to make the people will to obey and enforce them, was the essence of law giving. If such is the power of the masses, surely in a Democratic Republic the masses must be identified with the spirit of law and order, or all is lost. They must be penetrated by a sense of accountability to the Judge of all, and a fundamental reverence for him as the great Lawgiver, or the prime condition of permanent prosperity does not exist.

A Partnership with Crime.

By reference to the news columns of The New Delta it will be seen that the grand jury in Dallas, Texas, has found one hundred and twenty-five indictments against the agent in Dallas of the Louisiana State Lottery Company for the offense of selling lottery tickets in that town. We are gratified that the people of Texas do not propose to sit quietly down, and have their laws violated and their criminal statutes defied by a lot of gamblers and their tools; but that they propose to punish as many of these criminals as they can reach. It is to be deeply regretted that they can not reach them all; that the principals can not be made to suffer the penalties of the violated laws of Texas as well as the agent. And we suggest to the Texas authorities that they (if it be possible under their laws) have these principals indicted, and watch for them to come into the State, and then catch them up and try them. We also hope that all the other States will do the same thing. The men who induced this agent at Dallas, and who induce other agents elsewhere to break the laws of the States in which they live, are as guilty as these agents. In the eyes of the law, and in fact, a man who procures the commission of a crime is as guilty as the criminal who actually commits it.

And it is into partnership with such men as this one who now lays in the Dallas jail that the Lotteryites want Louisiana to enter. They are earnestly advocating that this State shall become a partner in the business of violating the laws of other States, and shall take a share in the profits of crime. They have lent all their energies and have used all means, even to the extent of invoking the power of the Supreme Court, to stand in business with a man who is now in jail for his share in carrying on the common avocation of the firm. They desire to force Louisiana into the position of receiving the swag after the other criminal has got away with it. It is about as honorable a business for a great State as that of the "fence"—the receiver of stolen goods. A grand position for a sovereign State to occupy; a grand future to achieve—to become the Fagin among States—the Mother Mandlebaum among sovereignties.

They even invade the halls of justice and invoke the forms of law to ask the courts of the State to weld the bands which would brand Louisiana as a criminal in every other State of the Union. So far as the laws of Texas are concerned, if they succeed, Louisiana would occupy the same position as if she had organized, armed and equipped a gang, and sent it into Texas to rob trains. To rob trains and to sell lottery tickets are both crimes in Texas and in other States, and Louisiana's participation in one would be as reprehensible as it would be in the other. Those living in Louisiana can have no idea of the intense and widespread interest with which is awaited the outcome of the Lottery's endeavor to force itself upon the people of Louisiana, and to establish this infamous partnership by judicial process. The world is not only aware of the methods employed at Baton Rouge to pass the bill, but it is also aware of the changes which were made in the journals after the adjournment of the Legislature, and what was the reason that they were made.—New Delta.

"Let Us Fast and Pray."

"The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; for he hath made it." "He hath made of one blood all the nations of the earth." "He is no respecter of persons." "And hath redeemed all by the blood of his Son." He says: "Go, and preach to every creature." "Teaching all nations his commands." Now, in the light of these scriptures and the responsibilities upon and the opportunities offered to us, are we as a church doing what we can or should to give a full gospel to the negro among us or in Africa? Many think not. As especially charged with this part of our connectional work, I invoke special fasting and prayer in this direction. Let us humble ourselves before God by fasting, and make earnest prayer that God would give us direction and help in doing his will only in this matter.

This is our national problem. It is, in a far higher sense, a church problem. God only can give solution to all the questions involved.

Now, as many as will voluntarily join me in special and constant prayer for our work among the negroes, please drop me a postal or letter indicating your interest and purpose in this matter. "He will hear and help." Let us pray about it; this will solve it, and we will all rejoice.

I wish all the church papers, and papers generally interested in this work, would copy the above.

Commissioner of Education for the Paine and Lane Institutes, Covington, Ga.

Stand from Under.

We find the following dispatch from San Antonio, Texas, in one of our secular papers:

The first annual meeting of the State Liberal Association was held to-day. One hundred delegates from thirty-two cities attended. The president said that humanity had been too long dominated by churches and ridden by priests. It was the association's object to unshackle the human mind, and allow it to face its problems unclouded by superstition and undaunted by churchly threats of a ridiculous hell-fire.

The secretary's report showed rapid growth. Five powerful series have been organized in cities of Texas, five lecturers had been kept constantly in the field, five preachers had been met in public debate and defeated, 17,350 free-thinking books and pamphlets had been distributed. The delegates were all very enthusiastic, and claim to be making much headway against established religion. They will be in session several days.

We feel very sorry for those poor dupes, not because they are "carrying on so," but because they are in blissful ignorance of the whereabouts of a certain Campbell, who runs a paper in Texas, and who, doubtless, is getting ready to sit down on them, and then what? Echo answers, "Spot."

This life is a state of probation and exercise like to that (which prefigured and represented it) of God's people in the wilderness, wherein God leadeth us through many difficulties and hazards, in many wants and hardships, to humble and prove us, in order to the fitting us for another more happy state.—Barrow.

HIS WORTH.

BY FLORENCE FOSTER.

"The good God always builds the blind bird's nest"
So runs a Turkish proverb, sweet and wise.
How calmly may she fold her wings in rest,
Knowing his touch upon her shadowed eyes!
Thou, who hast known his love so strong and grand,
Rest, too, in his right hand.

"Behold!" he crieth, "I will bring the blind
By ways they have not known"—assurance sweet—
"Straighten the crooked path, make life more kind, Turn darkness into light before their feet."
Is thy sight darkened friend? Thy God can see.
Let that suffice for thee.

Unsheltered birds his providence shall shield.
The helpless soul shall lean upon his strength.
Our need, grown great, to greater love shall yield,
And help, though long delayed, shall come at length.
Wait for him, doubting not. He knoweth best,
Who builds the blind bird's nest.

Small Salaries.

MR. EDITOR: Your note on this subject pleased me. Would not an editorial on this view of the question be timely? I am by no means alarmed at the lerge (?) salaries peid our preechers; hut, owing to the stress now put on one side of the question, it would be well to stress tho other side some, too. I heileve a large per cent. of Methodist ministers ere not peid enough to support them comfortably, and very few receive more than the needed emount. But neither the Methodist Church, the Bible, nor universel humen experience teaches us that anything greet end good is developed by comfort end ease. It is easy to theorize; hut how far does human reasoning stray from the teachings of experience?

Bro. Medlock ought to contrest the present seleries of ministers to the sixty-four-dollar selery of primitive Methodist preachers. Who will intimete that their cheracters was crippled because of small saleries?

Nor is church history lecking in such examples. This is what Mr. Green seys of the two religious sects which sprung up et the heginning of the thirteenth century: "The zeel of the Spaniard, Dominick, was roused et the sight of the lordly prelates who sought, by fire end sword, to win the Aihigensien heretics to the faith. 'Zeal,' he cried, 'must be met by zeel, lowliness by lowliness, false sanctity by real senotity; preaching lies by proaching truth.'"

Of Frencis of Assisi (who, in the verse of Dante, takes poverty for his bride) and his followers, Mr. Green says: "The 'Begging Friars' were to subsist on the alms of the poor; they might possess neither money nor lands; the very houses in which they lived were to be held in trust for them by others."

The same author says: "The tide of popular enthusiasm which welcomed their eppearence swept before it the reluctence of Rome, the jealousy of the older orders, the opposition of the perochial priesthood." It will be remembered that these were important factors in dispelling the gloom of the Middle Ages.

Whet force ever mertieled on the battlefield did more faithful service than the Salvation Army of Mr. Booth is doing to-dey? And what ermy ever endured greater herdships? Is not such in keeping with the Nazerene and his followers?

"The love of money is the root of all evil." Living in an avericious ege, and in the midst of en evericious netion, is there not denger of the ministry bowing down to the golden idol?

The purest ege of the church wes when it cost something to be a member of the church. The most corrupt period in the church is when it becomes temporelly profitable to be a church member. If the ministry is kept pure, temporel gain must he kept out of view. Brethren, our mest must not be of this world. We must not lose sight of Christ's exemple in this case.

GEO. H. THOMPSON.

"Triumphant Songs."

Some yeers ago, when it began to be said that e revision of the Methodist hymn book was being urged by many of the brethren, and when the news came thet the Generel Conference of 1886 had appointed a Committee of Revision, some trembled, lest the sweet psalmody of our church, so deer to us and our fathers, should be marred. But, believing that those in cherge of the matter were wiser than we, and better understood the needs of our Zion, we waited the coming of the book. Nor were we disappointed with the result; recognizing an old friend in a new dress; adding to, rather then detracting from, its merits. But before and since its coming a rival has sought to supplant it in our worship and affections—a rival which has well called itself by the title at the head of this article; since when it has obtained admittance it triumphs not only over the hymn book, but over the committee which spent so much earnest labor and faithful service in preparing it; over the General Conference which appointed that committee; over the Bishops who endorse the hymn book; over the Publishing House which issues it; over the colporteurs appointed to disseminate our literature; over the widows, orphens end superannuated preachers who receive the profits of the publication; over the Discipline of the church, which prescribes the use of our own hymn and tune book (p. 132, ¶ 223) in all our congregations; and, lastly, it triumphs over the vows of members, by which they heve solemnly promised to be subject to the Discipline, and support the institutions of the church. Truly, the book is well called "Triumphant Songs."

"But," some may say, "suppose we use it only in the Sunday-school." Only in the fountain, not in the stream! Is not the Sunday-school of to-day the church of to-morrow? Let us beware how we train a disloyal church for the future. "God is not mocked: whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reep."

FANNIE M. MONTGOMERY.

A Forgotten Preacher.

I recollect well all the preachers appointed to Warren circuit by the Mississippi Conference from the first session before 1820 to the last preceding the one after 1860. The first was Willism Winens; the last was Harvey T. Johnston. Between them were John Lane, John G. Jones, Charles K. Marshall, Henry J. Harris and Preston Cooper. These will be recollected when their names are mentioned. There were others greatly esteemed end useful, but less known. Among them Benjamin S. Houghton, who is forgotten for reesons which I will state.

My father's house was this preacher's home during two or three days of every week, whilst on Warren circuit. During that time he performed the usual funeral services at my father's burial. Our residence being central, the preachers often called, and at times made it their home, and we loved to have it so. Some account of my father and mother may be found in the History of Methodism in Mississippi by the Rev. John G. Jones (p. 346). B. S. Houghton was considered by the public as a good preacher and a good men, not social, because always absorbed in thought; was awkward as if not knowing how to act. His friends excused him because he was absent-minded. His character was negatively good—that is, he was not faulty in any known conduct. All citizens concurred with his presiding elder, who, at every Conference, for twenty years, said, "Nothing against Bro. Houghton."

It was his practice to take long walks after supper to meditate, I suppose; thinking to himself, it would be called. But I doubt if anyone ever thinks without another thinker being present, good or bad, as we may choose. Too often, alas! the intruder in the mind holds us in bondage to thoughts which we would prefer not to have known. The preacher often had the writer as company, hardly companion, as there were several years between their ages; he being as much over twenty as the young boy was under. When walking with B. S. H. and other preachers, questions would be suggested end asked about the moon and stars and the blue vault overhead, which seemed to come down to the earth all around, more to direct attention to these wonders than to expect an answer. The little boy could ask hard questions, too; why things were thus and not otherwise, why the moon in all its changes was never square or hollow. The preachers could not answer, nor could the boy. Very likely the child could only say, "It is so because it is so." This is a proverbial expression reflecting upon the supposed ignorance of the young, but it is really as good an answer as those can give who are called wise and think themselves "wise above what is written."

This preacher received appointments to the best circuits before they were important stations until 1845, when the Methodist Church was divided. He was the only preacher of the Mississippi Conference who refused to join all the other preachers in the Conference of the M. E. Church, South.

There was rather too much feeling about the separation; the few opposed to the new arrangement were held in light esteem. B. S. H. was self-ostracized, estranged from his brethren; they from him, no doubt. He spoke to me confidentially; his thoughts were such, I think, as a true Christian could indulge. His judgment and conscience did not approve the separation. He thought it would not continue long, when he would join again. Until then he decided to settle and remain on a small farm with a few slaves, his patrimony from his father's estate. Soon after he died. His home being in the swamp, with no friend around, no notice was given of his death; at least, I saw none. Being in no Conference, no obituary will be found in the Minutes of the year when he died.

I may say he is a forgotten preacher. The Bishop, with all the preachers, at Canton in 1890 can hardly be charged with having forgotten one whom they never knew. Recollecting him by association, I call up many persons and incidents of more than half a century past. I am glad to say, "Hæc olim meminisse juvabit."

E. G. COOK.

Hazlehurst, Miss.

That National Convention.

Once upon a time I heard this incident narrated: A youth, seized suddenly by an attack of "poeticus afflatus," was inexorably compelled to express himself or succumb to the foll violence of the maledy. He wandered forth from his whilom mansion with unutterable things struggling within his breast. It was night; the silver-orbed moon hung like a burnished shield on the dark background of the sky. Our hero, with frenzy amazing, suddenly burst forth in accents wild, "O Luna! Luna! . . . thou art! thou art!—the moon."

So with curious marvelous events which are occurring in these wonderful times among our people. The woman question! It seems to be the burning question of the hour up North, for the M. E. Church is aflame. Like the youth aforesaid, I can look and gaze and wonder; then cry out, "O woman! woman! . . . thou art! thou art!—woman!" And thet means "a heap" nowadays. It always did mean much, but recent developments have widened, broadened and deepened its meaning. For centuries with this cultured Anglo-Saxon race it has meant wife, mother, daughter, sister. "Wimodausis" does not mean these. It is a sort of an abbreviated parody. Somebody please tell me what these things do mean, or else I shall cry again, "O woman!" . . . then collapse. Perhaps some strong-minded sister will say, "The best thing you can do."

At this National Conventions were women of all professions and vocations. Women preachers, doctors, lawyers, reporters, politicians end—and—many more besides. They read papers of various and diverse kinds; they made speeches, witty, wise, scathing, sarcastic, foolish. There were grand woman there, peers of any that ever graced the earth. Some things were said end done which seemed to me were ill-timed and more the result of passion and prejudice than good sound common sense. But a man told me once, when I ventured an opinion about some debateble subject, "I did'nt know much." When I begin to think and write about the women I believe he wee right. Miss Willard presided, and she reigned right regally. The reporters report that when some of the sisters became obstreperous and exceedingly earnest, she never lost her equipoise. Maybe the good, old-fashioned Methodistic religion of hers hed something to do with this. The most boisterous woman, I understand, who was there is a professed infidel. Says it is a mark of culture to be such in all the light of this age.

Here is a striking comparison. The calmest, quietest woman there is a Christian; the loudest, noisiest one is an infidel. Miss Willard in her autobiography devotes several chapters to her religious experience. A foghorn may he heard farther than a lute; but which is sweeter? Here is food for thought. However, thus fer I heve gone for the present. When women meet in conventions, I discover among them the same hopes, ambitions and passions thet I discern in like assemblies of men. The same follies and weeknesses are there, too, and each sex alike needs the wisdom that cometh from on high. With the Master's hend upon her heart, fashioning it after his image, woman is not only the peer of man in all the essentials that constitute our higher nature, but, in the light of the mysteries yet unrevealed, may be like unto the angels of God. In the grand possibilities of our spirituel life, in all that is best, purest and holiest, here and hereafter, she is equal sharer with man. I am glad to see the noble women of our church were not slow to discover this truth, for therein is much contentment and peace.

S. J. DAVIES.

Mistake Corrected.

I see in the Minutes of the Mississippi Conference for 1890 that Whittington circuit was assessed $330 and paid $318. The circuit was assessed that amount, but our pastor dropped off one appointment that was assessed $15, with the understanding that its assessment was to be dropped from the circuit's assessment, which should read, "Assessed for preacher in charge, $315; paid $318."

It is true our assessment is small, but it has been a long time since we failed to pay it. Don't expect to fail while God dwells in our hearts.

STEWARD.

Is There Not a Reason?

It is often stated that traveling salesmen or drummers, as a class, are very wicked. I met a gentleman, a few weeks ago, who has been traveling for a Chicago house ten years, and he said that during this time he had been asked to attend church by three business men. He gave me their names and address, and added that during all this time he had not gone to a single town or city where there were club-rooms that he had not been asked by from one to a dozen business men to attend the club or some place of wickedness on Sunday. This statement is, to my mind, a very strong exhortation to business men who profess to love the Lord Jesus Christ to be more watchful and careful for the souls of their fellow-man.

The gentleman of whom I speak is not a reckless, gambling, drunken rowdy, but an humble, pious Christian who attends church, reads his Bible and spends his Sunday evenings at the Y. M. C. A. meeting instead of at the corners of the streets, or in fashionable drinking-places. "If it was not for a Christian father and my Bible," said he, "I would be as wicked as the average drummer."

Could not the business men who profess to love the Lord Jesus improve along this line? I fear the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

Indian Mission.

I wish to say that in answer to my call I have received for the Indian Mission from Rev. B. S. Rayner, $5; Rev. H. R. Caldwell, $5; Mrs. Ellen Burton, $1, and M. E. Herington, $1; the last-named being a new subscriber to the mission.

And, now, will brethren and sisters who have subscribed, and have not paid the first installment, and those who have not subscribed, but are willing to help in this very important field, please send at once. Brethren and sisters, do not defer, as I went all I can get by May 1, as we want to commence the work right away. So please send on the amounts promised, and you that have promised and you that have not promised let me beg you to send something right away. Oh! we have waited so long, and so many of the poor heathen Indians have died without hope right in our midst or at our doors. May God help us to rise up and help now! He has given us the means, doubtless, for this work, and, oh! what will become of us if we fail to properly apply them. Send as before directed, by registered letter, to Barlow, Copiah county, Miss.

Your brother, in hope of the salvation of the Indians,

Increase of Gambling.

In the absence of constent reminders, insidious vices take root and increase. They creep in under the guise of pleasure and amusement and fix themselves on youth, before any are aware. The tendency to popular laxity as to card-playing is giving a vast impulse to gambling. The lottery spirit also has greatly stimulated the evil. Gambling is an unpardonable vice. It has every element of wrong end none of right. It is vicious whether practiced in moderation or excess. It is as morally destructive in the form of progressive euchre as in the ivory chips of the gambler's den. The one prepares the victim for the other by creating end stimulating the thirst for winning something. Hosts of bright and promising careers have been wrecked by gambling habits. The awful fascination and power of this vice is described by a late English lady of rank who declared that there was nothing she cared for so much as gambling, and over and over she promised to give it up, but broke the pledges just as the drunkard breaks his promise. She would now rather lose her right hand than play cards or gamble in any way. "Kingsley has said that of all habits it is the most intrinsically savage; morally, it is unchivalrous and unchristian; the devil is the only father of it." It is in fact only gilded robbery. It snatches a man's purse after having drawn him into a feast of pleasure. It is the meanest end most degrading vice tolerated by civilization. It ruins the gambler himself; it risks the welfare end subsistence of his family and friends; it alienates from business; leads to betrayal of trust end robbery of employers, end draws the victim into the vilest company. It is meanest of the mean, since the pleasure it brings is obtained, as Herbert Spencer has said, "at the cost of pain to another. The happiness of the winner involves the misery of the loser. It is, therefore, essentially anti-social, sears the sympathies, cultivates a herd egoism, and so produces a general deterioration of character and conduct." It is the wolf-spirit in human nature that loves to prey on our fellows. It fosters pride and avarice in winning, and develops bitterness and the thirst of revenge in losing. Its whole spirit is selfishness, cruelty, hard-heartedness, and carelessness of the rights, wants, pain of our brother-man. It tends to destroy every Christian grace and to cultivate every evil spirit in the disposition. That gambler loves his family not a whit who imperils their peace and comfort on the midnight cast of the die. He cares nothing for his place in society, or for the respect of his fellow-man. He is desperate who is ready to throw all away for nothing, as every risk involves in the end. Beware of the treacherous evil.—Mid-Continent.

FROM THE WORK.

TRENTON, MISS.

I will give a few dots from Trenton circuit, Mississippi Conference. Taking a close look into all the departments of church work, I think there is considerable improvement along several lines. Congregations are as good, or better, while the number of family altars has increased, as also the interest in Sunday-schools and prayer meetings, and the number of members who will lead in public prayer in the congregations. So, taking all things in consideration, I think Trenton circuit is moving up-grade.

Our first Quarterly Conference embraced the fourth Sunday night and Monday following, in March. Our presiding elder, Rev. P. A. Johnston, was at his post to attend to the various interests of the church. The stewards raised the assessments for pastor in charge, and the district stewards had previously done the same for presiding elder; so a rise of $7.50 was made in the assessments over last year, although the assessments of last year were not met by nearly $200.

We are hoping, praying and working for a better year, in every respect, on the circuit than we had last year, although farmers are later than usual starting their farm work. The continued rains have prevented, and much of the land is not, and will not, be prepared as it would have been if the rains had been less.

I have noticed, with a great interest, some articles in our Advocates on the subject of worldliness in the church; and, Mr. Editor, to my mind there are few questions of greater import to the church and ministry than this. We have many members, in every place where I have labored, who neither respect their solemn vows, nor the church of which they profess to be members; and the minister who has the moral courage to expose their sinful ways, and to show up the results of such a life, is denominated as a man who does not preach the gospel, but who abuses and "rakes" the church. What are we to do to save such members from being lost, and to rid the church of their pernicious influence? When we get the majority of our members to live right, and to work for the cause of Christ, then we may expect great ingetherings of souls to Christ.

Brethren, let us work more in the church, until we get the church better, and then we can take the world for Christ.

M. J. MILLER.

WEIR, MISS.

We are moving on smoothly on Weir circuit. The heavy rains have hindered the work some, there being several creeks to cross en route for some of my appointments. We haven't suffered so much from the cold, as nearly all of our churches are comfortable. I have but seven churches and go into but four counties. Of course, I have to preech twice every Sunday and ride from six to nine miles to get to the second place. Pray for us!

We are in the midst of a good, appreciative people. We are holding Church Conferences, and administering the Lord's Supper this round. We have some precious times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Our churches, so far, have all adopted the assessment plan, as the Discipline provides, to raise the preacher's "allowance." Yesterday was a high day for Weir. We had Easter services in the Sunday-school. Our ladies, full of zeal for the Master, had the church appropriately decorated. It was enough to bring a tear of gratitude (and the writer could not refrain) to see the bright, sunny faces, each eager to do their part just right, as children always are; and, of course, they went through without a hobble, songs and all; and after an Easter sermon we had a precious communion. We had a crowded house, and it seemed that half in the house communed. After the communion we received two into the church—one on profession, the other by baptism. This is seven in all added to this church since Conference. We think the field is white to the harvest. All around the circuit we are expecting the Lord to do great things for us this year, and we are trying to be "workers together with him." I am presenting the claims of our dear ADVOCATE; get some subscribers, but not as many as we should have.

J. H. SMITH.

ALGIERS, LA.

We have just had a most excellent revival of religion in the church here. The meeting commenced on the fourth Sunday in March, and continued ten days. Rev. J. G. Sibley, of the Mississippi Conference, was present, and did most of the preaching. His preaching was very pointed and plain, not hesitating to say what he thought ought to be said. He was also loving and pathetic. His preaching was very greatly blessed of God. Our people took greatly to him. The church has been very greatly benefited and built up. Twenty-one have been received into the church on profession of faith, and it has been estimated that there were more conversions than accessions. Nearly all that joined the church professed conversion. We can not possibly estimate the good that was done. Large crowds heard the gospel, and we may reasonably suppose that some went away to live better lives who did not make a public profession.

The church now is in good condition, and we hope for a revival in the Fall that will sweep in hundreds. A movement is on foot now to repair the church to the extent of $1,000, which will make the church quite beautiful and attractive. Bros. Bean and Parker also preached once each during the revival. We extend our thanks to the brethren, and praise God for the work done.

We are completely surrounded by the high water. The levee, nine miles above, broke, but a strong protective levee has been built in the rear of the town, thus saving us from overflow. We think we are safe. We are confident of having a good year.

H. S. JOHNS.

BINNSVILLE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Bro. Mellen, our presiding elder, came and held our first Quarterly Conference on March 28 and 29. He came in the spirit of the Master and gave us five earnest sermons. His sermon on Saturday was very full of comfort to me. We had a good meeting; one that made lasting impressions. Binnsville circuit is located in northeast corner of Mississippi Conference, and this is a prairie country; therefore, we have had a large share of black mud lately.

Our people are greatly discouraged on account of failure in crops last year, followed by depression in monetary matters. We were quite gloomy over the prospect, but on Saturday our stewards came up with more money than we were expecting. Then our live presiding elder cheered all our hearts.

Binnsville is where Fairview College is located. It is presided over by Rev. W. W. Moore, A. M., and he has with him two most excellent teachers—Profs. Berton and Benson, also Rev. G. P. McKeown in primary department, and Mrs. Archibald, the music department, with nineteen pupils. They have had more than twice as many boarders this session as last. This is a good place to educate these faithful Christian teachers do good work. The place is healthy and the moral tone good.

D. C. LANGFORD.

THE REVIVAL IN COLUMBUS, MISS.

On last Thursday night we closed the most remarkable religious meeting in the history of Columbus. The Rev. George S. Inge, on the invitation of the pastor of the Methodist Church, conducted the meeting, preaching twice a day for fifteen days. His preaching was in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. As an evangelist, Bro. Inge is wholly unobjectionable. He is candid without being coarse. He does not abuse his brethren or ridicule his hearers. His one purpose is to save souls. During the revival there were about three hundred conversions. One hundred and three persons have applied for membership in the different churches. The Methodist Church gets seventy-five. Of this number sixty-four were admitted yesterday morning. Among the converts is a Chinamen. I baptized him yesterday. He answered the customery questions intelligently, and rejoiced in the God of his salvation. The musical part of the services was under the direction of Bro. D. Evans, a converted and consecrated Welshman.

Sunday-School Lesson—April 19.

Jonah Sent to Nineveh.

Jonah i, 1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee."—Jonah iii, 2.

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. Jonah's Mission of Mercy. II. His Omission of Duty.

REFERENCE WORD.—"Repent."

MEMORY VERSES.—14-16.

TIME.—About 862 B. C.

PLACES.—1. Joppa (now Jaffa), the port of Palestine on the Mediterrancan. 2. Tarshish, a Phenician city in the south of Spain. 3. Nineveh, the capital of Assyria.

I.—JONAH'S MISSION OF MERCY.

Jonah was the first foreign missionary. However, not such an ancestor, perhaps, as his illustrious line of successors should like to boast. His mode of procedure angured ill-success for the enterprise. As gloomy as has been the outlook in after times, it was more than when this first missionary tour was inaugurated. In Jonah was begun the final struggle that has existed throughout the history of the church, even to the present day—the contest against selfishness, local prejudice, and racial distinctions. This is the great barrier that has ever been thrown across the path of missionary zeal. The facts in Jonah's case were substantially such as are sometimes too apparent even now. Jehovah, who is infinite in mercy, had beheld with long suffering the abominable iniquities of the heathen city, Nineveh. The sins of its inhabitants could no longer be borne. The divine anger was kindled hotly against a people that had trampled under foot all the principles of purity and truth. But God, in wrath, always remembers mercy. He determined to send his prophet to cry against the wickedness of that great centre of moral pollution. How beautiful does the nature of God appear in contrast with the spirit of man! The first principle of Jonah's creed, as he avowed it to the shipmaster, was, "I am a Hebrew." In this simple statement, made so fervently, we may find the principle that led to his being a recipient of his trust. The Hebrews were the chosen people. They alone enjoyed the revelation of Jehovah's will and the blessing of his presence. All other nations were far outside the pale of God's love. Jonah's people were the children of Abraham; all others were as dogs that dared not hope to take even crumbs from the heavenly Master's house. This was the prophet's strong conviction. He had been bred from it. Hebrew blood ran in his veins; Hebrew ideas dominated his mind; the narrowness prohibited the doctrine of the brotherhood of man from entering his heart. Thus we see that his defection can in no wise cast reflection on his courage; he was, in the accepted sense, a brave man. All his actions give guarantee to that effect. If there was any fear in his mind, it was assuredly not on account of harm that he imagined might befall himself; rather he feared lest Nineveh might repent, and hence the destruction. He wanted it blotted out; the sins of its inhabitants had become abominable; let the penalty fall! He had no wish to see Nineveh spared over Israel through God's mercy. Such is the folly of man's wisdom! God's reasoning is not so. When the Jews reject, the Gentiles are given an opportunity to receive. Israel had sinned away all the overtures of grace, and now the story of Infinite Love must find more obedient hearers. It is God's love, being his essential nature, that himself, can not be bounded. Even when sinful hearts obstruct its flow in one direction it finds other channels through which to send its stream of blessings.

II.—HIS OMISSION OF DUTY.

Some deny the authenticity of the conversation reported to have been held between Eve and Satan. One of the points of the tempter was, "Ye shall know as God." Now the question for such deniers is: Whence, then, does the presumption in man that he was as much as God? Evidently Jonah's action was based on the ground (how weak!) that his opinion did not accord with that of his Maker. He could not sympathize with God's message of grace. He evinced very much the same spirit of sectarianism as that which prompted Peter's action in refusal to the call to Cornelius. As Peter had not sought for mercy, Jonah was unwilling that any other nation should obtain it. Indeed, when the Ninevites repented, and the punishment was averted, he frankly confessed that he was willing to die. Can it not truly said that he who seeks to limit God's favor in regard to others must unfeignedly, by this very action, deprive his own heart of the full treasury of grace? But God's plans are not to be defeated by the whims and foilies of men. Of a truth, it is much better that we should be "willing instruments;" but if otherwise, he has ordained that the "wrath of man shall praise him." The prophet thought to defeat his office; but God overruled it to his glory. Jonah not only was instrumental in saving the city; but he was the means of converting a whole boat-load of Phenician sailors. Thus God brings good out of seeming evil.

In refusing to obey God, Jonah had embarked on the road of sin; like every traveler on that way, "he paid his fare." Were the few pieces of money paid for passage all that the trip cost Jonah? What about his loss of communion with God, which always characterizes a failure to discharge his commands? Did it not also oost him the peace of mind? Can a man be in rebellion against God and maintain a loyal spirit? So every sinner pays his fare and never fails of his destination. Jonah's sin received a just and ordinary punishment. A part of the penalty was the humiliation to which he was subjected. He, a prophet of the true God, had refused to exercise pity for the Ninevites; but the heathen sailors, upon his avowal of guilt, were permitting in their efforts to rescue him. It must have been galling to one of Jonah's proud spirit to be pitied by the poor heathens! The other punishment need not be dwelt upon.

Nineveh did repent; but it is significant that Jonah repented first. No one can preach repentance, unless he be truly repentant!

Oh! the lesson of Jonah's life, when will we learn it? For twenty-five centuries it has been in reach of the world; from beginning to end it preaches from the text, "Keep the commandments." Have we learned the lesson designed to be conveyed?

Mississippi Items.

The firemen of Ocean Springs have donated a lot of ground for a public school-building.

The recent cold spell did great damage to the fruit and early vegetable crops in all parts of Mississippi.

Carrollton has a new brick plant, which cost $15,000, and is capable of turning out 60,000 bricks every day.

The Water Valley Building and Loan Association now has loans outstanding to the amount of $17,600, all well secured.

Bay St. Louis will have an ice factory in operation by the twentieth of this month, and electric lights shining by May 4.

The Knights of Pythias recently laid the corner-stone of the new town hall in Magnolia with appropriate and impressive ceremonies.

The Mississippian has severed its official relation to the State Alliance by resigning its position as the official organ of that body.

A big fire recently destroyed the planing mill and dry-houses at Eastabuchie, and the loss is estimated at $60,000; insurance, $50,000.

The Magnolia people are discussing the prospects of an ice factory and a steam laundry and a tile factory; all of which are good things to have in a town.

The Agricultural College, at Starkville, has commenced buildings for the mechanical department, Young Men's Christian Association and societies' halls.

The Grand Lodge of Masons has entered upon the work of creating a fund for the establishment and endowment of a Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Home.

The Lincoln County Alliance has adopted strong resolutions indorsing prohibition, agreeing not to support any man for office who will not pledge himself to do all he can against the liquor traffic.

The Mississippi Press Association will meet at Yazoo City, Wednesday, May 12. Hon. Jas. A. Barksdale will deliver the citizens' address of welcome, which will be responded to by Edgar Wilson, editor of the Mississippian.

According to the Clarion-Ledger, Jackson is coming to be quite a manufacturing city. Agricultural implements of various kinds; steam engines, boilers, etc.; oils; fertilizers; sash, doors, and blinds; mattresses and brooms; meal and feed stuffs; wagons and harness are all manufactured in the city on the Pearl.

The Democrat-Star, referring to Scranton, says:

Large shipments of lumber and timber are being continually made, over 3,200,000 feet clearing from this port for the week ending March 27.

This dispatch is from Meridian:

The brick work of the new Southern Hotel is about completed and the New Orleans contractors will at once begin putting on the roof. The contract for plumbing was let to Birmingham parties, who are now working on the fifth floor.

The prosperity of the South Vicksburg Methodist Church, in view especially of the zeal and energy displayed by the congregation and its pastor, is pleasant to record. Already its little edifice is crowded at every service and it has been decided to build a larger one at the earliest possible date.—Herald.

The Vicksburg Herald has this:

In making excavations for the cast retaining wall of the new hotel, the workmen recently dug up, at a considerable depth below the surface, a brick of a very antique pattern and entirely different from those in use at the present day. It was taken from soil that had apparently not been disturbed at any previous time, at least for generations past. Experts say that no brick of its dimensions is now made and are disposed to believe that it is a relic of the old French or Spanish domination. It is four inches thick, four and a half inches wide, and ten and a half long, with a beveled corner, slightly rounded at the end.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

Louisiana Notes.

Rapides parish has a Colored Farmers' Union.

It is said that the voting strength of the Farmers' Union of St. Landry parish is 2,500.

Plaquemine has now an ice factory in operation which turns out twenty tons of ice per day.

The Natchitoches Ice Company has made a beginning. The factory has a capacity of three tons daily.

A terrific cyclone passed through the southern portion of Claiborne parish recently, making havoc all along its path.

The late cold weather has seriously affected the fruit prospects and injured the early vegetable crop all through Louisiana.

Dallas, Texas, capitalists have subscribed $500,000 to the Dallas and Alexandria railroad. It is believed that the road will be built.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of citizens of Rapides parish was recently held in Alexandria to take into consideration the railroad project between that place and Dallas, Texas. The meeting passed resolutions favoring the scheme.

Farmerville citizens are endeavoring to procure means to secure a fire engine—a most needful piece of machinery for every town. We hope those good people will succeed. We know a preacher who had his residence burned in that same town.

The local papers say that Shreveport is on the march of improvement. Several mammoth business houses are in progress, and residences and other buildings are being constructed. The summer months promise to be active ones for contractors and builders.

Lake Charles is also to have a sugar refinery. The American says: "We may expect that within a few days work will begin on this important enterprise, which marks the beginning of an era of great prosperity for Lake Charles and Southwest Louisiana."

The New Iberia and Vermillion Railroad Company, with a capital stock of $300,000, has been organized for the purpose of building a road between New Iberia and Abbeville. The proposition to levy a five-mill tax in aid of the enterprise will be submitted to the people of that section, May 12.

Capt. J. N. Pharr, whose public spirit is well known and whose temperance principles and active work in that line have done much good in his section, recently built and donated a temperance hall in Morgan City. It was dedicated last week, and among the interested temperance workers present were the four ladies who came on to New Iberia—Mrs. Mary Goodale, Mrs. Caroline Merrick, Mrs. Dr. Lyons and Mrs. Capt. J. N. Pharr.

Webster parish has a population of about 12,500, one-fifth of which is the increase since 1880. Twenty-five per cent. increase in ten years is a splendid showing for our parish, for not a dozen parishes in the State can proudly boast of such a gain in population.—Webster Signal.

Never before has a more brilliant future been presented to Franklin. With little or no enterprise a bank has been projected and almost established. A large barrel factory almost a certainty. An ice factory has been built and will be doing business in a few days. The largest sugar mill in the world has been built and successfully operated here.—St. Mary Banner.

The Bossier Banner thus compliments our pastor at Bellevue:

Rev. R. S. Collier preached two able and interesting sermons at this place last Sunday morning and night. Subject of morning sermon: "Render, therefore, unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's."

The Telegraph-Bulletin, Monroe, has this paragraph in regard to our Epworth League at that place:

The Epworth League, a recent religious and charitable organization in our midst, is growing in interest and membership rapidly. Great interest is manifested in its weekly meetings, and much good may result from its workings among the needy, both in soul and body, among our people.

When things are at their worst, 'tis said,
Then luck will change, and what we dread
Will have its termination.
But this remark, though very true,
If you are ill, don't seem to you,
To have much application.

But it does, just the same; and here's some encouragement to help you out of this morbid state of mind:

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I was entirely cured of neuralgia by the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment." Mrs. G. W. VALENTINE, New Douglas, Ill., July 30, 1889. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I have found relief in neuralgia and hay fever by the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment." D. C. CHAPMAN, Jr., 92 Sixth Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I have used your Compound Oxygen Treatment and believe it to be the finest tonic for general debility I ever used." WITHERS ADICK, Yorkville, S. C., April 15, 1889.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment four years ago for bronchial trouble and extreme debility. As a consequence, all that is remedied." MRS. M. G. ATCHESON, DuBois, Pa., May 3, 1889.

That's good evidence; but there's heaps more in a 200-page book that will be sent to you FREE OF CHARGE if you will send your name and address to DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangement are frequently taken without the least effect, because it is the liver which is the real source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. Mercury, in some form, is a common specific for a sluggish liver; but a far safer and more effective medicine is Ayer's Pills.

For loss of appetite, bilious troubles, constipation, indigestion, and sick headache, these Pills are unsurpassed.

"For a long time I was a sufferer from stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, experiencing much difficulty in digestion, with severe pains in the lumbar region and other parts of the body. Having tried a variety of remedies, including warm baths, with only temporary relief, about three months ago I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and my health is so much improved that I gladly testify to the superior merits of this medicine."—Manuel Jorge Pereira, Porto, Portugal.

"For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most effective medicine I ever used."—R. K. James, Dorchester, Mass.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Barnwellville, Va.

"I have found in Ayer's Pills, an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these Pills on the liver, restoring its natural powers, and aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons."—C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas.

Act Well

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again."—A. J. Kiser, Jr., Rock House, Va.

"In 1858, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."—H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Thursday, April 16, 1891.

Briefs.

The Vicksburg preachers' meeting, last week, had an interesting time talking on "Giving as an Act of Worship." The discussion was participated in by several, and proved of so much interest that it was agreed to continue the subject at the next meeting. Meantime an invitation will be given to the business men of the churches to be present and participate in the further discussion of this interesting theme. The meeting is preparing to inaugurate a mission movement in behalf of classes who never attend church services.

Between the concert saloons defying the law, and the petitions of bundreds of respectable men and women asking for their abatement, our mayor is kept in hot water. He has the legal authority to close those places every night at 12 o'clock. The citizens have petitioned him to use that authority, and he wants to shift his responsibility to the city council. Of all the pitiable spectacles in this world a vacillating and weak executive is the most pitiable. Don't the mayor know that it is a greater responsibility to shift responsibility than it is to use it? Let the mayor show his courage, and the people will stand up to him. The people always stand up to manly manhood.

We are indebted to our friend, Dr. Carradine, of Saint Louis, for a copy of his "Journey to Palestine." The book is gotten up in good style by C. B. Woodward Printing and Book Company, and is for sale by J. W. Lowrance, 1404 Lucas Place, Saint Louis, and the price is one dollar and a half. The book contains all the letters published in this paper and in the St. Louis and Nashville Christian Advocates, with about 140 pages of additional matter. From Dr. Carradine's first letter to our readers from abroad we have insisted that no traveler ever wrote more interesting letters. We say the same thing now. If you want something fresh and sparkling with wit and dripping with genuine piety—a book that will make you see just what the writer sees—you will procure this book. The first thing you will see is a good likeness of the author, and if you can pass that, you are safe.

There is one thing that Italian trouble has done which promises something good. Almost the entire press of the country has had something to say in regard to the immigration laws. It is found out, at last, that through the looseness of these laws and their slack administration our country has become the "dumping ground for all the discontented and undesirable elements" of all the rest of the world. The "asylum for all nations" is filling up too fast with the refuse of Europe. The criminals and fugitives from justice come faster than the honest and respectable. The papers in all sections are calling for a halt before we are completely overrun and destroyed. We agree with one of our secular exchanges when it says:

The time has come when vigorous measures for our protection should be enforced. For the sake of our own people we ought to limit immigration. If a man has money or brains there is room for him, but if he can't add to our national prosperity by intelligence and enterprise, we ought to tell him plainly that he had better stay where he is. Until we do take that stand and maintain it we shall be the asylum for the misfit humanity from every quarter of the globe.

Culture.

This is an age that delights to be called cultured. Men and women are ambitious to be thought of and spoken of as cultured. To be considered uncultured is too horrible to think of. This desire and ambition have led people to mistake the nature of true culture, and, mistaking its nature, they have no clear conception of the means for its attainment. It is plain to our thought that many persons who consider themselves cultured have not yet crossed the border line of culture. A "superficial refinement of manners" is not culture. An "acquaintance with the fashions of good society" is not culture. A "stock of polite phrases," having read the "best known products of literature," having the means to afford a "fashionable style of dress;" these things do not constitute culture, as many people suppose. Nor does learning constitute true culture. A man may be an adept in language and science and philosophy, and yet be uncultured. His mind may be crammed with all sorts of knowledge, and yet his life may be a good exponent of barbarism. All such culture is false. It is nothing but a covering to hide the true condition of the inner nature. Its acquirement is nothing more than putting on a coat of varnish, which looks well and serves to conceal the defects within.

We do not propose to define the word "culture." We have at last learned that very few definitions define. When we have secured the best definition of a word, then, lo! we must find out the meaning of the definition. So without defining the word "culture," we will say that a cultured man is he in whom all the faculties are so roundly developed that he fits perfectly in his niche in the temple of humanity, and fulfills the great purpose of his creation. In seeking to be cultured, then, two questions arise, viz.: Where is my place? What is the purpose of life? Only the other day we heard a great preacher declare in the pulpit that every man's place was assigned him by the gracious providence of God—that he was there by God's authority, and his highest life was reached only as he met the obligations resulting from the relations of that place to the general relations of life.

Here is a great truth which men frequently overlook. My place in the world is where the providence of God assigns me. If, as Paul declared to the Athenians, God has "determined the bounds of the habitation" of nations, so he has determined the "habitation" of individuals. Wherever a Christian is, he is there by special appointment of God, and specially charged to work out his destiny from that point. So, then, the first question is answered. Our place is found. We are in it today.

The other question is most important. Having found my place, what is the purpose or end of my life in that place? What is man's true destination? The answer will reveal to us true culture. The purpose, the end, the aim of all true life is God himself. "God is the eternal prototype." God, as manifested to the world in the man Jesus, is the only pattern given by imitation of which the great end of life may be reached. The man who reads the Gospels carefully sees that while Christ was in actual touch with all the forms of life about him, yet in refinement of mind, in purity of spirit, he was infinitely above them all. Every man feels that in Christ culture was perfected. Now, the whole trend of Scripture teaching is, that every man shall put himself under the influence of those agencies which will stamp his whole nature with the likeness of Christ. In the front of revelation stands the declaration that God made man in his own image, and no imagination can conceive of a more magnificent dignity. This revelation of the dignity in which man was created sets forth to man fallen from that high estate the purpose of life—the aim of culture. Likeness to God is that purpose and aim. So, then, true culture is, in scientific language, a "reversion to the original type," and Christ's religion is its source and exponent. Culture in its highest and best and only true sense is impossible apart from the religion of Christ.

A Spring Visit to the Country.

Following the illustrious example set by King Solomon, we have for several years been making annual spring visits to the country. These visits have always produced the keenest pleasure. We have learned that one whiff of pure, sweet country spring air is worth a thousand quaffs of thick city atmosphere, and, going through the lungs, it reddens the blood and diffuses new life through the whole physical man. One day in the country, breathing the pure atmosphere and drinking the crystal water and listening to the happy birds, is worth a score of days spent in the rumble of a great city. This year we were peculiarly fortunate in the selection of a place to visit. Last Saturday we slipped up to Brookhaven and spent the Sabbath in that delightful little city. We found Bro. Huntley in the midst of a kind and thoughtful people. He and family are happily located in the new parsonage, which is a beautiful little cottage and well-furnished. Bro. Woodward, the enterprising presiding elder, showed us through the district parsonage now in course of erection. It is well located and will be a delightful home for the head-man and head-woman of the district. Our friends at Whitworth College have had a successful session and are diligently preparing to have a most brilliant commencement in June. We found our friend, Prof. Ricketts, in the midst of his fruit trees and vines meditating on the important topic, "Catching Doodles." We had a most delightful communion service administered by the presiding elder, and a pleasant and profitable love-feast in the evening. Our visit ended at three o'clock, Monday morning, and we stole away under cover of darkness, and by half-past eight were in the ADVOCATE office. In the strength and vitality obtained by means of this visit we will go many days. Blessed be the country!—God made it.

The First Thing First.

A great many people act as if those things were of first importance which are really only of secondary importance. The first thought of the world is money. There is nothing so important as money. The absorbing topic of thought—the engrossing theme of conversation—the center around which all the labor of the world revolves is money. It has become in the mind of the world a matter of first importance to get and to hold and to heap up money. The idea is prevalent to-day as much as ever, and more, that "money answereth all things." From such a starting-point the back is turned upon everything else, and nothing is seen or desired or hoped for or labored for except money. Ingenuity is taxed to its utmost and labor expends all its energies to get money. Mental agony and physical weariness are bravely endured to make money. Money occupies the thoughts by day and fills up the dreams by night. Surely a visitor from another realm would say, "Men are mad." What is strange is, that all this labor of mind and body is for a thing that perishes with the using; something that can not last, and never does satisfy the yearnings of the soul.

This manner of life and labor is utterly contrary to the fundamental law of life and labor and, therefore, defeats itself. It engenders and cultivates to the highest degree the passion of "covetousness, which is idolatry." An idolater is the basest and most degraded of all human beings. This sort of worship, like all worship, grows and gets stronger and binds the worshipper with chains that can not be broken, and in the end shuts him out of heaven. The Scriptures catalogue this sin with murder and adultery, and yet the world will not see the debasing companionship.

The difficulty at the bottom of such life and labor is that men lose sight of first things. They try to put secondary things in the place of first things. This is a reversal of nature's order, and of God's order, and of Christ's teachings, and brings inevitable ruin. The first thing to every man's life and to every man's labor is Christ. The first thing to every man's love and to every man's devotion is Christ. The first duty is to seek the kingdom of God; to seek to find a place in it, and then seek to place it in reach of every other man. Jesus said: "Seek first the kingdom of God, and other things will be added." This is the only law of life and labor, and, for that reason, the only way to peace and contentment. To reverse God's order of things is to invite disquiet and open the way downward to perpetual discord. To accept his order of things and live and labor in it brings peace of soul and opens the way upward to eternal felicity. Let first things be first, and everything else will fall into its proper place, and God's approbation will be secured, and the pathway will grow brighter until it ends in the never-fading sunlight of an unending day in the mansions above.

Who Will Help?

Colportage work without a benevolent feature is imperfect. Provision should be made for the gratuitous distribution of the Holy Scriptures, religious tracts, etc., where they will do good, and especially among the poor.

The colporteur often meets with people who are unable to buy Bibles and other good reading matter, but who would appreciate and be benefitted by reading the same. Hundreds of instances are on record of souls being enlightened and saved by a Bible, Testament or tract prayerfully and timely given.

The colporteur often yearns to do more on this line of benevolence among the lost and destitute than he is financially able to do; and this, notwithstanding the fact that a Bible may be had for twenty cents and upward, and a New Testament for five cents and upward, and tracts at the rate of one hundred pages for ten cents.

There are thousands of tracts on the shelves of our Publishing House, carefully prepared and neatly printed; in various styles and sizes from the leaflet to the large pamphlet, and suited to all conditions of life. Some of the classifications are: "The Unawakened," "The Penitent," "The Convert," "For Parents," "For Young People," "For Methodists," "The Bible," "The Sabbath," "Temperance," "Sunday-schools," etc.

These tracts lying on the shelves are useless, but, put in circulation, they will be productive of incalculable good in "advancing the cause of Christianity and disseminating religious knowledge." Therefore, they should be sown broadcast over these lands. A few dollars expended judiciously each month would, during the year, put scores of Bibles and Testaments and thousands of religious tracts into innumerable hands and homes. The sowing thus made would result in an early harvest of converted souls and intelligent Christians. Who will help us do this work in North Mississippi? Who will give me a contribution of any amount for this cause? How many will send me their orders for tracts or books to be used in their church, Sunday-school or home? Whose will the first name on the list of the North Mississippi Tract Society? Address me at Kosciusko, Miss.

G. W. BACHMAN,
Colporteur and Sunday-School Agent.

The Epworth League Course.

ENDORSEMENT OF BISHOP GALLOWAY.

The following note from Bishop Galloway to Rev. W. D. Dominick, general colporteur for the Mississippi Conference, in regard to the course of reading adopted for our Epworth Leagues, shows that the Bishop heartily commends it. Bro. Dominick is located at Jackson, Miss., and will take pleasure in supplying the demands of the Methodist Leagues with the course, and will supply also all other calls for good and pure literature.

Dear Brother: I have examined the Epworth League books you kindly submitted for my review and heartily commend the selections made and the handsome style in which they have been printed. Our Publishing House has done itself credit in this series of volumes. It is to be hoped that these books will be extensively read, not only by Epworth Leaguers, but by our people generally, and thus become familiar with the scriptural teachings and inspiring history of our Methodism. Truly and fraternally,

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

A Waking Dream.

MR. EDITOR: Will you pardon a waking dream? A scene laid in the future: One is being shown through the buildings of Millsaps College. "This, sir, is Prayer Room. In this large apartment devotional literature is kept. The many smaller screened apartments you see are for secret prayer. The room and the fund by which it is maintained is called the George W. Shaeffer Memorial Room and Fund." May it be more than a dream! Fraternally,

D. S. HEARON.

Another act of intolerance shown by certain ministers of the Episcopal Church in New York has brought merited rebuke from many quarters. Two ministers, Dr. Newton and Dr. Rainsford, of that church, have become guilty of an unpardonable sin, because they invited non-Episcopal ministers to speak in their churches. For this offense a great cry is raised against them. Such intolerance is out of harmony with the spirit of the gospel and of this enlightened age, and does religion an immense harm. Read the paragraph below from the New York Herald, and see how secular eyes look upon such action:

Two clergymen, who have the respect and love of the world, wish to convert, help, cheer and bless the great body of this community; willing to use all means which the Master would approve were he here, they beg some good men and true to come into their churches and plead the great cause. Objection is at once raised that nobody is to be converted, except in the regulation way. By protest it is intimated that unless men and women are converted by purely Episcopalian methods it is better to let them die in their sins.

Dr. Hoss, editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, is to preach the commencement sermon at Whitworth College. Dr. J. D. Cameron, of the North Mississippi Conference, is to preach the annual sermon for the Y. M. C. A., and Dr. Morrison, Missionary Secretary, is to deliver the annual address. If that program don't suit you, you better "take to the woods."

Notes.

A word to you, reador. Look at the label on your paper and see if you are in arrears for subscription. Why? Because we heard the publisher say the other day that he intended to cut off delinquents pretty soon if they did not pay up. Now, you can't afford to be without this paper; can you?

An exchange has the following which is good enough to be repeated:

A large amount of the present-day preaching . . . is too dainty. The devil does not care how much of it goes on; it hurries up nobody. . . it is so calm, and writes down its little wordies on a paper and roads them off, and never lifts its little voice nor breaks its little rules and proprieties so correct and so thoughtful, and so refined, while Lot is going to the devil.

It may tickle the ungodly to hear the pastors and leading church members publicly ridiculed, and may cause them for the time being to praise the evangelist as a wise and bravo preacher, but for the popularity and applause thus gained, the Church of God must suffer fearfully and for long years to come. In our humble opinion it is very unfortunate, that some, possibly most evangelists are noted for their depreciating criticisms upon preachers in the pastorate; for this unwise habit may in many cases produce incalculable damage to the cause of religion.—Arkansas Methodist.

The life of Christ is the exhaustless fountain whence the preacher is to draw his supplies for pulpit and pastoral work. Paul was wise in his determination to "know nothing among you but Christ." Peter was wise in his exhortation to "grow in the knowledge of Christ." The preacher who knows Christ, in the Scriptural meaning of that word, has an inexhaustible storehouse from which to draw. If the preaching is Christo-centric, there will never be a lack of fresh gospel themes.

The successful minister is not always the man who has the largest church, nor the man whose praises are on everybody's lips. The successful minister may not be very extensively known; he may not be very learned or eloquent; but he wins sinners to Christ and strengthens believers in their faith and encourages them in their work of love. And he is successful because he aims at success. The successful ministers do not achieve success by accident; they do it on purpose. They have faith in God and in themselves.

We are willing to work, but we are fastidious about it. We are ready for the high, but not for the lowly place. We are not ready to take hold anywhere. And yet it is only to such loyal spirits that the Master can entrust the interests of his kingdom. The worldly ambition that would have its own way and make its own choice utterly unfits us for true service. The plain truth should be spoken, and the humiliating lesson learned, that as we rise in our own estimation we decline in that of the Master. We think ourselves above such work, but he thinks us beneath it; while the reassuring truth comes to all humble, loyal hearts that true honor is in simple obedience.—Southern Christian Advocate.

A young brother in Mississippi writes as follows: "I make it a practice to write a few pages on some question almost every week, and occasionally I send it to some editor, never feeling very badly if I never hear from it. But you know we feel good when our contributions come before the public." That brother is pursuing a good plan. Bacon said, "Writing makes the exact man;" and writers should cultivate exactness. Dr. Adam Clarke's advice to young preachers was, "Always have something on the anvil." Such a plan persistently pursued will insure facility and accuracy in the use of words, and that is a good thing.

One can avoid a great deal of mental suffering by a resolute exercise of the will, aided by the reasoning faculties. If you find yourself irritated and unhappy—and with fairly good reasons for being so—take hold of yourself by the collar, and set yourself down hard, and say to yourself, "Well, what of it? Supposing that it is so, how long will it be so? What difference will it make at a short time from now? A good night's sleep will dissipate the most of it. If not, you will soon become accustomed to it. If nothing else will remedy it, death will, and that is not far away. Why should I allow the brief time that I have to be happy in this life to be turned to misery? I will not do it. I will not permit myself to be fretted and chafed and embittered." Then go and dash cold water over your head, and take hold of some sort of work.—Interior.

There is one kind of grace that is very much needed among church people. We do not recollect, however, that we ever heard anybody pray for it. It is that grace that will enable us to differ with people, and yet not get mad with them. The grace to differ and yet preserve a sweet disposition is the difference, is, we think, rare. People can't think alike, or don't, and then comes the intolerant spirit. Our Lord knew how hard it would be for his people to agree on many things, and he did not condition his blessing on such agreement. But if they did happen to agree on one thing, then would his presence be manifested. He don't expect us to agree on many things; but we think he will bestow grace to help us to differ in love and sweetness of disposition. How beautiful, yet how rare is such grace!

Personal and Otherwise.

Dr. J. B. Walker has improved the past week too slowly to allow him to take his contemplated trip to the country.

It is a very just rebuke to the American press that in England there are 182 daily papers, and not one issues a Sunday edition.

You may not believe it, but we make the assertion that a faithful minister of the gospel is the happiest man outside of heaven.

Two women have been elected police judges in Kansas. Criminals in the towns where those judges hold forth will lie low, no doubt.

W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, has been elected professor of mental and moral philosophy and civics in the Louisiana State University.

The grand jury of Dallas, Texas, found 125 indictments against P. P. Martinez, agent of the Louisiana Lottery Company. That's right. Put him through.

Rev. Davis Sessums, rector of Christ Church, in this city, has been elected Assistant Bishop of the diocese of Louisiana. He is a native of Texas, and thirty-two years old.

All Sunday-school superintendents should supply their schools with Children's Day programmes at once. Bro. Van Valkenburgh has a large supply. Sixty cents per hundred by mail.

We acknowledge the receipt of the program of the commencement exercises at Whitworth College, June 7, 8 and 9; also an invitation to be present. The program contains some big names, from which we argue there will be a big time.

Rev. Dr. H. C. Morrison, Missionary Secretary, called at the ADVOCATE office Monday evening, en route homeward from Texas. He said he was much encouraged by the zealous response with which the Texas brethren met his appeals. At Waco, Austin, Houston, Paris and Greenville, he raised $3,145—enough money to support four missionaries. This amount exceeded the assessments $2,189. Dr. Morrison stated that he was satisfied the results could have been realized at every important city in Texas if time had permitted his remaining.

We have received the program for the fifth convention of Y. M. C. A. of Mississippi, which meets in Natchez, April 23. The citizens will entertain the members of the convention in their usual handsome style, and the railroads will give the usual reduction of one and one-third fare for the round trip. When the ticket is purchased, get a certificate that you paid full faro, and you will get a return ticket for one-third. The program is very attractive. The address will be by Dr. Gray, of Hazlehurst. Papers will be read by Dr. Jones, of the University of Mississippi; Major Millsaps, of Jackson; J. D. Laumaster, general secretary, Memphis, Tenn.; Hon. R. F. Reed, Natchez; H. Richardson, Vicksburg; and a daily Bible reading by Rev. W. F. Erdman, D. D., Asheville, N. C. Such a program ought to attract and, doubtless, will.

Mothers, if your boys come in lame from their games, bathe in Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. T. W. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., writes: "I have made 200 pastoral visits to date and filled all my appointments except two Sunday nights. Wife has been very sick, but is now some better. Sickness has greatly hindered me in my work here. The Lord has blessed us in many ways, especially with a host of good friends."

—Rev. T. B. White writes from Colfax, La.: "Our meeting for the promotion of holiness at this place continued with unabated interest for fifteen days. Quite a number of brethren were here in the spirit of the blessed Master. Many could not come for lack of money, etc. A fine religious tone and spirit is in the town and community. All the cardinal doctrines of salvation were stressed. By gentleness and in love the special doctrine and experience of sanctification was presented with effectiveness. What a quiet, sweet meeting! Bro. Lively, of Marshall, Texas, stayed several days, and by his gentle and persuasive speech and demeanor won so many Christ-ward. I praise the Lord."

—Rev. E. L. Rawls writes from Westville, Miss.: "Our work has been greatly retarded by excessive rains. It is raining at this time. The spiritual interests of the people are behind as a natural sequence of the fact that they are behind the times in the material work of the year. Farm work is, at least, a month later than usual. We have a good, hospitable people on this work, yet "one thing thou lackest." We need more religion here. Our prayer is, "O Lord, revive thy work!" We have a union meeting at this place (Westville) now in progress. As yet no visible results. The weather is against us. Oh! that the Spirit of God would be poured out upon this people as the clouds pour out water! There are seven appointments on the work. The pastor in charge has a monthly ride of 125 or 130 miles to reach his appointments. We are hoping and praying for a gracious year. Success to the ADVOCATE. Will send some names soon."

Rev. D. P. Bradford writes from Forest and Morton charge: "We feel that we are making some progress on this work. Last Fall the people of Morton bought a parsonage, paying for it without any help from the other two churches. This being the center of the work, it was thought best to buy here. Our Sunday-school of Morton has met the obligation of the pastor for $10 for special missionary from the Mississippi Conference. We buried one of our members from this church last Tuesday, Mrs. A. S. Page, after a long spell, in which she was a great sufferer until the Master called her. She was in the bloom of young womanhood, and leaves a sad husband and two sweet little girls. Our church at Pelahatchie is still going up-grade. Bro. Hatch, of the Baptist Church, spent a week there recently, and the community was made better by his visit. Last Sunday when I opened the door (not doors) of the church we had five accessions. In addition to other improvements, they have ordered a new organ. At Forest there has been a good deal of sickness. A few weeks ago we hurled our oldest member, Bro. J. P. Clarke, who for sixty-three years walked by the side of her who now mourns his death. Not a demonstrative man, but a true, good man, Bro. Wooten, long a steward of that church, has been confined to his room for two months. We are anxious about him. Some of our young people of Forest will forbid my saying that we have no dancing by church members. May God deliver us from this curse! Salary paid by the month."

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Announcement.

The annual Scottsville Camp Meeting, in connection with the Harrison circuit, East Texas Conference, will embrace August 11 to 21. Reduced rates over the T. and P. R. R. from all points in Louisiana and Texas will be secured. Other converging lines we hope will do the same. Though the attendance will be greatly increased, we hope to provide for the comfort of all. Our aim is to make the visit as inexpensive as possible to all our friends. Homes will be furnished all from a distance free. A commodious Visitors' Home is under way. Our pavilion is to be enlarged, and every convenience is to be arranged. One or more extra trains will be furnished us from Mars' Hill to Shreveport.

We expect the services of Dr. W. B. Godbey, of Kentucky; Dr. B. Carradine, of St. Louis; Thomas Leitch, of South Carolina, and many others. Our aim is the spreading of scriptural holiness.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction in all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

To the Woman's Missionary Societies of Winona District, North Mississippi Conference:

Our annual meeting for the Winona district will be held at Lexington, on Thursday, May 7, beginning at ten o'clock A. M. The secretaries of the different societies will please send the names of delegates elected to Rev. J. C. Lowe, at once, in order that he may provide for their entertainment.

MOLLIE G. STREATER,
Dist. Sec'y.

I will (D. V.) attend meetings as follows: Sam Jones' meeting, Aberdeen, April 19, and week following. District Conference, at Coffeeville, May 1; Lexington, May 8; Clarksdale, May 15; Shuqualak, May 28; Amary, July 3; where I will have on hand a good stock of books. I hope the presiding elders will arrange a programme for a Sunday-school Conference in connection with each District Conference, as provided in the Discipline.

G. W. BACHMAN,
Colp. and S. S. Agent, North Miss. Conf.

To the Delegates of the Brandon District Conference, to Convene at Hickory, May 27-30:

When you buy ticket get certificate from agent that you paid full fare going, and this certificate, when signed by secretary of Conference, will entitle holders to tickets for return at one-third fare. I hope all delegates will come. We will take good care of you. Trains on which delegates come arrive 2:48 P. M. and 8:02 P. M. It will be better to come on Wednesday. If you wait until Thursday, you will miss the opening service. Come prepared to stay over until Monday.

Mr. Editor, we want you to come.

J. M. MORSE.
Newton, Miss.

To the Preachers of the Winona District, North Mississippi Conference—

Please write me the names of the local preachers and the names of the delegates-elect to the District Conference. I desire also that those who are coming by private conveyance notify me of this fact. If the Woman's District Missionary Society is to meet here the day before the Conference, as it did at Valden last year, I desire and request immediate notice, and the names of those who are coming.

J. C. LOWE.
Lexington, Miss.

P. S.—If any of the preachers or delegates find that they can not come, they will please notify me. It would give us pleasure to have the editor with us.

J. C. L.

To the Members of the District Conference, Winona District, North Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Bishop Galloway appointed our District Conference to convene on May 8. Let the pastors all be present with their reports in full. Let the recording stewards be present with their Quarterly Conference journals for examination. Let the Sabbath-school superintendents be present, ready for a thorough investigation of their work. We hope to give part of Saturday to this enterprise of the church. I do hope all the local preachers in the district will be present with reports of their work.

Brethren, let us come together in the spirit of the Master. Why not have a revival of religion on that occasion?

The second Quarterly Conference for West circuit will be held June 3; the Ethel circuit, June 5.

Brethren, remember the Quarterly Conference means the payment of one-fourth of the preacher's salary. Let the churches note this and govern themselves accordingly.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach, it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery glides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Price $1.50. A Good Cyclopedia.

"The COLUMBIAN CYCLOPEDIA seems to me to strike a happy medium between the loose, superficial works and the too elaborate and profound ones, which few are competent or desirous of using. Most of the larger general cyclopedias are overloaded with a mass of technical science and official detail that is embarrassing and useless to ordinary readers. The COLUMBIAN is eminently practical, sufficiently full, and carefully compiled, well got up, convenient in form and extent, remarkably cheap, and, as I should judge, admirably adapted to families and general consultation. I think that if properly presented to the public, it will have a very wide sale, and be an exceedingly useful work. There is ample room in the market for a Cyclopedia like this, which combines, likewise, the advantage of being an excellent Dictionary of the English Language."—PROF. JAMES STRONG, S. T. OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE GRASSHOPPER'S CROQUET.

BY MALCOLM DOUGLAS.

Four little grasshoppers, one fine day,
Hopped on the lawn to play croquet.
"We can't use mallets and balls," one said,
"But we'll play a game of our own, instead;
We'll hop through the wickets ourselves and see Whether I beat you or you beat me."
So hippity-hop they went around
Through all the wickets upon the ground.
Till the one who was leading made a jump
And hit the home stake—bumptity-bump!
Then out came Johnny and Bess to play;
And the four little grasshoppers hopped away.

MR. EDITOR: Both sides of the scales have got to stay down; so just throw my letter into the side with the poor ones if it is not good. I always enjoy reading the ADVOCATE. After reading what it had to say about the Little Worker, I wrote to Miss Steward, and subscribed, and am glad that I did, for it is a good paper. I hear so many people talking about planting corn, that I believe I will ask, How many of the young people who read the ADVOCATE have seen an ear of corn having an uneven number of rows of grains on the cob? A friend of mine placed a piece of cloth round an ear of corn, basted a bag just as close to the ear as the needle could go, then shelled the corn, put all the grains back in the bag and I was surprised to see that the bag was as full without the cob as it had been when I saw the corn on the cob in the bag. A well-formed ear of corn will do this every time. I hope I. Smith will write another funny letter. If any of the little readers will send me a piece beginning, "This is the king's garden; this is the gate to the king's garden; this is the key to the gate to the king's garden;" I will send, "This is the house that Jack built;" or if they will send it in a little letter to the ADVOCATE, I will send, "This is the house that Jack built," in a little letter; and, if the editor will publish them, all the little ADVOCATE readers who have forgotten them can learn them over again. I am anxious to get these pastimes to paste in my scrap-book.

Your true friend,

MAY MIXER.

Big Cane, La.

MR. EDITOR: I want to be a member of the little cousins' corner, so I will write to-day. I am a little boy ten years old. I am quite small for my age. I have two sisters older than myself. I have two brothers. I love my sisters and brothers very much. I go to school every day. I am learning very fast. I have to say speeches right often. We are going to organize our Sunday-school as soon as the weather moderates. The weather has been so very bad that we could not go to church or Sunday-school either. We have not seen our new preacher yet, as the weather has been so bad. His name is Bro. Skipper. If my letter does not find its way to the waste-basket, I may write again soon. I will close by asking a question: Who was Melchisedec? Wishing the ADVOCATE and little cousins much success, I am,

Your little friend,

HARRISON HAYS.

Hope, Miss.

[That is the hardest question any of the cousins have asked yet? We hope some of them will answer it.—EDITOR.]

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl twelve years old. As I have never seen a letter from my neighborhood, I thought I would write a short one. Papa is a farmer, and he is not able to do scarcely anything but attend to his apiary. I have six brothers, and all have a sister each, making seven in all. I am a member of the M. E. Church, South. Conference sent back to us our same preacher; his name is Bro. B. H. Rawls. We like him very much. He is such a good man. I will close by asking a question: How old was Seth when he died?

LILLIE B. DAWKINS

Shady Grove, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I live in Water Valley and attend the school, also the Wood Street Methodist Sunday-school. Our preacher for this year is Bro. T. W. Dye, and for the past two years Bro. J. M. Wyatt. We all loved him, especially the children. My papa is the depot agent of this place. My mama is dead. I have two sisters and one brother. My grandma lives with us and takes the ADVOCATE. We are all members of the church but one.

MR. EDITOR: I have been saying for a long time that I would write to you. I attend the E. A. S. Male College, formerly the E. A. Seminary, named after my Grandma Smith. I am in the first preparatory department. I study arithmetic, grammar, history, First Steps in Science, and spelling. There are about twenty-five in our spelling class. We have a great deal of fun playing "pulling the rope," and baseball. We have a military company in our school. Mr. Paul Jones is the captain. They play pulling the rope, baseball, and football sometimes. The other day they tied a rope to two trees, and played walking the rope with their hands. I will answer Ella E. Griggs' question: "Death in the pot" is found in II. Kings iv, 40. Now, I will ask a question: Who brought the news of the flight of the Syrians to the city of Samaria?

Your little friend,

CARTER SMITH.

Arcadia, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am a subscriber to your ADVOCATE, and saw so many nice letters from the little cousins and friends, I thought I would try and write one, too. We are having some rainy weather now. I have no pets. I have three brothers and one sister living. Two darling sisters and one brother have gone to heaven to rest, where there will be no more pain and sickness. One of my brothers is a preacher. His appointments are near Jackson this year. If this letter is printed, I will write another. I will close for fear this will be thrown in the waste-basket.

Your new friend,

MARY C. ELLIS.

P. S.—I am a member of the M. E. Church, South.

MR. EDITOR: I do not see any letters from the young folks in this part of the country; so I thought I would write to you. I live about two miles from the little village of Polkville. Bro. Miller is our pastor this year, and was also last year. We all think he is a good pastor. I think we have a good Sabbath-school here. My grandpa is our superintendent. I attend regular, and like to go. Santa Claus brought me a doll and several other little things. I do not go to school; but I wish I did, for I do love to go. I will close by asking a question: How many letters in the Bible? I remain,

Your little friend,

"What it costs" must be carefully considered by the great majority of people, in buying even necessities. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines positive economy with great medicinal power. It is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 Doses One Dollar."

Twinkle, Twinkle.

"Miss Emersonia Osgoodson will now favor the company with a recitation," announced the teacher to friends who had assembled in the school-room to enjoy the regular Friday afternoon exercises.

Little Miss Emersonia stood forth and recited as follows:

Coruscate, coruscate, diminutive stellar orb!
How inexplicable to me seems the stupendous problem of thy existence!
Elevated to such an immeasurable distance in the illimitable depths of space apparently in a perpendicular direction from the terraqueous planet we occupy!
Resembling in thy dazzling and unapproachable effulgence a crystallized carbon gem of unsurpassing brilliancy and impenetrability glittering in the ethereal vaults whose boundless immensity we endeavor to bring within the compass of the human intellectual grasp by the use of the concrete term firmament!

When the dear little Boston girl had finished reciting these touching lines, in her rapt, soulful, Bostonian way, and sat down there wasn't a dry spectacle in the school-room.—Chicago Tribune.

HOUSEHOLD.

The True Home Spirit.

The hardest questions that come to us are those that strive to settle a balance, fair and just, between our several duties. How far are we justified in excluding all outside questions from our active interest? And, still harder, how shall we decide the division of interest in the home, keeping a loving, firm touch on each? We all see homes and husbands suffer from too much housekeeping. We all know women who perceive no difference between housekeeping and homekeeping. That man whose wife knows the difference between the two professions, and chooses to belong to the first, is a fortunate man. Perhaps no question that faces a wife is harder to decide than how she shall be a perfect mother and yet a perfect wife. It is so hard for a mother to educate herself to a little wholesome neglect of her children, that she may be the companion of their father. Yet how can a man find companionship in his home if the mother of his children becomes their nurse at the expense of every other duty or pleasure?

The saddest experience that can come to any husband or wife is an acquiescent separation, and this experience is lived in too many homes. One, and sometimes both, are looking forward to the time when the first days of their married life will be lived over again; when there will be more money to hire servants, or when the children will be grown. If we could count on the future, there would be a degree of safety in trusting this future time for happiness. But death, mental growth for one and not for the other, and loss of mental power are the terrible possibilities that stand in the path of that future. Each month, yes, each day, is a link in a chain, or a bar between two souls who are interdependent for their happiness, responsible for the happiness of all who share the home or house they create.

A mother who sacrifices her husband's companionship to the children that are alike the bond and the burden of each is not a wise mother; the short-sightedness that is at the root of her misconception prevents the clear spiritual perception necessary to the true mother. The first essential in every true home is love, and it is not the quantity in the home, but the quality and disposition of it, that makes its happiness. No outer and visible bond can hold the souls of a husband and wife in unison. Companionship, close and intimate, that has in it the spiritual power to shut out every object in life at times except each other, and find heaven and God in those moments, is the only true relation between husband and wife. The children are better loved, more wisely governed, more spiritually trained, when the two souls made one by love are their guardians. That is a home rather than a house where such love is, and the children are nearer perfection when it is united force, not a divided power, that makes the law and light under which they live.—Christian Union.

GOOD MANNERS AT HOME.—The presence of good manners is nowhere more needed or more effective than in the household, and perhaps nowhere more rare. Whenever familiarity exists, there is a tendency to loosen the check upon selfish conduct which the presence of strangers involuntarily produces. Many persons who are kind and courteous in company are rude and careless with those whom they love best. Emerson says, "Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices," and certainly nothing can more thoroughly secure the harmony and peace of the family circle than the habit of making small sacrifices, one for another. Children thus learn good manners in the best and most natural way, and habits thus acquired will never leave them. Courtesy and kindliness will never lose their power or their charm, while all spurious imitations of them are to be despised.—The Republic.

"How delicious is the winning
Of a kiss, at love's beginning"— sings the poet, and his sentiment is true with one possible exception. If either party has the catarrh, even love's kiss loses its sweetness. By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing and healing properties, it cures the worst cases. $500 reward offered for an incurable case.

The Depths of the Sea.

Some very singular and interesting facts about the sea are told by a recent writer in Ocean. At the depth of about 3,500 feet, he says, waves are not felt. The temperature is the same, varying only a trifle whether lying under the ice of the pole or the burning sun of the equator, but the water is colder at the bottom than at the surface. In many bays on the coast of Norway the water often freezes at the bottom before it does above. There is a vast amount of salt in the ocean. If a box six feet wide were filled with sea water and allowed to evaporate under the sun, there would be two inches of salt left on the bottom. Taking the average depth of the ocean to be three miles, there would be a layer of pure salt 230 feet thick on the bed of the Atlantic. A most singular fact is the deceitfulness of waves. To look at them in a storm one would think the water traveled. The water stays in the same place, but the motion goes on. Sometimes in storms these waves are forty feet high and travel fifty miles an hour—more than twice as fast as the swiftest steamship. The distance from valley to valley is generally fifteen times the height; hence a wave five feet high will extend over seventy-five feet of water. The force of the sea dashing on Bell Rock is said to be seventeen tons for each square yard. Evaporation is a wonderful power in drawing the water from the sea. Every year a layer of the entire sea, fourteen feet thick, is taken up into the clouds. The winds bear their burden into the land and the water comes down in rain upon the fields, to flow back at last through rivers. The depth of the sea presents an interesting problem. If the Atlantic were lowered 6,564 feet the distance from shore to shore would be half as great, or 1,500 miles. If lowered a little more than three miles, say 19,680 feet, there would be a road of dry land from Newfoundland to Ireland. This is the plan on which the great Atlantic cables were laid. The Mediterranean is comparatively shallow. A drying up of 660 feet would leave three different seas, and Africa would be joined with Italy. The British Channel is more like a pond, which accounts for its choppy waves. It has been found difficult to get the correct soundings of the Atlantic. A midshipman of the navy overcame the difficulty, and shot weighing thirty pounds carries down the line. A hole is bored through the sinker, through which a rod of iron is passed, moving easily back and forth. In the end of the bar a cup is dug out, and the inside coated with lard. The bar is made fast to the line, and a sling holds the shot on. When the bar, which extends below the ball, touches the earth, the sling unhooks and the shot slides off. The lard in the end of the bar holds some of the sand, or whatever may be on the bottom, and a drop shuts over the cup to keep the sand in. When the ground is reached a shock is felt as if an electric current had passed through the line.—Ex.

An Early Form of Telegraphy.

Among the early devices for conveying information to a distance by means of signals the following is very ingenious. It was used by a Grecian general, Æneas, who flourished in the time of Aristotle. It consisted of two exactly similar earthen vessels filled with water, each provided with a cock that would discharge an equal quantity of water in a given time, so that the whole or any part of the contents would escape in precisely the same period from both vessels. On the surface of each floated a piece of cork supporting an upright, marked off into divisions, each division having a certain sentence inscribed upon it. One of the vessels was placed at each station, and when either party desired to communicate with the other he lighted a torch which he held aloft until the other did the same, as a sign that he was all attention. On the sender of the message lowering or extinguishing the torch, each party immediately opened the cock of his vessel, and so left it until the sender relighted his torch, when it was at once closed. The receiver then read the sentence on the division of the upright that was level with the mouth of the vessel, and which if everything had been executed with exactness, corresponded with that of the sender, and so conveyed the desired message.—Popular Science Monthly.

OBITUARIES.

POWELL.—Died in New Orleans, March 10, 1891, Bro. FELDER C. POWELL, after a very brief illness. He was born in St. Helena parish, La., Oct. 22, 1868, and was at the time of his death twenty-one years four months and eighteen days old. Just entering manhood, and being strong and healthy, he had fine prospects for a long life. But, alas!

"Life is a span—a fleeting hour,
How soon the vapor flies:
Man is a tender, transient flower,
That e'en in blooming dies."

He was an obedient and dutiful son, being of special help to his mother in his boyhood days. In touching upon life's stormy sea, he had just taken a commercial course of study in New Orleans, and was engaged as a book-keeper when stricken down by death. In June, 1890, he won a gold medal in oratory at the Gillsburg Collegiate Institute, Gillsburg, Miss.

In a letter to Bro. Powell's father, Rev. M. C. Cole, whose church he attended while in the city, stated that in a missionary life of twenty-five years in New Orleans he had never known a more pious and promising young man. He also mentioned two incidents of special interest having come to his knowledge. At a certain entertainment, where quite a number of young people were assembled, Bro. Felder Powell was the only one who would give thanks at the table. At another time he was solicited by a friend to go fishing on Sunday. He kindly, but firmly declined, and spoke of the evil of Sabbath desecration.

Bro. Powell was a member of the Baptist Church at Gillsburg, Miss., having been baptized in May, 1890, while a student in the institute. The day he left he called on his pastor to know what he should do about his church membership, showing that while he was going away to grapple with the world, he was mindful of his religious duty. It was his intention then to return to school, and he was advised to let his membership remain. His father, Rev. W. A. Powell, is a Methodist minister, living on the Amite river, in Amite county, Miss.

May a gracious Providence bless and comfort the father and mother, brothers and sisters, and may they often think of the sweet by-and-by!

BOYKIN—SARAH OLIVIA BOYKIN was born March 4, 1877, and died Feb. 21, 1891, aged just a little less than fourteen years. She joined the church at Energy, four miles from her home, some months before she died, lived a Christian life, and death found her with a smiling face. She had never before in her life been sick, and from the first of this sickness, which terminated so fatally, seemed to realized that she would die, telling her parents, Bro. and Sister W. J. Boykin, that she was going home, perfectly conscious all the while. On Sunday she took the measles, and seemed, notwithstanding her forebodings of death, to be doing well and getting better on Friday. That evening she sang, "The day is past and gone; the evening shades appear," with a strong voice, and with a meaning understood, perhaps, only by herself. During the night a cold north wind blew, and the changing weather moved the disease within. An hour after the parents noticed that she was worse, the spirit departed. Rev. H. S. Ginn preached her funeral. H. G. HAWKINS.

MEARIMAN—Mrs. JULIA ANN MEARIMAN, daughter of Thos. Singleton, of Virginia, and wife of B. H. Meariman, was born in Virginia, Dec. 22, 1825, and died June 30, 1890, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Desonier, in Galveston, Texas. For many years Sister Meariman lived in Louisiana, and, in fact, this State was her home; but she had gone to Galveston to visit her daughter, and hoping to regain her failing health to some extent, when she submitted to the cold hand of death. But, thank God, it is not such a death as the wicked are destined to meet. Hers was a beautiful, calm and sweet falling into the hands of Jesus, who leads us into the city of life.

This dear sister joined the church and embraced religion when a mere child, and was not only a great Methodist, but an humble servant of God. When I met her last she gave me the hymns and text for her funeral; but, as she left this world from home, her funeral was conducted by another pastor.

GOLDEN—W. F. GOLDEN was born Oct. 1, 1825, in Pickens county, Ala.; immigrated to Mississippi when a boy; was married to Curron Watts, Oct. 5, 1841; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1855; lived a consistent Christian life; died in the Christian faith, March 11, 1891, aged sixty-five years five months and thirteen days. He leaves a widow and several children to mourn his loss.

Thus one by one we pass away. We buried Bro. Golden at Fletcher's Chapel, March 15, where and when the writer preached his funeral to a large and attentive congregation. Thus ended the life and labors of a good man. God bless and take care of the sorrowing ones!

H. P. LEWIS.

AKIN—GREEN AKIN, son of John Akin and Elender Bands, of Mississippi, was born in Pike county, Miss., Dec. 11, 1822. He had the misfortune when only twelve years old to lose both his father and mother, but was kindly cared for by his eldest brother until grown, when he came to Claiborne parish, La., where he was married to Miss Lydia Ann Garlington, daughter of Dr. James and Sarah Garlington, on July 20, 1843. In 1859 he moved to Calcasieu parish (near Sugar Town). In 1878 he moved to Rapides parish, and located on Spring Creek, near the camp ground, where he spent the remainder of his days. He passed quietly away on Jan. 9, 1891, having been tenderly nursed by his family, his neighbors and his physician. Bro. Akin was converted and connected with the Methodist Church at the age of fourteen, and remained a faithful and consistent member until God called him home to heaven.

In every respect he was a leader in his church. He was a man of fine information in all the doctrines and discipline of the church, and being deeply pious, and exercising broad, charitable views of men and life, the younger members always felt safe under his counsel. No man loved the Methodist Church and her ministry more devotedly than Bro. Akin. A great many excellent things might be said of this noble servant of God; but justice can not be done him in this short tribute to his memory.

He leaves a large family and many friends to mourn after him. May our dear Lord comfort them!

WHITSON.—About half-past eleven o'clock, on Thursday morning, Feb. 5, 1891, at the Methodist parsonage in the city of Greenville, Miss., there passed into the world of spirits the soul of SARAH ANN WHITSON. She was born near Tuscaloosa, Ala., Jan. 23, 1823. Her parents were William and Martha Freeman. She was converted in early childhood, and at once attached herself to the Methodist Church, of which she lived a consistent and consecrated member to the end. At the age of eighteen she was married to John Wesley Whitson; and twelve children bless this marriage. One of her sons is a member of the North Mississippi Conference. About twenty-two years ago Bro. and Sister Whitson came to Mississippi.

I can safely say, from an intimate acquaintance with Sister Whitson for several years, that she was one of the purest and best Christians I ever saw. She lived her religion at home, and was always ready to speak a word for Jesus. Her last sickness was of short duration; but she was ready to go, and told us that there was not a cloud between her and the blessed Jesus. She talked so beautifully of heaven and seemed perfectly ready to go. She is no stranger there. To her many friends she has left the rich legacy of a long life spent in the service of the blessed Master.

SMITH—WILLIAM SMITH was born in Montgomery county, Tenn., May 20, 1816. With his father's family he removed to Kentucky in 1821. In the year 1836 he removed to Port Gibson, Miss., where he lived until 1882; then to Evansville, Ind. His religious life began in 1841, when he made a profession of Christ and united with the church. He entered into rest Oct. 25, 1890.

Bro. Smith was a good man, and faithful. He loved the church of God and good men. He read the Scriptures much and delighted in their teachings. God's promises were a treasure and a joy to him daily. He constantly illustrated the power of divine grace to strengthen and to bless, for many and great troubles came upon him in life. He was submissive, hopeful, and full of Christian courage, adorning the doctrine of the Savior.

It is instructive and encouraging to know how God's servants meet the last enemy. When Bro. Smith heard the summons he was ready and waiting, and said that all was well. His faithful wife and several children had gone before him, and in the joyful hope of meeting them again, and in the deepest peace, he passed away. Three daughters and one son survive him—Mrs. N. C. Duncan and Laura Smith, of Evansville, Ind.; Mrs. Mattie Stagner, of Kentucky, and Wm. Smith, of Wesson, Miss.

E. H. MORNGER.

WOOD—Mrs. LIZZIE GARDNER WOOD was born Jan. 23, 1870. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at Bethlehem, on the Winona circuit, in 1887, under the ministry of Rev. B. C. Foust. She was an affectionate, devoted daughter and an exemplary Christian. She was a thorough Methodist, a good singer, and possessed a sweet disposition, and won her way to the hearts of all who knew her. Feb. 12, 1888, she was married by Rev. W. H. Holmes to Mr. W. L. Wood. On Feb. 6, 1891, she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, and went over the river to live with him and the angels forever.

This peculiar dispensation of Providence has almost broken the hearts of her dear mother and sister especially. One so young, so promising, so gentle and kind, to be called away at the beginning of what promised to be a long and useful Christian life, it seems so strange; but God knows and directs all things for the best. She was conscious of the approach of death, and seemed to be so willing and ready to go. What a consolation to her husband, her mother and all her friends to know that she was ready to go! Dear, weeping friends, you will see Lizzie again. She is not gone forever from you; only passed in before. Remember her virtues to imitate them. May the sustaining grace of our Lord comfort you all!

T. W. LEWIS.

ETHRIDGE—JAMES SOLOMON, son of M. D. and V. E. R. Ethridge, was born July 20, 1872, and departed this life in Kemper county, Miss., March 17, 1891, aged eighteen years seven months and twenty-seven days.

It was the writer's privilege to visit Jimmie (as he was familiarly called) and to talk and pray with him. To the question, "Are you willing to die?" he answered, "Yes." The evening before he died the writer asked him if he was trusting in Christ. He replied that he was. He died of that most subtle of all diseases, consumption. His sufferings were intense at times; but he bore it all with Christian fortitude. We never heard a murmur escape his lips. He said he would rather die than endure such pain.

Grieve not for him, dear loved ones. He can not come to thee, but thou mayest go to him. What God doeth now thou dost not know, but thou shalt know hereafter.

W. J. DAWSON.

POPE—JORDAN POPE died at his home in Webster parish, near Cotton Valley, Jan. 31, 1891. He was born in Green county, Ga., in 1828. He joined the M. E. Church in his fifteenth year. He was married to Minerva C. Morton in 1851. They moved from Georgia to Claiborne parish in 1857.

Bro. Pope was in bad health for some time, but bore his afflictions as Christians should, and, as a matter of course, grew strong in the Lord as he grew weak in the flesh, and when the summons came he went cheerfully, but not before calling his family to his bedside and assuring them that he was going to heaven and exhorting them to meet him. Bro. Pope died happy; he died hearing the music on the other shore. We say "died;" but he is not dead, but sleeping, and he went to sleep saying, "Glory! glory!"

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

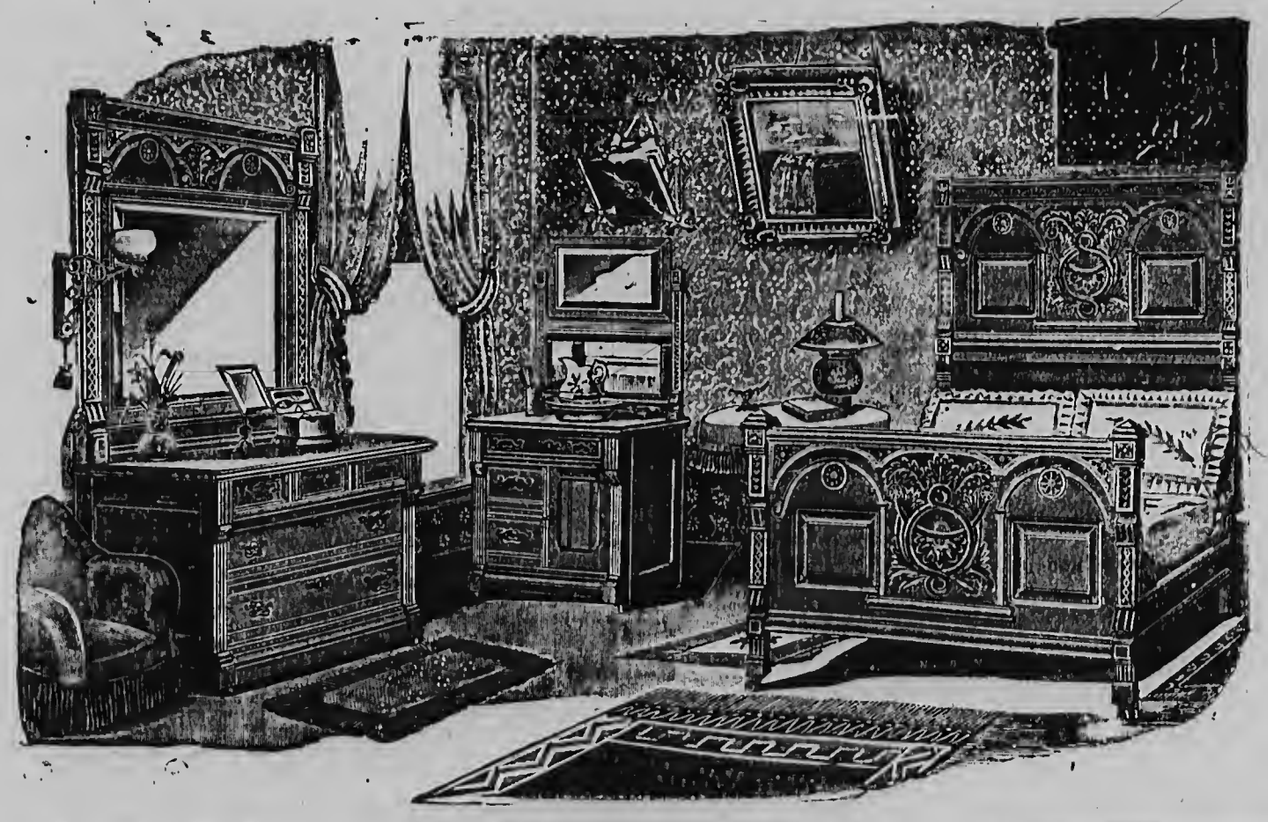
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire which occured in Chicago, on April 12, destroyed a million dollars' worth of property.

In the lower house of Minnesota Legislature, a bill has been passed requiring an eight-hour working day on all public works.

Funerals resulting from deaths by grip were so many in Brooklyn, April 11, that though all the hearses in that city were busy, some making two trips, there was not enough, and a supply from New York was called for.

The President and Mrs. Harrison, with the party who accompany them on their trip to the South and West, left Washington, at midnight, April 13, on a special train provided for their use. The party will not visit New Orleans.

The first of the surveying parties for the Inter-Continental railway between North and South America sailed from New York City for Equador, by way of Colon, on April 10. They will examine and report to the government upon the proposed line of the railway.

April 10 being the one-hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the American patent system, the Patent Centennial Committee recognized the day as the birth of the present system by inviting the members attending the centennial in Washington (D. C.) to visit Mount Vernon.

The preparations to put the sugar bounty clause of the new tariff law into operation are said to be rapidly nearing completion, so that there is now no reason to doubt that by July 1, the date fixed for the commencement of the bounty system, everything will be arranged for the successful carrying out of the provisions of the law.

It appears that many of the States that expected to realize the entire amount of their contributions to the direct tax are to be disappointed. Scrutiny of the act by the first comptroller has satisfied him that the United States government may claim offsets against all States wherein the tax was not collected from individuals directly by the government.

The interstate convention of miners and mine operators, held in Pittsburg, closed on April 9, after a fiery battle of words and opinions. This action means practically that the interstate agreement has been abolished, and that the amicable and harmonious relations that have existed between the two classes for the past five years are broken off, and may not be resumed. It also means that the 75,000 mine workers will stop work on May 1.

As a result of Tuesday's election the Republican party in St. Louis is now debarred of representation at the polls, and will be ignored in their selection of judges and clerks at the next election. Under the new Australian ballot law a party failing to secure a third of the total vote cast is debarred from all privileges and representation. In Tuesday's election the Democrats and municipal independents polled the main vote, the Republicans casting only 10,000, a quarter of the whole number.

Louisianians called, on April 13, upon the Secretary of the Interior with the view of obtaining a decision upon the question of the division to be made of the funds appropriated by the act of August, 1890, in aid of agricultural colleges. After a lengthy discussion between the Secretary and the visitors it was concluded to divide the funds equally between the white and colored agricultural colleges. There is on hand subject to this division, as soon as Governor Nicholls shall indicate his acceptance of the proposition, the sum of $31,000, being $15,000 for the first year and $16,000 for the second year, the amount increasing $1,000 each year.

FOREIGN.

The Pope has urged on Archbishop Walsh the advisability of founding a Catholic university in Ireland.

It is said that the agitation in Italy over the late killing of Italians in New Orleans is for local political effect.

The first consignment of samples of Chinese tobacco have been received by London brokers. China is desirous of competing in the European market.

The political meeting held at Macroom (Ireland), on April 12, resulted in a fight between the opposing factions. Many persons were seriously hurt.

The Manipurians, in India, after a stubborn resistance, were badly defeated in battle by the English, and are now ready to recognize the authority of the English officials.

The North German Gazette, referring to the United States commercial treaty with Brazil, says that the German exporters will probably lose a great portion of the South American market, and this is a reason, it adds, for the conclusion of the Austro-German treaty paving a way for new trade outlets.

The Czar has ordered the expulsion from the Russian camps on the frontier of all foreign traders. The war office fears that these traders might serve as guides to the Austro-German forces in the event of war. Hungarian peddlers especially are suspected of acquiring knowledge of the various strategic roads leading into Russia.

It is said that an enormous reservoir or water, 120 feet below the surface, has been discovered at El Golea, a small caravan station in the midst of the Sahara desert. The reservoir was discovered while a number of workmen were engaged in sinking a well at El Golea. The shaft sunk already gives forty gallons of good, clear water per minute, and it is expected that this amount can readily be increased should it be found that a larger quantity is necessary.

A Safe Medicine

is one that can be taken at all times without danger. The liver must be kept in regular action, the bowels open and cleansed of feculent matter and the blood purified in order to insure health. Maguire's Cuudurango can be taken at any time. 75 cts. per bottle.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

Bathe freely with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; then rub hard, night and morning, for pleurisy.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never wraps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Notes from Japan.

Seated on the floor of a small Inland Sea steamer, using a goban—a Japanese checker-board—for a writing-desk, I am on my way to Kobe, after a trip of about five hundred miles. Guided thus far by an unseen hand, amid the narrow straits and difficult channels of this beautiful island-studded sea, I hope to reach home and loved ones at Kobe by daybreak to-morrow. A few notes about the journey may be of interest to your readers.

REV. B. F. BUXTON.

Our party consisted of three persons: the brother whose name heads this paragraph; Miss Harlan, of our mission, and the writer. The first named deserves particular mention. He is a clergyman of the Church of England, and has recently brought out, at his own charges, a party of seven missionaries. He accompanied us on our trip, with the desire of obtaining a knowledge of interior traveling, preparatory to planting his own mission at a place called Matsuya, on the west coast of Japan. Mr. Buxton is of the broad church party, and is the most liberal member of his denomination that I have ever met. There is nothing of the sacramentarian about him, and he scouts the idea of an "apostolic succession." He is a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and claims to have received the enduement of power. I have seen no reason to doubt the claim, and many reasons to believe it. His mission enterprise will cost him, personally, not less than eight or ten thousand dollars a year. This, with his own life, is his annual offering to the Lord's cause. He told me that it was a comparatively easy thing for him to give his money; but that he felt that he had not met his Lord's claims upon him until he had laid himself and his wife on the altar; and, in doing this, he did not feel that he had done any more than he or any other disciple of the Master should do. What a rebuke an example like this should be to wealthy Christians!—to those who, acknowledging their Lord's claim upon them to everything that they possess; who, professing to believe that "Love so amazing, so divine, Demands our life, our time, our all,"

give but a pittance of their income to the Lord's cause, when the Master has just as great a claim upon them as he has upon Mr. Buxton, or any other devoted servant.

I once knew a man, a member of the Southern Methodist Church, who was worth a million dollars, or more, who, when his pastor asked him for a contribution for foreign missions, refused to give anything to the cause, on the plea that he intended to double his contribution to home missions; but when that collection was taken up, he gave but the paltry sum of ten dollars. He is dead now, and his money has gone to others; and, while it is not for me to pass in judgment on his or any other man's life, one thing I am sure of: if ever he got to heaven, he found himself a poor man up yonder, for he had laid up no treasures there. If these lines should be read by any who have more than enough of this world's goods, let me give you a word of exhortation. It is this: As you value your own soul's welfare, give away your wealth; begin now to administer on your own estate. Don't leave it to others to fight over; to have your purposes thwarted by some technicality of the law and money that you intended should be given to the Lord's cause to go into other channels. Invest it now, while you can superintend its distribution; begin now to lay up treasures in heaven; transmute your base metal into the pure gold of saved souls; and then, "when you fail" on earth—as soon you must—those who have been saved through the agencies that have been started by your gifts, will "welcome you into everlasting habitations," and thus you will be ever with your Lord.

YAMAGUCHI.

The objective point in our trip was a place called Yamaguchi, the Ken city of a province by the same name. The object of our going was to open the work at this place, and to put Miss Harlan in charge of it. For some time our mission has considered Yamaguchi a point of much importance to our work, and one that should be occupied at the earliest possible moment. Its importance to our mission is due, in part, to the fact that from Yamaguchi and Hiroshima provinces (adjoining) there have gone about ten thousand persons to the Hawaiian Islands, to work the sugar plantations there, and many of these have become Methodists—the M. E. Church having missions there—and are now returning to their native country. Our mission feels that it is our duty, a part of our work, to meet these people on their return with a church of their own denomination. After waiting for some time for a male missionary to come from home for this work, Miss Harlan volunteered to take charge of it till help should arrive. The conduct of this noble, consecrated young lady should be an example to the women, especially to the young women of our church. Coming out to Japan at her own charges, and supporting herself for the first year, in order to enable the mission to hold a strategic point in our work, she volunteers to stand in the breach till help arrives; and, by doing so, she places herself in a native house, with no other companions than a young Japanese Christian girl and a heathen woman, who acts as cook. The courage she has is certainly begotten of the Holy Ghost, and of a deep love for the Master. I was mistaken when I said that her only companions were two Japanese. She has the Master with her, and he is more than all beside. Those who go forth in his name realize the truth of his promise, "Lo, I am with you alway."

While traveling in the interior, a few months ago, I stopped with a young missionary brother, who lives about fifty miles from any other foreigner. On opening his Bible, to read a lesson at prayers, I was touched at finding in it the following couplet:

"Peace, perfect peace, with loved ones far away.
In Jesus' keeping I am safe, and they."

This was the secret of his contentment and the inspiration of his every moment.

Our work has opened up nicely at Yamaguchi, and has promise of success. I spent two days there, doing what I could toward starting Miss Harlan in her work, and making her house comfortable. After commending her to the Master's care, I started for Hiroshima, leaving her in a contented and even happy state of mind, counting it a privilege to labor for her Master in a place far away from friends and loved ones. May she win many stars for the Master's crown, and finally win a crown for herself!

But these "notes" are already too lengthy, and an account of my visit to Hiroshima must be reserved for another letter. W. E. TOWSON.

On the Inland Sea, Feb. 23, 1891.

P. S.—In a letter received a day or two ago, Miss Harlan writes that there were over fifty present at her opening service on Sunday morning, and a large attendance at Sunday-school in the afternoon. We rejoice greatly at this good news, and pray that it may continue. W. E. T.

Men in the Pulpit.

We need wise, prudent, brave men in the pulpit just now, perhaps, more than ever before. The tides of life are so strong around us, and the encroachments of the world upon the church so constant; that we need to stand to our colors and obey our orders, or we will lose our standard. It is not rash men that we need, nor men who seek to make up in spasmodic zeal for failure in other ways. A minister must study to show himself approved, and must be thoroughly furnished for every good work. The world has been looking to the pulpit for its standards; but, we fear, is losing confidence. A thoughtful, church-loving woman, the wife of a pastor, said not long ago that the pulpit was responsible for the degenerate, worldly spirit that was in the church. Whether this is all truth or not, there is evidently strong ground for the assertion. Two business men within the last twenty-four hours, at different times and without provocation from us, said that ministers were confusing the faith of the people, and doing harm by their eulogies over the dead; preaching all sorts of people, especially the rich or famous, to heaven. A busy, but vigorous, thinker said to us about ten days ago: "I want to tell your readers, before long, how we regard those things you have been writing about, from a layman's standpoint. I want to tell them that when Christ said, 'Go into all the world and preach the gospel,' he didn't mean go and run business enterprises, land speculations, and all that. There is no use of preaching to us about our money-loving spirit when preachers are as eager after it as we are." Our brother was playing close around the truth, and we hope to hear from him soon. But more than this, the worldliness and lack of manhood in the pulpit is manifest in many other ways. We fear that many of us are more earnest after the applause of men, and work more directly to that end than for the salvation of sinners and the building up of Christ's kingdom. The great truth of our ministry is not sought after; and so long as this is the case, we may expect to have dwarfs in the pulpit and everywhere else.

And so long as the pulpit panders to the whims and peccadilloes of the world, or lifeless church members, and runs off after side-issues to attract a crowd and make the world gape and talk, we may know that the pigmy tribe is not extinct, and there is little hope that it soon will be. An Episcopal lady said to us, about three weeks ago, "The glory of your church has been the simplicity of its service and the directness of its work, and you ought to cherish that spirit." This was not the first time the remark had been made. But no; just as other denominations are being impressed with our wisdom, and adopting our methods, we lose our spirituality and life, and must go back to our resurrection and gather up the old grave clothes of formality and wrap them about the remains of our dead churches. There is nothing so sad as to see a church parading its beautiful form and beautiful robes, and yet having no life to produce manly and womanly church members.

No, brethren; our business is to seek the truth until we have found it—the truth of manly Christian dealing with each other and the world; the truth of kindness, self-denial and love; the truth as it is in Christ—and when we have found it, to preach and live it until the world feels it, embraces it, and finds its rest in Christ. It is painfully evident that we are not reaching the manliness of truth. That the end will be triumph for the gospel and Christ we have no doubt, and yet the way we are going we are in danger not only of losing our part in the triumph, but of letting many churches and interests, as well as thousands of individuals, go down under our hand. There are now indications for good, which, if we will take hold upon with true manhood and womanhood, will bring us such a season of revival power, and such a move against the enemy's ranks as will rejoice the angels above and make glad the hearts of God's children below. —Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

Rev. Thomas Yancy Ramsey.

Rev. Thomas Yancy Ramsey was born in Chatham county, N. C., Sept. 2, 1818, and died in Durant, Miss., March 15, 1891. This minister of Christ, like Enoch, "walked with God, and is not, for God hath taken him."

When about 12 years old he moved with his parents to Marengo county, Ala. He spent one year at LaGrange College, then under the presidency of Bishop Paine, after which he was a student at the State University, Tuskaloosa, Ala., graduating in 1840, and then became a student of law in the office of Hon. Frank Lyon, Demopolis, Ala., with bright prospects of success. During the great revial at Demopolis, in 1843, conducted by the now sainted Dr. Jesse Boring, he was powerfully converted to God, and on joining the church was appointed class-leader by Rev. J. C. Keener, now senior Bishop of the M. E. Church, South, who was then preacher in charge of Demopolis, Ala.

In the autumn of 1843 he was received on trial into the Alabama Conference, held in the city of Columbus, Miss, and sent to the Marengo circuit. The fields he afterward cultivated were West Ward, Mobile, where he married Miss Elizabeth Bancroft, only daughter of Charles Bancroft, of that city; Hayneville, and Loundsboro, Tuskegee, Selma, Marion; professor in Centenary College, Summerfield, Macon district; Greensboro and Franklin Street Stations, Columbus district, and station in the Alabama Conference.

While pastor of the church in Columbus, Miss., the boundary lines of his Conference were changed, and he became a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and was appointed presiding elder of the Columbus district, which he served four years.

After this he was appointed to serve the Aberdeen district, remaining in charge of it four years; then to Grenada district, of which he was presiding elder three years; then to Winona district, remaining four years; then to Kosciusko and Durant, one year; after which he was assigned to Lexington and Durant, which he served two years, winding up his term of effective service, reaching the period of forty-five years

After all those years of devoted and successful toil he accepted a superannuated relation, with a cheerful resignation to the divine will.

Ever a vigilant "watchman" on the walls of our Zion, he was prepared to sound the clarion notes of alarm at the approach of danger. A tender, wakeful "shepherd," he led the flock of Christ into pastures green and luxuriant and beside waters still and pure. Amid the ever-shifting scenes of forty-five years of itinerating life, this man of God wrought for the glory of his Divine Master and the uplifting of humanity. "The secret of the Lord was with him;" hence even "the deep things of God" were not unknown to him either as an expounder of the sacred Word or as a personal Christian. His "life being hid with Christ in God," he possessed those gifts of regenerate manhood that made him "a workman that needed not to be ashamed," while his every-day life was a beautiful illustration of the doctrines and duties he preached to others.

Such a "living epistle," indeed, was he that a gentleman was heard to remark that it was a benediction to any community for him to walk its streets. He was a Methodist after the type of Wesley himself. He knew the Word of God and the doctrinal standards of his church, and these he preached with power in the pulpit and out of it in his life and conduct.

"Patient toward all men," he was afraid of none. Having "the courage of his convictions," he dared to "speak out," even in the hearing of others who might have been of a "contrary mind;" meanwhile his brotherly tenderness and love kept step with the candor of his spirit.

Our brother was ever a stranger to all the wire-working schemes of cunning and duplicity, and was, in word, look and act, one of the most perfectly transparent characters with which the writer has ever met. His judgment was so nicely poised as to "men and measures," and his common sense so strong, that he was among the safest of counsellors. Serving for fifteen consecutive years as presiding elder in the North Mississippi Conference, it was said by some of his brethren, when he retired, that "the balance-wheel in the Bishop's cabinet in his Conference was gone." But the writer doubts not that the "great Head of the church" has supplied the place of the missing wheel.

He was one of the charter members of the Board of Trustees of the Southern University, and acted as secretary of the Board for many years.

He was also a member of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University from its inception to his death.

Full of years, labor and successes, our brother has been gathered to the home of his fathers.

While the sheaf, fully ripened, has been gathered into God's garner, may the honored son, bearing his full name, and a member of the North Mississippi Conference, long live to reproduce the consecration and efficiency of the deceased father. "And they said, the spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha."

Dying like an infant going to sleep in its mother's arms, the precious dust of our glorified brother was laid away with appropriate services by his brethren, and the priceless inheritance of a name pure and spotless is left to his sons and daughters and their posterity.

"Thanks be unto God, who giveth the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." J. BANCROFT.

Present-Day Preaching.

Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, made an address recently on "The Decline of Zeal for Foreign Missions," which has awakened wide attention. He attributed the decline to several causes, among which he notes a decline of fervor in preaching. He says:

Preaching itself has lost all the fervor of appeal for what the dear old Hopkinsonians used to call instant submission to God, and what the more modern evangelical word for has been, immediate consecration to Christ. The preaching is very apt to become educational, rather sometimes ornamental merely, sometimes entertaining, as if the final cause of it were to fill pews. So there comes a relative want of consecration on the part of the most active-minded and vigorous young men to the work of the ministry, which seems to them to be so largely an ornamental work; and while consecration to missionary work is wide—blessed be God for that!—even that wants something of the intensity which it had in the earlier time, when men were accustomed to say, "Send me to the hardest place on the face of the earth." Men are willing to go to Japan, or to India, perhaps, inviting fields; but they do not care to go to the Cannibal Islands—that is, in large numbers, or under the desolate shades of the African forests. There is a want of intensity in consecration, though the width of it, the extensiveness of it, is still very large.

The church, in other words, my dear friends, has come to an easy and luxurious style of experience. It walks in embroidered slippers, rather than iron shod, as the fathers were. It luxuriates in Sunday dressing-gowns, rather than robes itself in the raiment for the march and for the battle. It does not like to contemplate great enterprises and hard labors and mighty achievements. It wants to rest at home and be baptized with discourses, and take a palace car toward heaven.

Now, out of this comes as well a variety of what old-fashioned believers, like myself, hold to be novel, loose and dangerous doctrines, or theories, whatever they may be called. They don't concern the future state alone, and any opportunity which may be conceived to be there for repentance and regeneration and entering into fellowship with God. They concern the Bible itself, and men pick away with the instruments of their higher criticisms at the very constitution and authority of the Bible. They don't believe there ever was any paradise, even at the North Pole, where one of your Boston savants has located it. They don't believe there were any Adam and Eve. They think that Abraham was only a myth or a legend, and that Moses was the most gigantic, though unconscious and unintentional, impostor of history.

There are doubts about the atonement—the nature of it and the reach of it; doubts about the character of God and the place which distributive justice holds in that character and in the divine government. All these speculations or theories, whatever you may call them, imply the secularized state of the general Christian mind. Revival doctrine implies revival temper. He that will do the will shall know of the doctrine; and where the revival temper is, and the missionary temper, in its full vigor, there the Bible opens itself as a luminous discoverer of God's mind to the world; and men want to preach it as it is, to preach it at once, to preach it without addition, and to preach it without diminution. Then there comes a general skepticism and a still more general indifferentism in the public mind, until the result is that the level of enthusiasm for missionary work is lowered and the current of contribution becomes lessened. It is not the mighty rushing of the river, because the thousand rills among the hills, which fed that river, have been ebecked and chilled.

Epworth League.

A very interesting meeting of the Epworth League of Carondelet Street M. E. Church, South, was held on Monday evening, April 20; and, although the organization has just been perfected, much progress has been made, particularly in the Children's Auxiliary League, presided over by Rev. Mrs. W. H. LaPrade. Mrs. Harmon, in charge of the temperance department of the children's league, reported 100 members and 50 pledged; and Mrs. Knickerbocker, in her department of Christian effort, reported much progress among the Ready Workers and Dorcas Societies. Bro. J. G. Grant stated that a number of classes in the Sunday-school had each agreed to clothe from one to two poor children, in order to induce them to attend the school regularly. Great care has been taken in the selection of the various working committees, and a grand and glorious work is promised from this on. There are 136 members on the roll, and the officers are: E. P. Mackie, president; J. G. Grant, first vice-president; Mrs. H. W. Spear, second vice-president; Rev. W. H. LaPrade, third vice-president, pro tem.; John W. Blackman, Jr., secretary; and Miss Priscilla Michel, treasurer.

W. M. S., Brookhaven District.

A district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Brookhaven district, will be held at Wesson, Miss., on Friday, May 8, 1891. There will be a morning and an afternoon session for business, and an evening missionary service, beginning at 7:45.

Every auxiliary in the district is urged to send a representative to this meeting—the corresponding secretary, if convenient; if not, some other member of the society—with a report of the work. I have a list of twenty-nine auxiliaries in the district. Will not each place where one of these auxiliaries has existed or still exists endeavor to be represented at this meeting?

All the pastors in the district are invited to be present at the meeting. Wesson has extended her hospitality, and provision will be made for the entertainment of delegates and visitors. Those who will attend should send their names to Mrs. S. J. Lindrose.

We hope for a full attendance and large results to the missionary cause in the district from this meeting.

ADDIE V. MARSHALL,
Dist. Sec. W. M. S., Brookhaven district, Mississippi Conference.

Notice.

To the Members of the District Conference, Winona District, North Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Bishop Galloway appointed our District Conference to convene on May 8. Let the pastors all be present with their reports in full. Let the recording stewards be present with their Quarterly Conference journals for examination. Let the Sabbath-school superintendents be present, ready for a thorough investigation of their work. We hope to give part of Saturday to this enterprise of the church. I do hope all the local preachers in the district will be present with reports of their work.

Brethren, let us come together in the spirit of the Master. Why not have a revival of religion on that occasion?

The second Quarterly Conference for West circuit will be held June 3; the Ethel circuit, June 5.

Brethren, remember the Quarterly Conference means the payment of one-fourth of the preacher's salary. Let the churches note this and govern themselves accordingly.

EVENING BRINGS US HOME.

Upon the hills the wind is sharp and cold,
The sweet young grasses wither on the wold,
And we O Lord, have wandered from thy fold;
But evening brings us home.

Among the mists we stumble, and our feet
Are cut and bleeding, and the lambs repent
Their pitiful complaints. Oh, rest is sweet
When evening brings us home.

The darkness gathers. Through the gloom no star
Rises to guide us. We have wandered far.
Without thy lamp, we know not where we are;
But evening brings us home.

The clouds are around us, and the snow drifts thicken:
O thou, dear Shepherd, leave us not to sicken
In the waste night; our tardy footsteps quicken,
As evening brings us home.

A Doctor Prescribes.

MR. EDITOR: I read with much pleasure your article, entitled "A Doctor Wanted," and am satisfied that much good will result from the agitation of the question you have sprung. I do not pretend to pose as a doctor, but humbly offer my little prescription. Ministers do not stress Conference and other collections too much, but do slight their duty in not bringing before the congregation the needs of their own church. It is hoped that the Board of Stewards will somehow manage to pull through at the end of the year; they have done it before, and will do it again. Our membership should be educated to give systematically, and even the poorest be made to realize that each should do something, however little, for the support of their church. Our beloved Savior not only commended the poor widow, but set us an example of self-denial.

Our Romish friends understand this branch of church work much better than we; yet we claim to be Methodists. I fully appreciate the shortcomings of most Boards of Stewards, but think that many pastors are as much to blame as the stewards that their salaries are not paid promptly and in full.

Some years ago our stewards, seeing how difficult it was to get the present membership to assess themselves, or to pay any amount the Finance Committee might ask for, proposed that our pastor give us the name and address of each accession, and, after two or three weeks, if the new member did not come forward, the Board should appoint a committee to call and explain how our finances were conducted; that certain expenses must be paid, and that there is no source to look to but the voluntary contributions of our members. The idea is, that while we could not get around to all our old, scattered and, in some cases, ecclesiastical dead-beat members, we could, by training the new ones, afterwhile have our entire membership in a paying condition. But—would you believe it?—our pastor on two occasions would not listen to such a thing. The idea! After he, not the Spirit, had brought them in, we wanted to throw cold water on them. Now, any convert that could be so easily chilled must be very thin-skinned, and has no business in a Methodist Church.

Strange to say, the pastors that object to the method suggested are usually the ones who worry the treasurer most. STEWARD.

Request for Prayer for the P. and H. M. Society of the Mississippi Conference.

In our Constitution and By-law leaflet (By-law IX., page 14), "All the members are requested to remember the work of this society in prayer at the hour of retiring, and when they shall lie awake at night, and to make a point of visiting and securing the prayers of any Christian invalid in the community who can not get out to church."

We earnestly and prayerfully request everyone who reads this article not only to co-operate in this way with us themselves, but to remind others of this blessed privilege. At this time we solicit special prayers for the work in the Mississippi Conference. In this way the tender nursling that repeats and gives pathos to mother's prayer, rendering it more effectual, and the aged saint too feeble to kneel, can aid us.

How strengthening to my faith in prayer is the loving remembrance of my sainted father's habit in ante-bellum times, of having the servants of the house present at family prayer! A late breakfast at our home does not prohibit this delightful service.

Oh! if we could appreciate the value of concert in prayer. If it was generally practiced, we would more nearly realize our oneness in spirit, and the blessedness of sharing the omnipresence of the great I Am. "The Spirit also helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which can not be uttered."

MRS. E. D. JONES.

The Fixed Stars.

While some who are not informed on the subject may have the mistaken idea that the planets are themselves the sources of the light we receive from them, there are others who entertain an equally erroneous view regarding the so-called fixed stars, supposing the latter to derive their light from our sun, and hence to give out reflected light. The fact is, the light of all the planets and their satellites is reflected sunlight, while the fixed stars are self-luminous. In the case of Jupiter, the physical condition of this planet has suggested the idea that it may be in a state of actual incandescence; but this is not generally accepted, one reason being that the satellites show no reflected light when passing through Jupiter's shadow, as would be the case if the planet were even in a small degree self-luminous.

That the fixed stars have a physical constitution similar to our sun—that each of them is itself a vast sun—containing vapors of many of the elements well known to the chemist, has been conclusively revealed by the spectroscope, which instrument has wrought a most wonderful revolution in certain departments of physical and chemical science since it came into use about thirty years ago. The ancient astronomers of Egypt and Chaldea ascertained the relative positions of the brightest of the fixed stars, and in the last century Halley compared their records and those of succeeding centuries with the results of observation in his own time, which showed the stars to have a relative motion whether real or apparent. After accounting for certain displacements by a "secular motion of the sun," it was finally concluded that the so-called fixed stars have a real, but slow motion of their own, which is imperceptible except by comparing the observations of many years and even centuries. Since the invention and improvement of the spectroscope, it has not only been shown (according to Doffer's principle) that some of the stars are moving towards us while others are moving from us, but their rate of approach and recession has been somewhat approximately determined. If the body under examination is approaching the spectroscope the lines of the spectrum will be bent toward the violet; and if the object is receding, the lines will be bent toward the red, provided in each case the velocity is sufficient to materially decrease or increase the wave-length of the light. For instance, it has been determined that if a star has a "proper motion" of even two miles per second, this motion could be detected by means of the spectroscope. The receding motion of Sirius (the brightest star in the southern sky in Spring) has been computed to be about twenty miles a second, while the bright star Arcturus has been calculated to approach us at the rate of more than fifty miles a second. The term fixed, as applied to the stars outside the solar system in distinction from the planets or wanderers, is still used merely as regards their appearance to the naked eye. The apparent slow motion of the stars is fully accounted for when we consider their immense distance from the earth, and even from the solar system. The nearest fixed star is about two hundred thousand times the distance of the sun from us, or about nineteen trillions of miles.

The velocity of light being 186,000 miles a second, it would require more than three years for the light of that star to reach us—in other words, if the nearest fixed star were to be suddenly extinguished, we could see its light (hence it would appear the same in the heavens), for three years and more afterwards. None of the light that left any of the fixed stars in 1890 will probably reach the earth until 1893; and if the nearest one of them were to move toward the earth with a velocity of twenty miles a second, its distance would be diminished only about one-three-hundredth in a century. That some of the fixed stars are larger and hotter than our sun, while others are smaller and cooler, is reasonably certain. Whence these bodies come and whither they are going is beyond the conception of a human mind, and remain with those great mysteries that point to the first cause in the mind of a great omniscient Creator. J. M. SULLIVAN.

Centenary College.

A High School on the Gulf Coast.

Methodism on the coast of Mississippi has been attracting more or less attention for many years; but not half as much as ought to have been by our church; and, talking with preachers and laymen acquainted with that country for many years, they believe, with the hold our church has there, that a school of high grade can be established with great success, and the only way by which Methodism can be made an aggressive religious power. Their plan is about this: to raise about five thousand dollars; buy about two hundred acres of land at some point about middle ground—say, for instance, at Gulf Port. Go out, say two miles, on some high, elevated ground, where you can see for miles around, even vessels on the Gulf; the timber all being taken away. The Ship Island railroad terminates at this point. Lay off lots for school-buildings, male and female; also for boarding-houses for each; then lay off lots from one to four acres, and give them to anyone who will build on the same. They can keep boarders; then they have a vast range of country for miles away, where they can raise cattle, sheep, horses, hogs, without feed, winter or summer. The finest country for poultry, vegetables, fruit, and the healthiest country on the globe. The students can go on Saturdays to the beach, boat-riding, fishing, oystering; and in warm weather, when the tide goes out, gather bushels of flounders, and bathe in sea water. This is on the line between New Orleans and Mobile, right in the center of the world. Then the Ship Island railroad goes north away up into the interior. There are about six thousand members of the Methodist Church in the bounds of the Seashore district, some of which are wealthy and liberal, especially along on the coast range. Then out back in the pine woods there are married men, with large families to educate; others that are called poor people, but independent livers, with children to educate; and young men that would educate themselves. Then on the line of that railroad there is Pearlington—a Christly, money-making town, and almost everybody a member of the Methodist Church; then Bay St. Louis—we have a station there; then Pass Christian, a town four miles long; Mississippi City, Handsborough, Biloxi, Ocean Springs, Moss Point, Scranton; then all along between those places a dense population. Now, the children can go home on Friday evenings, and come back Monday mornings. Then people of New Orleans and Louisiana have summer residences. They come and stay during warm weather. Then there is no competition for hundreds of miles. So, as regards patronage, I don't think there would be any trouble. One man told me he would put fifteen hundred dollars—all he was worth; another said he would spend all he had then. It has been suggested that such a school would be a good place, for a Mississippi Chautauqua can be organized after school session closes. There will be an effort made in that direction. I think so; and will say I would be glad that every person in that country, who may feel interested in such an enterprise, would write to me. I have a purpose for making the request, and that it be done at an early day.

A. B. NICHOLSON.

Rev. George W. Brown.

When we heard of the death of Bro. Brown, we said, "A good man gone to heaven;" and so it is. We have every reason for our belief. While we are commanded not to judge, yet we are taught that, "By their fruits ye shall know them." We have been intimately associated with him for the last twenty years, having been his presiding elder longer than any other man during his whole ministry. We thus speak. Bro. Brown was one of the most devoted and consecrated men we ever knew. As a pastor, he was faithful and successful. The number of years in which I was associated with him in the ministry, I never knew him to fail having a revival, or fall behind in his collections, even on some of the poorest circuits. He was as reserved and modest as a woman, and was, therefore, often misunderstood by many until they became thoroughly acquainted with him. He was one of the most companionable men in his associations with his friends. I say "with his friends," and who was not a friend to George W. Brown after they had fully known him? Because of his retiring disposition, he never was valued at his true worth, either as a man or preacher. But, with this reserved disposition, he was as bold and fearless in declaring the truths of the gospel as any man who ever spoke in his Master's cause; therefore, he was an enigma to many who did not know him. We have said he was faithful. He never shirked any responsibility placed upon him by the church he so much loved, when it was at all possible for him to perform said duty.

Bro. Brown was most popular where he was best known; therefore, we were not surprised to learn that the good people of Durant had built him a home for life. During his ministry in the North Mississippi Conference he had served the people of Durant more than any other, and this marked demonstration of their affection for, and appreciation of, Bro. Brown proves what we have said: to know him was to love him.

Bro. Brown was a strong, pathetic gospel preacher. Textual in his analysis of the subject in hand, he preached the Bible often with powerful effect. In prayer he was as simple as a child. We always felt, when he said "Amen! that we had been in the presence of the Lord, and that he communed with us while Bro. Brown prayed. We always felt lifted to a higher and holier atmosphere when Bro. Brown was the pastor of our family. We are now traveling a circuit where more than twenty years ago he was pastor; and his name is still precious to these good people. I really think any circuit, station or mission has missed a great deal that has never had George W. Brown for their pastor. But my brother and friend has transferred to a better land. He worked well while living; he rests well while sleeping; and when the morning comes he will awake well, and ever be with the Lord. When such men as George W. Brown dies, the church loses a faithful, good minister of Jesus; but heaven gets a good man. To his devoted wife, who has stood by him all these years of faithful work, I would say: "Look up; heaven is nearer you now than ever before; and, while tears of loneliness dims the eye, the stars of heaven will shine more brightly. Up the ladder travel, and, ere long, the doors will open above your head, and you will step in."

Good-by, Bro. Brown, "till we meet at Jesus' feet." K. A. JONES.

Sunday-Schools — Mississippi Conference.

Please permit me to call the attention of preachers in charge and Sunday-school superintendents of the Mississippi Conference to a few facts concerning Children's Day:

1. We sincerely hope every pastor will see to it that each Sabbath-school in his charge observes Children's Day this year. Five years' experience—to go no further back—has proven that the most successful schools are those that are loyal to connectional Methodism. Some schools did not observe this day last year, though we were much gratified at the large increase over the year before.

2. The Sabbath-school Board was much grieved at our last Annual Conference to learn from some of the pastors that their schools observed "the day," took up a collection, but used the money themselves, making no report to the Board. We have as much right to use our education or mission money that way as our Children's Day money. Let all the preachers who did this last year turn to paragraph 245, Discipline of 1890, and compare it with the laws on other collections. We trust all money will be turned over to the Sunday-school Board this year.

3. Do not tithe the collection. Send the full amount to the treasurer at Jackson, Miss. This is by request of the General Board at Nashville. Besides it creates confusion. The Board does not know what school has or has not tithed, and it happens that one-fifth instead of one-tenth is sent to Nashville.

4. Bro. W. D. Dominick, 346 West Capitol street, Jackson, Miss., will have a sufficient supply of programmes to supply the four hundred schools within our bounds, and will fill all orders at Publishing House prices, viz.: sixty cents per hundred. We trust all orders for programmes will be sent to him. Send all money to

REV. B. F. LEWIS, Treas.,
West Capitol St., Jackson, Miss.

A Question—The Answer.

MR. EDITOR: A local, a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, who is duly licensed to preach the gospel, but not ordained according to the ritual of said church, is asked by several parties to perform the rites of marriage. The parish authorities issue licenses authorizing "any minister of the gospel" to celebrate marriages. Will you very kindly inform the interested parties through the medium of your paper if a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, who is duly licensed by the Quarterly Conference to preach the gospel, is a "minister of the gospel"? If he is, then, according to the marriage licenses, he can perform marriage ceremonies; but if he is not a "minister of the gospel," what is he? and what constitutes a "minister of the gospel?"

JOHN EVANS.

ANSWER.

Like a good many people who ask questions, this brother not only asks a question, but argues his case. We do not propose to answer his argument, only so far as to state that the civil law only recognizes as "ministers" those whom the church law recognizes as such. Our church law does not recognize unordained preachers as ministers. They are simply licensed to preach—if they can. No authority is given them by the church to solemnize the rite of matrimony. This being the case, the license of the court is not issued to them. If we recollect right, the license reads, "To any minister of the gospel authorized to celebrate matrimony." "Authorized" by whom? By his own church, of course. The license is issued to an authorized person, not an unauthorized one.

As death is the total change of life, every change is the death of some part; sickness is the death of health; sleeping, of waking; sorrow, of joy; impatience, of quiet; youth, of infancy; age, of youth. All things which follow time, and even time itself, at last, must die.—Taylor.

The Quarterly Review.

The April number of this able periodical is at hand, with a full table of excellent reading matter. There is a large variety in the subjects discussed. W. H. Milburn leads off with a sketch of Peter Akers; then we have a humorous, serious paper on Pulpit Pleasantries, by W. A. Back. In this article our keen-eyed readers will recognize a frequent and always welcome contributor to the columns of the ADVOCATE. Dr. Wright discusses Delitzch's Hebrew New Testament, and G. G. Smith contributes a paper on the Confessions of Augustine. Our Bro. Featherstun, of Woodville, writes on Satan in the School-house; and Dr. West, of Tennessee, on the Equity of Providence. R. M. Smith writes on Woman's Worth, and C. R. Lamar on the Unknown God. There are several other papers, and the number closes with several masterly articles from the editor, Dr. W. P. Harrison. Altogether, this is a very fine number of our Review. It will easily take rank with the best.

A Correction.

I see in the Minutes of the last annual session of the Mississippi Conference, Mt. Olivet is not credited with paying anything for Children's Day; and it is done the people, and myself as well, to state that Mt. Olivet paid $17 80 for Children's Day, and I sent it up to Conference by Bro. R. S. Woodward, who turned it over, no doubt, to the proper person. J. J. LOVETT.

FROM THE WORK.

BUNKIE, LA.

The generosity of the people of Bunkie and vicinity was demonstrated to strikingly good effect in the estimation, at least, of one family in the way they managed in a storm. The wind had been blowing for a day or two, and it culminated on Friday night, April 3, in a regular tornado. While we were at supper and everything quiet—as it generally is at a preacher's home (?)—all in a moment the hurricane burst upon us in all its fury, and in less time than I write it things were scattered promiscuously and in great profusion and variety. The things referred to were soda, soap, sugar, baking powders, rice, coffee, tea, lard, bacon, ham and flour, with some bundles of dry goods. For days the debris continued to fall in. Even yesterday, one in the form of a cake was found—not a pound, but a five-pounder. The Lord abundantly bless the good people for this expression of kindness! J. H. BROWN.

CADDO CIRCUIT.

I would say something of this old, but, to me, new field. I arrived in midwinter. Everything had a rigid look and frigid feeling; but, in the midst of my gloomiest ruminations, I met our dear old veteran, Bro. Pipes, who wafted me upward into balmy plains of hope.

At Greenwood the faithful flock had no fold, and for eighteen years have sheltered where they could; but now we have almost completed a nice little church on the consecrated spot that the fathers named as "God's heritage." The music of the "Harp" brought harmony at this point. Four have been added to the church at Greenwood.

At Keatchie we have just closed a two weeks' meeting, assisted by Bro. G. B. Hinds, of the East Texas Conference, and Bro. J. E. Denson, Coushatta, La., resulting in ten accessions to the church, and the establishing of a young woman's prayer meeting, at which all our young ladies, who are members, lead in the public prayer. The brethren did great good; the preaching and the singing was full of the Holy Spirit, and it found a response in the hearts of the people. Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist, all seemed to catch the glow of divine love. The Baptists follow up with a meeting commencing to-night.

We have a stone wall on this work, which came down upon the parsonage a few days ago, striking the store-room with such force that it almost groaned with the deposits, while the inmates gratefully smiled at the task of clearing up the debris.

S. H. WHATLEY.

PLEASANT GROVE, MISS.

We celebrated Easter Sunday by holding a missionary mass meeting at Longtown, which place is near the center of our circuit. This meeting was in the interest of the Woman's Department, and delegates were present from most of our societies. (we have eleven). The programme consisted of reports of the year's work which has just closed, and brought to light the following very gratifying facts: Two hundred women and children are working in the interest of this cause. From March 1890 to 1891 they raised $175, an increase over previous years of 600 per cent., and several of the societies were not organized until Summer. One hundred and seventy dollars of this amount was raised by hard work and self-denial, and $5 the proceeds of a candy-pulling. (We prefer the former method.) After hearing reports, the different delegates read papers on the following subjects: "God's Command to Us," "General Statistics," "The Condition of Heathen Women," "Duties of Every Member," "The Lord Hath Need of Thee." The key-note of these papers was, "No missions, no Christianity," and the earnestness with which their papers were delivered was an evidence that this work has taken deep root in the hearts of the women, which will tell for God and humanity. A good layman closed the services with a very earnest exhortation to the brethren, whom, he said, ought to be ashamed of themselves for letting these women and children double them in raising funds for the missionary cause. His words were from a heart burning with the love of God and a desire to help his fellowman, and were full of encouragement to us all. I thank God for this woman's work. I find that those who are engaged in it are becoming more spiritual; they do more at home, more for God, more for the church, more for the preacher; and one good brother says his wife has become a better wife and mother since she began missionary work. Now she prays with her children, which before she did not. I always take a back seat when good women have anything on hand. It will be a dead church I ever serve without a missionary society.

Trouble in the W. C. T. U. in Mississippi.

The Picayune published the following dispatch, which indicates that some of the women of the W. C. T. U. in Mississippi are somewhat uneasy at the turn affairs are taking on the "woman suffrage question" in that order. We give the dispatch as published.

Mrs. Emily Kerr, president of the Brandon Union; Mrs. W. P. Slive, secretary; Mrs. Hulbut, president of the Meridian Union; Miss McLaurin and Miss Purnell, all ladies of prominence in the W. C. T. U., have addressed an open letter to the order in this State, in reference to its dealing with political questions.

The following extract is the chief feature: "Four years ago the convention at Columbus found it necessary to pass a resolution declaring the Union to be non-partisan, pledged to temperance and moral reform. The next convention, at Natchez, reaffirmed this declaration. In 1889, at Crystal Springs, the convention, against much opposition, finally passed strong political resolutions. At Oxford, in 1890, the passing of the resolution of unqualified endorsement of the National Union implied unequivocal support of woman's suffrage. During the past two years speakers have been present and have spoken in many places for woman suffrage. Our own State organ, the White Ribbon, has lately come out, as a supplement, a strong document by Mrs. Wallace on the same subject. These actions, we believe, have been hurtful to our organization and have hindered the growth and activity of our Unions. With this conviction, and with a desire to arrest further unwise action, we deem it important to call attention to these points. As a Christian organization, we believe it a duty to be honest in conviction, fearless and explicit in action. We do not wish to restrict or censure private opinion; but we hold that the discussion of this subject belongs to the Woman's Suffrage Association, and not to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. We believe it necessary to make a declaration of our position. If the Union has a majority of members who are women suffragists, and wish to adopt the policy of the National Union, they have that right; but if the majority is opposed to that action, they have equally a right to define their position. This letter is addressed to the Unions solely to induce them to instruct their delegates, so they may be prepared, in voting on these points, to voice the sentiments of their Unions. We hope they will respond to these suggestions by prompt and decisive action."

MEMOIRS OF PRINCE TALLEYRAND. Vol. I. By Duc De Broglie. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, $2.50.

Here are the memoirs of one of the most remarkable men of modern times. His career began with Louis XVI., and ended under Louis Phillippe. He served, in all, eight masters. In diplomatic skill and success he was considered the first man of his period. It is said that only Bismarck and Cavour since his day, have exorted as wide influence. The memoirs of such a man can but be exceedingly interesting. Mr. Whitelaw Reid, in the introduction to these memoirs, says: "Those who seeks details of the author's life will be disappointed. They are obviously meant to be the elaborate vindication of a great career. The one controlling aim of Prince Talleyrand was to elucidate and vindicate his own large part in the events of his time." The opening carries us back to the most stirring period of European history, and the events as they were seen and manipulated by the wiliest of diplomats.

Sunday-School Lesson—April 26.

Nineveh Brought to Repentance.

Jonah III, 1-10.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here."—Luke xi, 32.

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. The Preacher. II. The Congregation. III. The Sermon. IV. The Result.

I.—THE PREACHER.

Since we last met Jonah there has been a remarkable change in the man. Affliction is a wonderful restorative to humility and a sense of our own need. The student in God's university meets with tribulation throughout the entire curriculum of divine grace. They are a necessary part of the course. The necessity lies, however, not on God's part, but on ours. Pride is our greatest obstacle to a godly life; its only cure is its total destruction. The best way to destroy anything is to show its utter inability to effect desired ends. No stronger light does the vile enormity of a haughty spirit show itself than when troubles assail the soul; hence the use of this method of treatment. Jonah going into the fish's belly and his coming out of the same mark forcibly the transition. The deliverance was made in one, the exit in another spirit. The interval was a period of contrition and profound heart-searching. His sense of need looked a crying-out unto God. His cry was of faith and received an answer. He reappears from the gloom of repentance, conscious of the fact that "salvation is of the Lord."

II.—THE CONGREGATION.

Perhaps no preacher ever went to his charge with more sincere reluctance than did Jonah. Surely this was an unsolicited appointment. To augment matters the embarrassment was mutual. Not only had he failed to visit, but, moreover, he had not been the recipient of a call from this people. Then, aside from all this, although to the forward appearance a so unaulted to each other, we shall see that, in a spiritual light, there could not have been a wiser choice. That great city, Nineveh, of three days' journey in circuit, exceeding populous and abundant in crime and wickedness as a people, was to be the scene of the labors of a single man. He was to be thrown single-handed into that seething vortex of idolatry and sensualism, and battle as best he might. In no other case has been given such a lasting memorial to the truth of God's messages. That this one prophet—and it is to be hoped he was the weakest of all God's servants—that this one should be the means of accomplishing such a great work, proves conclusively that it was but an instrument, and serves to illustrate the apostle's assertion—"We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of men."

Nineveh, the seat of Oriental despotism, the veritable hothod of a nation's iniquities, the fountain-source of moral pollution—this, to all appearances, impregnable stronghold of sin was to be stormed by words from the mouth of fearful Jonah. No wonder he shuddered; no wonder he might to lay aside a task so herculean. Be cautious about dubbing Jonah a coward until you have received a like message directed to a like destination!

III.—THE SERMON.

The preaching of Jonah is a monumental argument against the all-too-common "long discourse." But brevity does not necessarily postulate wisdom. The virtue of terseness lies in its effectiveness. This Jonah possessed. He had a message direct from the mouth of God. The preacher had somewhat modified, but the message had not. "Go, preach the message that I bade thee," was the second time and that reached his ears. In its delivery he did not seek to please itching ears, nor did he manifest any desire to captivate his audience by any of the graces of oratory. His words were directed to the consciences of his hearers. It was designed to arouse the slumbering watchers of the soul and to produce a mighty conviction of sin in an uncouth garb, and with monotonous wail, he traversed the beautiful streets of that city brought to judgment, and rolled upon its terrified inhabitants the fearful weight of ongoing punishment: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be destroyed." No wonder there was a stir! The arrow struck hit the mark. Conscience had found the objective point; and now, aroused and thoroughly aroused, it is raging like a wild beast. The success of preaching is largely determined by the object of the preacher. Directed to the heart, it will not fail of its legitimate fruit. As Jonah, the model Hebrow, the man of strict reference to the principles that dominate his race; as he, in all his exclusiveness, looked upon that heathen city meriting naught but the harsh rod of justice, his indignation rose to its highest pitch. As he saw the city flourishing, his zeal for the glory of Jehovah fanned into an all-consuming flame; his righteous soul was vexed by the vile practices of that wicked people. He went in for "conviction."

IV.—THE RESULT.

Jonah's expectation was not long kept waiting; his message so urgent had been faithfully and fervently delivered. The messenger had nothing more to do with the matter. Men are not to be by the results in the matter of the preaching of the gospel; they are with God. The Spirit working in the hearts and consciences of the hearers is the all-powerful working power. And who can measure that power? A mighty city bows low in the dust of humility; is brought to repentance of sin and a turning after God. These are the two points: We do not want righteousness unless we do not want sin.

The moral of all this wonderful story is summed up by our Lord in the Golden Text: "The men of Nineveh shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and condemn it: for they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here." See to it lest wicked Nineveh be your judge!

Beaten.

Goldsmith said that the greatest thing Frederick the Great ever did was to promptly and candidly acknowledge that he lost a great battle by his own fault. It is a hard matter to acknowledge defeat, but we must make the confession. We make the confession not only for ourselves, but for every Methodist preacher in Mississippi and Louisiana. We have been beaten fairly and squarely, and beaten by a North Carolinian. After what follows we know our preachers will have no more to say about poundings, etc. Here is the North Carolinian's description:

O, ye Advocate! Make haste—speed thee on thy mission—mount the iron horse, bid him bear thee through the land.

Spread abroad thy pure white leaves, compass the old North State. May every homo throw wide its doors to receive you; may every heart listen to your wonderful messages of love, tenderness and life! As ye go tell this story until every Methodist preacher, from Carpenter the Great to Reid the Daniel, shall have felt the thrilling, stirring, elevating, filling, joyful, ham-y, coff-ee, rice-y, homin-y, preserv-ey, sugar-y, experience through which McCullen was forced by the church in Warrenton on the night of April 1, 1891.

Storms, cyclones, poundings, exeunt all.

"The Constitution as It Is."

It is an acknowledged fact that a medicine may have a beneficial effect in one case, but not in another. When any "specific" or well-known medicine fails, the case is either pronounced "Chronic" or the patient is made the subject of experiments. All this, of course, is "in the interest of science." And the patient! We had almost lost sight of him. He is "as well as could be expected." But why is it that medical skill is so often set at nought, and why does medicine so often fail? May it not be owing to the difference in the constitutions of the patients? Now in law, there is generally not more than one, or at least, two constitutions for several millions of persons, but in medicine, each patient has one of his own. Medicines have not always the same effects upon different persons. "One man's meat is another man's poison." But, has no remedy been discovered which never injures and is alike beneficial to all, and is not Oxygen such a one? It is the vital element of the air we breathe. Everybody has tried it, and it agrees with all constitutions. But nature has combined it with nitrogen, and, administered in a pure state, it has not proved altogether satisfactory. But a happy combination of Oxygen with nitrogen, in such proportions as to render it much richer in the vital or life-giving element, has been discovered, and this is Compound Oxygen. We have hundreds of testimonials from patients who have tried it. You will find them in our brochure of 200 pages, a Treatise on Compound Oxygen, its nature and results. Brochure and Quarterly sent free. No other genuine than that manufactured by DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

Louisiana Notes.

The Methodist Church at Minden will be remodelled and repaired.

A fire in Monroe, last week, destroyed about $13,000 worth of property.

The old Methodist Church at Floyd has been torn down preparatory to the building of a new one. That is good news.

It is said that work will begin in a short time on a railroad from Delhi, running northwards.

The police jury of the parish of Iberia has appropriated $500 for the use of the Interstate Mississippi River Improvement Levee Association.

The city council of Lafayette has appropriated $500 toward the establishment of the Lafayette High School, which, with other funds on hand, insures the building of the institution.

The Iberia and Vermillion Railroad Company has been organized at New Iberia. The object of the organization is to secure railroad connection between New Iberia and Abbeville. Evidently the railroad spirit is abroad in the land.

The Executive Committee of the Louisiana State Fair and Shreveport Exposition held a meeting yesterday and fixed the date for the holding of the next fair, which is to open on Tuesday, Nov. 3, and continue until Saturday, Nov. 8.—Caucasian.

St. Mary Banner has this encouraging note:

The crops throughout the parish are very good. The frosts the early part of the week hurt the vegetables and fruits some, but not seriously. The prospect for good gardens and crops are very encouraging. Flowers are plentiful and beautiful.

Work on the Chautauqua tabernacle, near Ruston, is progressing well. "Busy Bee," of the Shreveport Caucasian, says of it:

The tabernacle is to be 100 feet square, with a roof ten feet above the floor at the eaves, with the center of the building thirty-two feet high. The entire building is to be open, except the stage, which is to be enclosed with a movable wall in front, to be withdrawn when the whole stage is needed. The building will probably be finished by the last of May, when the State Press Association will meet in Ruston; at any rate we are authorized to say that the tabernacle will be ready, with its flags floating, by June 24, when the State Educational Association will meet there.

The Alexandria Town Talk says:

Immigrants looking for homes in Louisiana should not forget that Rapides parish, of which Alexandria is the capital, gives $10,000 per annum toward supporting its public schools. The result is that it has better schools and longer terms than any parish in Louisiana.

Mississippi Items.

West Point has subscribed $60,000 toward erecting a foundry.

A movement is on foot to secure the location of a jute factory at Meridian.

The New Orleans Building and Loan Association has established a branch of its business in Vicksburg.

The subject of establishing a cotton compress at Port Gibson is being discussed, and its early establishment is quite probable.

The governor, secretary of State and attorney general, constituting a board to fix the prices on certain public State lands, have determined to place on sale 30,000 acres of pine lands, which have recently been granted to the State by the United States, the same to be advertised for applicants. The price is fixed at $2 per acre.

According to a census recently taken Magnolia has a population of 798 persons: 437 whites and 361 colored. There are 132 adult white males and 134 adult white females; 94 white male children and 77 white female children. The count shows that Magnolia has 42 unmarried young ladies; 30 widows; 51 unmarried gentlemen and 10 widowers, and suggests that there is room for weddings.

There are seventy-five counties in Mississippi, and Washington is the largest, having a population of 40,414. Pearl River county is the smallest, with only a population of 2,957, and the next is Quitman, with 3,286.—Pascagoula Democrat-Star.

The Scott County Register says:

Most everybody that is able is between the plow handles. The farmers have had so much bad weather that they are several weeks behind in their work and are too busy to come to town, which accounts for the dullness in trade.

The Capital Commercial College is soon to be enlarged, in order to make room for its constantly increasing patronage. This school has grown wonderfully since its establishment here several years ago and is now the equal of any in the South. It is not only a credit to Jackson, but a monument to the State.—Mississippian.

The following dispatch has been published:

Captain W. H. Hardy, president of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad, who has been in Chicago and New York for a month, returned this morning and states that work is to be begun at once all along the line south of Hattiesburg and the road finished by Sept. 1, next, to that point. The contract has been signed with the Tobey Construction Company, of Chicago, to complete the road to Hattiesburg by the time named. The only delay now will be to have the contract ratified by the Board of Directors, which will be done next week.

Charming people, these exceptional people! Here's a medicine—Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for instance, and it's cured hundreds thousands that're known, thousands that're unknown, and yet yours is an exceptional case! Do you think that that bit of human nature which you call "I" is different from the other parcels of human nature? "But you don't know my case." Good friend, in ninety-nine out of a hundred cases, the causes are the same—impure blood—and that's why "Golden Medical Discovery" cures ninety-nine out of every hundred. You may be the exception. And you may not. But would you rather be the exception, or would you rather be well? If you're the exception it costs you nothing, you got your money back—but suppose it cures you?

Let the "Golden Medical Discovery" take the risk.

Advertising is a gear in the machine of a well-regulated store. It can not sell the goods itself; it only delivers the customer, as it were.—Milford (Mass.) Journal.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Without the newspaper great advertisers can not exist. Without the advertisers, great and small (but mainly the small advertisers), the newspaper of to-day would be impossible.—James H. Beals, Jr.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

FOR THE TOILET

There is no more useful or elegant article than Ayer's Hair Vigor—the most popular and economical hair-dressing in the market. It causes the hair to grow abundantly and retains the beauty and texture of youth; prevents baldness, heals troublesome humors of the scalp and keeps it clean, cool, and healthy. Both ladies and gentlemen everywhere prefer Ayer's Hair Vigor to any other dressing for the hair. Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, E. Pittston, Me., writes: "I Ask For have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time, and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with daudruff and failing hair, so that I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor, my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor to any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair."

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, April 23, 1891.

Briefs.

Our preachers' meeting, of this city, have resolved to hold a union communion service of all their members on the first Sunday night in May. The presiding elder has been requested to administer the service at that time.

In regard to preaching, it seems to us that the general trend of Bible teaching and the history of the pulpit is to this effect: No man can preach the doctrines of our religion successfully who has not experienced in his soul the facts upon which those doctrines rest. We believe that only such persons can preach at all. Anybody can read and get up an essay on justification, but only the justified man can preach it. And so of other doctrines. The preacher is a man whose heart is hot with the facts of experience, and, being a man in possession of the facts, when he speaks his word tells.

The census office has issued a bulletin giving the population of cities containing 8,000 inhabitants or more. The total urban population in 1890 was 18,235,670, or 29.12 per cent. of the total population. In 1880 the urban population was 11,318,537, or 22.57 per cent. of the world. The proportion of urban population has increased gradually during the past century from 3.35 to 26.12 per cent., or from one-thirtieth up to nearly one-third of the total population.

The increase has been quite regular from the beginning up to 1880, while from 1880 to 1890 it has made a leap from 23.87 to 29.12 per cent., thus illustrating in a forcible manner the accelerated tendency of our population toward urban life. The number of cities having a population of more than 8,000 increased from six in 1790 to 286 in 1880, whence it has leaped to 443 in 1890. In 1880 there was but one city—New York—which had a population in excess of a million. In 1890 there were three—New York, Chicago and Philadelphia. In 1870 there were but fourteen cities, each containing more than 100,000 inhabitants. In 1880 this number had increased to twenty and in 1890 to twenty-eight.

The Christian Woman's Exchange, in this city, has been a magnificent success. Starting ten years ago with a capital of $245, they have worked through fear and perplexity until now they have a net capital of over $34,000. In the past ten years the Exchange has paid out a total of $173,223 to deserving women through its various branches. During the past year 388 women have been benefited. There were 14 employees on monthly salaries and 19 on weekly salaries. The total receipts last year were $23,763, and the disbursements $23,172, leaving a balance of $590. The building is on South street, facing Lafayette Square, and contains 25 rooms from which income is derived, and last year the rentals averaged $265 per month. The lunch department brought in over $13,000; the sales department over $6,000; the library, $670. Besides these departments, there is a creche, or day nursery, in which, last year, 1,896 children were cared for, the average expense of each child being only 33 cents. Lately a "children's dressmaking department" has been added. Mrs. R. M. Walmsley is president of the Exchange, and she has the co-operation of many of the first women of the city—and they are doing a noble work.

Hearing the Word.

Good hearing is as essential to the success of the gospel as good preaching. And the want of success that is apparent in many places is as much attributable to faulty hearing as to weak preaching. Perhaps, if we would examine closely into the causes that obstruct the rapid progress of the gospel, we would find that one of the most inveterate obstructions is indifferent hearing. We know that it is usual to attribute the slow movement of the kingdom of God over the earth to the indifferent preaching that prevails to some extent almost everywhere; but we are inclined to believe that such an opinion is not altogether correct. It is true that a good deal that passes for preaching is no preaching at all. It is true that there is not a great deal of real, enthusiastic proclamation of the good news. It is true that real good preachers "are few and far between." But it is also true that there is a good deal that passes for hearing that is no hearing at all, and that there is not a great deal of real, enthusiastic listening to the good news, and that real good hearers are very scarce. It is a very strange thing that there should ever be poor preaching, but it is a stranger thing that there should ever be poor hearing. People seem to forget that individual salvation and growth in religious life depend as much upon hearing as upon preaching. Indeed, these two can not be separated without destroying the effect of both. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." The preaching may be never so good, and yet indifferent, careless hearing will destroy all its power. Even poor preaching will be saved from utter defeat by careful and anxious hearing. But when enthusiastic preaching comes from the warm heart of an earnest preacher and falls upon the attentive ear of an enthusiastic hearer, then the "power of the gospel unto salvation" is manifested.

A good preacher has been defined as a man "who has something to say to his hearers that is worth their hearing, and says it." So a good hearer may be defined as one "who is on the watch for something worth hearing, and if it is said, he hears it." We once heard a preacher say that he never heard a sermon, no matter how poor, in which he did not hear something that he wished he could say in his own preaching. He was a good hearer. He was on the lookout for something worth hearing, and, according to his own testimony, he always got it. But we fear such hearers are not as numerous now-a-days as they should be. Too much of present-day hearing is critical. The hearers are on the lookout for something to criticise, rather than for something to do them good. It is true here, as elsewhere, that a man generally finds what he looks for. Anybody can criticise adversely any preacher in the land, but the justest criticism may not do the soul any good. If, however, a man is on the watch for some word that shall deepen conviction or strengthen faith or broaden love, however weak that word may be, when he finds it, he will realize that, by some mysterious process, it does the very thing he wants it to do. Good hearing, then, is not evidenced by opinions given in regard to the manners and methods of the preacher, but by the interest manifested in his message.

Then, again, many people attend preaching who seem never to have given even a passing thought to their responsibility for the manner in which they listen to the gospel message. This responsibility is as grave as any that men ever bear, and it results from the fact already stated, that preaching and hearing can not be separated. Men are saved by faith, and "faith cometh by hearing." In the light of the teachings of our Lord, we doubt if the preacher's responsibility is any greater than the hearer's. Indeed, we are inclined to think that the teaching of Christ puts the burden of a heavier responsibility upon the hearer. The gospel is "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth," but believing comes by hearing. Even "the power of God unto salvation" depends upon a proper attitude of the hearer. Poor hearing renders a rich gospel poor. Weak hearing weakens a powerful gospel. It is not so much what the preacher says, or how he says it, as it is how it is heard. Hence our Lord's injunction: "Take heed how ye hear."

There is another thought which we may state. Somehow there is a proneness in men to get at spiritual things in a backward way. The Scripture proverb is almost invariably quoted, "Like priest, like people," when the fact is it is precisely the other way—"Like people, like priest" (Isaiah xxiv, 2; Hosea iv, 9). So in this matter of preaching and hearing. There are many people who think that good preaching produces good hearing; but the fact is just the reverse—good hearing produces good preaching. We have not space in this article to elaborate this point, but simply throw out this challenge. Brother, no matter who your preacher is; if you will give him the right sort of hearing, you will never again complain of his preaching, and his preaching will make you "strong in the Lord and in the power of his might." This being the case, we reiterate our Lord's injunction: "Take heed how ye hear."

A Want—A Suggestion.

It seems to us that, as a church, we ought to be seeking some new enterprises in which to display Christian benevolence. Many of our people are well-to-do in worldly affairs; indeed, some of them are growing rich. Are they to go on gathering money until they surround themselves with the danger of riches, and thus lessen their hopes of heaven? Such persons ought to have the opportunity and privilege of employing their money on lines of practical, every-day benevolence; places to invest their means, where under their own eyes they could see them working beautifully and successfully for the good and substantial benefit of the worthy and needy poor.

In every community there are people, worthy people, who need help, not charity. There is many a man whose manhood has not been broken, whose honor is untarnished, yet who is down through unforeseen and uncontrollable circumstances. Such a man does not need, nor does he ask for, charity. What he needs is help. A little judicious help afforded in a genuine Christian spirit would soon set such a man on his feet again and give him a start that would end in prosperity. There is many a woman, good and true, who by means of misfortune, brought on through the fault or rascality of some one else, is drinking the dregs of bitterness and living a hopeless life, to whom a little help would be a veritable God-send, and make her heart sing for joy. There are boys and girls, homeless and parentless, to whom wise help at the proper time would insure a life of honor and extended usefulness. The average Christian rarely thinks of the fact that these very people constitute the only legacy Christ left to his church. He said: "The poor ye have always with you, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good."

In our city there are many of this class, and in the face of the fact that they have been committed to the care of the church by her Lord, yet, as a church, we are doing very little for their help. It is true that individual churches have their "poor lists," and they dole out a few dollars every month to those who are so unfortunate as to have their names on those lists. But we fear this process has done almost as much harm as good. Next to help from God, self-help is the best. Such a plan as is now pursued does not develop self-help, and the beneficiaries remain on the poor lists for all time to come. Manhood and womanhood are not appealed to and are rarely evolved by such a process. What is needed among our churches is some kind of system by which the needs of our poor may be supplied in such a way that they will see the opportunity and seize it of supplying their own necessities. A "Methodist Home," with a few acres of ground attached, where work of various kinds could be pursued, it seems to us, would be a good thing for the Methodists of New Orleans to establish. What do our laymen and brethren in the ministry think of it? Send us a brief expression of your views.

The Location of Millsaps College.

Feeling that something should be said, through our Conference organ, by a member of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College from North Mississippi, and seeing that no member has written, I ask the privilege of thus speaking to those whom I, in part, represent.

For years I have been one of that small minority which believed it necessary to have a Methodist male college in Mississippi. Feeling that the church, in her general interests, can not be divided by State nor Conference lines, I hailed with exquisite pleasure the offer of the Mississippi Conference, and that also of Major Millsaps, which made the erection and support of a Methodist male college in Mississippi a possibility. Since my appointment on the Joint Committee, and later on the Board of Trustees, I have tried to rid myself of all Conference or local prejudice, and look alone to the good of the college, and through the college to the good of our people. After attending every meeting of the Joint Committee and Board of Trustees, I grant to every man on the Board just what I claim for myself. In reaching our conclusions I presume each man pursued his own course of argument, and adopted the best methods to secure that which he believed the wisest thing. I believed that it ought to be located in "North Mississippi;" but men, my brethren, as good, as wise, as true as I, believed, under all the circumstances, that Jackson was the place for the college. Bishop Galloway, who lives at Jackson, knows all its environments, and who is, doubtless, further removed from local influences and Conference relations than any member of the Board, thought it ought to go to Jackson. He supported his belief with his influence and action, knowing that for a while, at least, he would sacrifice the kindly appreciation of some of his North Mississippi friends; but there come times in the course of every true man's life when he must follow the path of honest, matured judgment, though friendships falter and enemies rage. Believing every member of the Board has been true to his matured judgment, and true to the church and Conference which put upon him the responsibility of this work, I subscribe to the location of the college at Jackson, where it will have the constant oversight and patronage of its most generous Christian benefactor; where it will have the watchcare of Bishop Galloway, and the support of his large influence; where its very presence will command the attention of every observing citizen of the State, and even of every such visitor; where the Mississippi Conference desired it, as far as that desire can be known from the vote of its members on the Board; where students from all sections of the State can go without much inconvenience or large cost; where the advantages are greater, in some respects, than at any other place in the State; where the moral influences of Mississippi can be focalized, and the organized evils of to-day throttled about as easily as anywhere else; where a great victory for Christian education and pure religion would affect the whole State for incalculable good.

I subscribe to the location at Jackson, and ask what is our duty? Certainly not to strangle this child of Christian effort with the poisonous breath of unwise opposition. This college and this location are the outcome of too much self-denial, too much prayer, too much faith, too much honest effort not to demand the careful thought and wise reflection of all who believe in a God of providence. Our Baptist brethren, with their small college at Clinton, near Jackson, have affected their people for good even to the farthest limit of our State. Are we less able, are we less wise than they? What is our duty? To come, as one man, to the support of the institution, and, by divine help, make it an inestimable blessing to this and all the ages of Mississippi.

THOS. J. NEWELL.

A Pleasant Trip.

The writer enjoyed a trip to Ocean Springs, on Saturday last, where he was elegantly entertained at the typical Methodist Southern home of Col. and Mrs. Wm. R. Stuart, both well known for their warm-heartedness and Christian hospitality. Sister Stuart, who for over twenty-seven years was bedridden, has for the past six years been slowly recovering, so that she is able, accompanied by her faithful nurse, to walk about the house and grounds. Her patient, gentle submission to God's will through all these years of trial have preached sermons to many. God be praised for his loving kindness to our church for giving us such Methodists as Bro. and Sister Stuart!

The congregation at the M. E. Church, South, Sunday morning, while not large, was very attentive, which was also true of the Sunday-school, superintended by Bro. Shannon, a faithful local preacher. The song service, conducted by Bro. Wm. R. Stuart, was charming. Mrs. Webb presided at the organ; a lady friend adding much to the music by playing the violin.

Ocean Springs is improving very fast. Over ten new houses, mostly residences, are now being erected. It is a delightful place to live in. So thinks Bishop Keener, who selected this place for his summer home years ago.

M.

We understand that a fine Christian work is being developed and enterprised in Carondelet Sunday-school. It is known that there are many poor families who have a hard struggle to live. It is very difficult for them to secure work that will give them wages sufficient to procure the necessaries of life. The matter being brought to the attention of the Sunday-school by the superintendent, we understand that seven classes have agreed to help give relief by each contributing enough to procure books and clothing for one boy or girl, and in this way lessen the heavy burden. We are glad to note this evidence of Christian benevolence growing among our young people. Such acts are worthy of commendation and imitation.

Notes.

A man's "theological opinions" and his "religious faith" are not necessarily at one. Sincerity of faith may be entirely consistent with error of opinion. Many good men have a bad theology.

To suppose that difficulties are solved when they are only evaded is a delusion which has led many people into a quietude that is more harmful than a continuous struggle for victory. The quiet that comes from victory is very different from that which comes from supineness.

The Legislature of Louisiana passed an act in 1886, making the retailing of liquor without a license a criminal offense, and last week was the first time anybody was ever convicted under the act. Judge Baker gave the criminal the option of $100 or one month in the parish prison. Signs are brightening.

Dr. Stephenson, in the Sunday Magazine, speaking of the religious life Wesley advocated, says: "It recognizes that if a man would win and enjoy heaven, he must bring the very spirit of Christ into the life of earth, devoting himself to Christ's service by serving, everywhere and always, the poor, the downcast, and the downtrodden for Christ's sake; and is not this exactly the religion that is wanted to-day?"

Talleyrand was considered the foremost and first man of public affairs of his time. He was also considered by nearly everybody the worst man of his time. His licentiousness, treachery, deceit and monstrous venality can never be erased from history, or disproved; yet even he could not stomach the lotteries. His biographer says, "He urged the suppression of the lotteries." And we are coolly urged in favor that evil that even a Talleyrand could not stand.

Don't be disturbed, brother, by the proclamations of the infidels that Christianity is dying. Doubtless, it has died out of their hearts, and they speak truly as far as their experience goes, but no Christian will ever doubt the truth of religion as long as the historic facts of religion are verified in his own experience. Every man who can say with Paul, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me," has an evidence for the truth of religion that can never be successfully assailed.

This, from the Interior, shows the consistency and morality of our highest legislative body:

The Senate of the United States, in the closing days of its late session, voted, under the pressure of neglected business, to continue at work all day Sunday. But in the meanwhile a member of the body having died, adjourned "out of respect to his memory." The question arises, whether the living God is not as deserving of respect as a dead senator.

At the funeral of a prominent Methodist preacher of the Northern Church one of the speakers said:

He knew how to fill his church by filling his pulpit. He went there with a message burning in his soul; uttered it as a man sent of God. The people flocked to hear and heed him, and they had need to go early to find place.

We commend this to our young brethren in the ministry. Our observation is that the man who has a "message burning in his soul" will have many eager hearers.

We call the attention of those brethren who are continually harping about a cheaper paper to two little items published in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, of April 8:

J. W. Burke did furnish the papers to clubs at $1.50. At this price J. W. Burke & Co. turned over to us 6,000 subscribers. We sell the paper at $2, as the trustees directed, and, at this price, have now 8,000 subscribers.

J. W. Burke & Co. lost by the Advocate at $1.50, $3,200; that is, their expenses were $3,200 more than their receipts at $1.50 per year.

If we lose $3,200, who will pay it?

A layman of wide acquaintance and a prominent man in one of the patronizing Conferences, made a remark to us, not long since, which we were pained to hear, and we sincerely hope that he is mistaken. He said: "Our young ministers are not growing. They are not studying. I don't know of but one who is improving as he ought." We regard this as the most serious statement we have heard in a long time. We know that this layman does not talk at random. We know also that he knows many of our young ministers, and his remark pained us exceedingly. There never was a time when the church needed able and capable men as leaders of her hosts more than at present. If our young ministers do not "study to show themselves approved of God;" if they do not study in order to be able to give the people the deep things of the gospel, then in a few years our church will be in a sad plight. Infidelity and sin were never so outspoken as now, nor were the arguments against the truth ever urged more strongly than to-day, and if our young men are not training in every possible way for the battle, our defeat will not delay long. We do sincerely hope that our lay brother has made a mistake in this matter.

Personal and Otherwise.

Bro. Dominick, our colporteur at Jackson, Miss., desires us to say that he has a large supply of programs for Children's Day on hand, and will be glad to furnish all the bretbren with as many as they wish. We bope the brethren will celebrate the day at every appointment. We must look to the children, or fail in the future.

The Methodist Ecumenical Conference will be held in Washington City, beginning Oct. 7 and ending Oct. 20.

Hugh Price Hughes, the superintendent of West London Mission, and editor of the Methodist Times, accompanied by his wife, will sail for this country on the City of New York, Sept. 16. He is a delegate to the Ecumenical Conference.

Commodore W. W. Hunter, an honored citizen of this place, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday last week.

We would be greatly obliged to the brethren, if when they collect money for the ADVOCATE, they would send it forward as soon as possible. We need it all, and we need it all the time.

After our paper was printed last week, in which we had a note concerning our mayor's action in regard to the concert saloons, the mayor took fresh conrage and closed up the saloons promptly at midnight. If he had done it at first, he would have saved himself some adverse criticism. Nothing is so popular as prompt discharge of duty.

One of our exchanges says: "Some persons attend church on the European plan—they sleep there and get the food elsewhere!"

The St. Louis Christian Advocate announces that Rev. J. W. Lowrance has resigned his position as assistant-editor and business manager of that paper, that he may enter again the pastorate. Dr. M. B. Chapman, of Little Rock, has been elected associate-editor with Rev. W. B. Palmore, while Dr. McAnally remains editor-in-chief.

The Arkansas Methodist announces that Dr. Chapman will remove to St. Louis as soon as his successor has been appointed. The Doctor is serving First Church in Little Rock. We congratulate the St. Louis Advocate in securing the services of Dr. Chapman on its editorial staff. He is a native of Louisiana, and "knows what's what."

Don't send obituaries to the publisher. He has nothing to do with them. Several very awkward mistakes have occurred because obituaries have been addressed to the publisher.

Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, president of Edward McGebee College, Woodville, Miss., and Dr. T. C. Wier, of Starkville, Miss., gave us pleasant calls last Tuesday.

Bro. Sawyer will begin a meeting in Felicity Street Church next Monday night.

Rev. George S. Inge will begin a meeting in Hazlehurst, Miss., on the second Sunday in May. Ample preparations have been made, and everybody is invited, and accommodations will be provided for all.

Dr. D. C. Kelley will spend the last week in April and the first week in May making prohibition speeches in Mississippi. Oxford, Winona, Clinton, Jackson, Brookhaven, Meridian, Columbus and Corinth will all be visited.

The Supreme Court of the United States has rendered a final decision in the celebrated Gaines case. In some form or other this case has been in the courts for over fifty years. Mrs. Gaines spent an immense amount of money to secure what she considered her rights, and the case has at last been decided in favor of her grandchildren. The decree fixes the total claim against the city of New Orleans at about $800,000. Now the question comes, How can the city to raise such a sum of money?

The infamous Schoenhausen, the keeper of the concert saloon, now threatens to sue for damages the ladies who petitioned Mayor Shakespeare to put him up, and the Picayune for exposing his conduct in its columns. This fellow has been a law-breaker so long without molestation that he thinks he can still do as he pleases. We are satisfied this community will not much longer silently endure his infamous ways.

The voting on the woman question is going on among our brethren of the Northern Church. At last accounts those in favor numbered 1,735; against, 146.

Millsaps College will be located on the Hemingway property, north of Jackson. There are fifty-eight acres of land, and a residence said to be worth $10,000.

The annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana meets to-day in Grunewald Hall.

The most distinguished French Protestant pastor and author, Edmond De Pressense, died recently, aged sixty-seven.

A bald-headed woman is unusual before she is 40, but gray hair is common with them earlier. Baldness and gray-ness may be prevented by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. Ben. P. Jaco, preacher in charge of Panola circuit, writes: "Panola circuit is moving up well. The good people are rallying to the assistance of the young preacher, and we are looking forward to a prosperous year in the church, both materially and spiritually."

—Rev. G. E. Greene, Brodnax, La., writes: "Since my last report, our second quarterly meeting has been held at Bonita, in a house formerly used as a saloon. The occasion was a profitable one. Our new church at Jones' Station, near Arkansas, is in process of erection. Nearly all the framework is up. It will probably be sufficiently built to preach in by the second Sunday in May. Jones is one of the few railroad towns to build a church along with the stores and dwellings. This example should emulate other new towns to do likewise."

—Rev. J. L. Pierce writes from Shreveport, La.: "Easter Sunday, Shreveport Methodists contributed $278 for Scarritt Bible and Training-school. Who beats this? Dr. Potter was with us morning and night, and did good preaching. With better weather, congregations are increasing at all the services. Some accessions by ritual and certificate."

—Rev. B. F. Jones writes from Port Gibson, Miss.: "I am requested to say, through the ADVOCATE, that Dr. W. C. Black will preach the commencement sermon for our Port Gibson Female College on June 14, and Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt will deliver the literary address on June 16. The closing session has been prosperous and profitable. There will be eight graduates—all from abroad except one."

—Rev. W. E. Towson writes from Kobe, Japan: "Enclosed please find some 'notes.' All well at this writing. The work grows. The interest is increasing at nearly every point. Several have been baptized recently; our congregations are growing, and a number are inquiring the way of salvation. Our hearts have just been gladdened by a telegram from Yokohama announcing the safe arrival there of Rev. Simeon Shaw and wife, of Georgia, who have recently been appointed to the work here. God bless them!"

—Rev. J. W. Malone, pastor of Coldwater and Hernando station, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We have just closed a most excellent meeting at Coldwater. Results: A true and genuine revival in the church, and a class of nine new members received, with a hope of more to follow. This makes a total of nineteen since Conference. Last Sabbath was devoted to missions. The collection was the largest I ever raised from a single congregation at one time. Two-thirds of all the Conference collections now in sight. I will organize an Epworth League next Wednesday night. Rev. H. P. Gibbs, of Pleasant Grove circuit, rendered me most efficient help."

—Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy writes from Alexandria, La.: "I have just closed a very gracious protracted service at this place. The meeting was conducted in the old Methodist way. The preaching was in the 'demonstration and power of the Spirit.' The singing of the old hymns of our Zion proved to be a most effective means of imparting gospel truth. The meeting continued three weeks: One week of prayer, and two weeks of preaching at night by the Rev. P. A. Johnston, of the Brandon district, Mississippi Conference, with an informal service each morning. These morning meetings were the most spiritual that I have ever attended. There have been twenty accessions to the church since Conference, and the membership much revived. The general work of the church is well in hand and progressing. A parsonage society has been organized and is doing good work. A Woman's Missionary Society and a Juvenile Society are developing the cause of missions. There is growth, steady and healthy, for which the pastor returns grateful thanks to the great Head of the church."

—Rev. J. W. Raper reports from Fulton, Miss.: "I notice with a great deal of pleasure the interesing letters written by the various pastors in the North Mississippi Conference, and, seeing how well they are progressing with their work, can not restrain expressing my gratification of the outlook of progress of the work that is entrusted to my care, to wit: the Tremont circuit. I came on the work comparatively, a stranger, but I am proud to say that I have been thrown in the midst of an appreciative, God-serving and God-loving people. I can say that the circuit is in a state of improvement throughout, both spiritually and financially. I have ten churches—one of which is now in process of construction (Mt. Olive), which when completed will be one of the finest churches in Itawamba county. We anticipate having it dedicated by our presiding elder, J. B. Stone, as soon as it shall have been completed. I can not help but note with a great deal of appreciation the 'pounding' of the kind and benevolent people of the Pleasant Grove vicinity. They came in with wagons and some on horseback, bringing to us meat, corn and potatoes and some money, for which we were highly grateful."

NOTICES.

To the Pastors of Greenville District:

Dear Brethren: Will you please forward me the names of the delegates and members of the District Conference immediately, so that I can have the roll made out by the Conference.

C. H. OWEN.

If the brethren who have to spend the night in Durant, en route to District Conference at Lexington, will write me their names, homes will be provided for them. There will be preaching in Durant, Thursday night.

J. T. MOODY.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

There will be a meeting in the interests of the Woman's Missionary Society and of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, at Clarksdale, May 14, the day before District Conference. The L., N. O. and T. R. R. gives reduced rates on the certificate plan.

MISS M. R. ROBERTSON,
Dist. Sec. for P. and H. M. S.
MRS. ROBERT SOMERVILLE,
Dist. Sec. for W. M. S.

P. S.—Auxiliaries are reminded that there will be no meeting unless delegates are sent.

When I asked the preachers of the Winona district to send me the names of local preachers and delegates-elect to our District Conference, I neglected to include the Sunday-school superintendents and recording stewards; but I thought afterward that the brethren would include these names anyway. One brother says, "If you want the names of superintendents and recording stewards, write me." It would have taken less space and less time to write the names of these officers. Please write me every name I ought to have at once. J. C. LOWE.

Lexington, Miss.

To the Delegates of the Brandon District Conference, to Convene at Hickory, May 27-30:

When you buy ticket get certificate from agent that you paid full fare going, and this certificate, when signed by secretary of Conference, will entitle holders to tickets for return at one-third fare. I hope all delegates will come. We will take good care of you. Trains on which delegates come arrive 2:48 P. M. and 8:02 P. M. It will be better to come on Wednesday. If you wait until Thursday, you will miss the opening service. Come prepared to stay over until Monday.

Mr. Editor, we want you to come.

J. M. MORSE.

Newton, Miss.

To All Concerned in the District Conference of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference:

The Columbus District Conference will be held at Sturges, instead of Shuqualak, May 28-31. This change is due to no fault of the good people of Shuqualak. Sturges is on the Aberdeen branch of the Illinois Central railway. The mail train going east reaches there before eight A. M., and the local freight going west before eleven A. M. The local freight will wait at Starkville for members coming on the morning M. and O. train, via Artesia. Will all the members please come as promptly as possible, and will the preachers please see that the Quarterly Conference records are brought for examination?

Let me urge that reports of charges be in writing, both for accuracy and as a favor to the secretary. The session will begin at ten o'clock A. M., Thursday, May 28. Bishop C. B. Galloway is expected to preside.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN, P. E.

Dear Sir:

To introduce it, we will give away to those who are sick or ailing or suffering from weakness or disease, and who would be likely to make good agents, if cured, one of our German Electro-Galvanic Belts, regular price $5 (U. S. Patent 357,647) invented by Prof. P. H. VanDerweyde Pres. of N. Y. Electrical Society and late Professor of Chemistry of N. Y. Medical College. ($500 Reward for any Belt we manufacture that does not generate a genuine Electric current.) They are daily making most marvelous cures in cases of Rheumatism, Lost Vitality, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Diseases, Lung Troubles, Nervous Debility, and many other ailments in which medicine fails. Would you like to try one? If so, address at once

German Electric Belt Agency, Brooklyn, N. Y.

It is unsurpassed for the relief and cure of all Throat and Lung Troubles. Coughs, Colds and Incipient Consumption yield readily to its medicinal virtues.

TESTIMONIAL.

LINDEN, ALA.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

In which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.
2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.
3. It never swaps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.
4. It does not patch simply It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.
5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

Circulars with testimonials, etc., mailed free. For sale by druggists, and by Kit Williams, agent, 202 Canal St., N. O. Price, prepaid, $1 per bottle. Six bottles for $5.

A Good Cyclopedia.

"The COLUMBIAN CYCLOPEDIA seems to me to strike a happy medium between the loose, superficial works and the too elaborate and profound ones, which few are competent or desirous of using. Most of the larger general cyclopedias are overloaded with a mass of technical science and official detail that is embarrassing and useless to ordinary readers. The COLUMBIAN is eminently practical, sufficiently full, and carefully compiled, well got up, convenient in form and extent, remarkably cheap, and, as I should judge, admirably adapted to families and general consultation. I think that if properly presented to the public, it will have a very wide sale, and be an exceedingly useful work. There is ample room in the market for a Cyclopedia like this, which combines, likewise, the advantage of being an excellent Dictionary of the English Language."—PROF. JAMES STRONG, S. T. OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

HOE OUT YOUR ROW.

One day a lazy farmer's boy
Was hoeing out his corn,
And moodily had listened long
To hear the dinner horn;
The welcome blast was heard at last,
And down he dropped his hoe.
But the good man shouted in his ear,
"My boy, hoe out your row."

Although a "hard one" was the row—
To use a ploughman's phrase—
And the lad, as sailors have it,
Beginning well to "haze"—
"I can," said he; and manfully
He seized again his hoe;
And then the good man smiled to see
The boy "hoe out his row."

The lad the text remembered long,
And proved the moral well,
That perseverance to the end
At last will nobly tell.
Take courage, man, resolve you can,
And strike a vigorous blow;
In life's great field of varied toil,
Always hoe out your row.

MR. EDITOR: You kindly published my former letters, so I am encouraged to write again. I started to school about two months ago, but took the measles and had to stop. My! how sick I was. Did you ever have measles, Doctor? (Yes, when at school, too.—EDITOR.) I am getting well now. I love to go to school better than anything I ever did. I tried to make a bargain with my teacher, Bro. R. B. Smith, to teach me on Saturdays. I hope after a while to go to Millsaps College. I have a canary; and it would do you good to hear him sing. Sister had a little black kitten, but gave him to Mr. Jarvis, up at our store. I believe Mr. Jarvis will be an old maid—he loves canaries and kittens better than any man you ever saw. But then he loves girls, too. Besides my little sister, of whom I wrote you, I have a little brother. He is nearly three months old, and can say "mama" real plain, I think. He is the funniest little fellow you ever saw. Bro. R. A. Meek is our preacher this year. We love him. This is his first year, but you wouldn't think so were you to hear him. I tell you, Doctor, we have good preachers. Last year our Sunday-school gave $88 to Millsaps College, and on Easter Sunday, this year, gave $16.35 to our training-school. And now Children's Day is coming on. By the way, Mr. Editor, our Conference will have to get up some needy schools, or else start a "sub-treasury" scheme to get rid of our collections. If the money is not needed, as the report of our Sunday-school Board seems to indicate, maybe we had better quit collecting it; or, better still, pay it to a cause that does need it, and can use it. "Them's my sentiments."

Your friend,
DAVID L. BINGHAM.
Carrollton, Miss.

P. S.—The Presbyterian Conference will meet here this month. Come up to see us, Doctor. D. L. B.

When once used, you will, like others, call for Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, and nothing else.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your last a communication from I. Smith. I agree with him in some things. I am a Methodist, and belong to the Wesson Lillies. I am not much to blow folks. Let them be like Mr. Lindrose; blow their own horn. Yes, Capt. Oliver and Dr. Sexton are the two largest men in town—especially just after dinner. Bro. West is a little more than a fair preacher; also loves chicken. We all like him very much. As it is getting about dinner time, I will close by asking a question: How many times is the word "coat" found in the Bible?

Yours truly,
A. LINFIELD SMITH.
Wesson, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I have just read a letter from Janie Blackwell, asking someone to tell her the number of verses and letters in the New Testament. It has 27 books, 269 chapters, 7,959 verses, 181,153 words, and 838,380 letters. This is my first letter to your paper. My papa is a Methodist preacher, and we live in Lexington, Miss. I am ten years old. I am learning music, and my teacher says I am getting on nicely. I want to learn to play well, so I can play the organ for my papa.

Your little friend,
MARY E. LOWE.
Lexington, Miss.

Little Ethel went to church with her grandmother, and for the first time put ten cents on the contribution plate. Leaning over she whispered very audibly, "That's all right, grandma; I paid for two."

MR. EDITOR: I am a girl ten years old. I have got three pets: two little squirrels and one baby sister. You ought to see my sister play with the cat. We have no Sunday-school. I wish I could get to go to school all the time. Our preacher is Bro. Sanders. He has been on this work two years. I like him very much. I will close by asking the little cousins a question: Who was Christ's father? Hoping my first letter will not reach the waste-basket, I remain, as ever,
M. E. MATTOCK.
Redland, La.

Obeying Pleasantly.

Little Harry had seen some older boys fly their kites from the tops of the houses, and he thought it would be nice fun if he could do so, too. So he came to his aunt, and said.

"Aunt Mary, can I go up to the top of the house and fly my kite?"

His aunt wished to do everything that was proper to please him; but she thought this was very unsafe, so she said:

"No, Harry, my boy: I think that is a very dangerous sort of play. I'd rather you wouldn't go."

"All right. Then I'll go out on the bridge," said Harry.

His aunt smiled, and said she hoped he would always be as obedient as that.

"Harry, what are you doing?" said his mother on one occasion.

"Spinning my new top, mother."

"Can't you take the baby out to ride? Get out the carriage, and I'll bring him down."

"All right!" shouted the boy, as he put his top away in his pocket, and hastened to obey his mother.

"Uncle William, may I go over to the store this morning?" said Harry, one day at breakfast. "I want to see those baskets again that I was looking at yesterday."

"Oh, yes, Harry," said his uncle; "I shall be very glad to have you."

"But I can not spare you today, Harry," said his mother. "I want you to go out with me; you shall go to the store another time."

"All right," said Harry, and went on eating.

No matter what Harry was asked to do, or what refusal he met with when asking for anything, his constant answer was, "All right." He never asked, "Why can't I?" or "Mustn't I?" Harry not only learned to obey, but he had learned to obey in good humor.—Little Christian.

"While your mode of address, sir, seems to me to savor of undue, not to say unwarrantable, familiarity, you shall have the information you seek. You will perchance descry, some distance up the street, an imposing structure of commingled Renaissance and early Venetian architecture. The street for which you inquire is immediately contiguous."

HOUSEHOLD.

Overneighborly.

Mother has often told me of a funny time she had when she was quite a young housekeeper, afflicted with a borrowing neighbor. This lady seldom had anything of her own at hand when it was wanted, so she depended upon the obliging disposition of her friends. One day my mother put on her large house-keeping apron, and stepped across the yard to her out-door kitchen. The kitchens in Kentucky were never a part of the house, but always a little distance from it, in a separate building.

"Aunt Phyllis," said my mother to the cook who was browning coffee grains in a skillet over the fire, "I thought I told you that I was coming here to make pound-cake and cream pies this morning. Why is nothing ready?"

"La me, Miss Emmeline!" replied Aunt Phyllis, "Miss Tilda Jenkins done carried off every pie pan and rolling-pin and pastry-board, and borrowed all de eggs and cream fo' herself. Her bakin' isn't mo'n begun." This was a high-handed proceeding, but nothing could be done in the case. It was Mrs. Jenkins' habit, and mother had always been so amiable about it that the servants, who were easy-going, never troubled themselves to ask the mistress, but lent the inconvenient borrower whatever she desired. Sometimes, just as we were going to church (I was too little at the time to remember) mother said that a small black boy, with very white teeth and a very woolly head, would pop up at her chamber door, exclaiming: "Howdy, Miss Emmeline. Miss Tilda done sent me to borrow yo' prayer-book. She's goin' to church to-day herself."

Or, of a summer evening, her maid would appear with a modest request for Miss Emmeline's lace shawl and red satin fan; Miss Tilda wanted to make a call, and had nothing to wear. All this, I think, made mother perfectly set against our ever borrowing so much as a slate pencil or pin. We were always to use our own things, or go without. I never had a sister, but cousins often spent months at the house, and went in and out of my room in the freest way, forever bringing me their gloves to mend or their ties to clean, as cousins will.

"Never borrow," said my mother. "Buy, or give away, or do without; but be beholden to nobody for a loan."—Harper's Young People.

Misunderstandings.

How many griefs and troubles which come to us in this world are purely the result of misunderstandings! We think people say what they never did say, or mean what they never did mean. We count men unreasonable and harsh: we fume and fret about matters which do not go to our liking; we complain about what men have said or done; and all this while the persons whom we are blaming meant nothing of the kind that we surmise, and know nothing whatever of our tribulations.

This is one reason why persons who have grievances should go at once to those concerned. They are often the only ones who know the truth, who can explain the misunderstanding, correct the error, or right the wrong. They can tell what they intended to say, or intended to do; and in a great many instances we shall find, on going to the proper parties, that we had utterly misapprehended the facts in the case, have judged others unkindly, and have made ourselves miserable for nothing. In many a case we shall find that we have taken offense where no offense was intended; that we have counted words harsh which were kindly meant; that light and tripping phrases which were carelessly thrown off, have been taken to heart as they never should have been; and that we have made ourselves and others miserable when there was no need of it whatever.

How many little misunderstandings stick, like a splinter in one's finger, until they make mischief and trouble that can not easily be remedied; and in how many cases five minutes' frank, honest talk would have settled the whole matter. The policy of silence at such times is a very dangerous policy, and many hearts have bled and suffered when a word would have healed them.—Selected.

SCIENTIFIC.

How Cablegrams Are Transmitted.

Keys which, when depressed, transmit positive and negative currents, are employed at the sending station in connection with the regulation battery. The current of the battery does not pass directly into the cable, but into a condenser, which passes it into the submarine line. This greatly increases the force of the current used, and serves to cut off interfering ground currents. The instrument first employed in receiving cablegrams was a reflecting galvanometer. Upon the magnet of this instrument is carried a small curved mirror. The lamp is placed before the mirror and behind a screen in which there is a vertical slit. Flashes of light moving across this slit, as the needles moved from left to right, indicated to the trained eye of the operator the letters in the message being transmitted. But this method of recording messages was found to tax the eye-sight of the operator severely, a few years' work often rendering them almost, if not totally, blind. Recognizing the fact that there must be something wrong with such a system, inventors set about repairing the defect, which resulted in perfecting the siphon galvanometer, which has all but superseded all other receiving devices. In the siphon receiver the movements of the needle are recorded by means of ink spurted from a fine tube. This tube is attached to a coil suspended between two fixed magnets, which swings to the right or left as the pulsations pass through it. The siphon galvanometer is a great improvement; is not hard on the eyes, and enables the operator to receive much more rapidly than with the old flash receiver.—Selected.

SLEEP FOR SCHOOL-CHILDREN.—With respect to sleep for school-children, Professor Axel Key says, in the Popular Science Monthly: "The growing brain of the pupil needs rest. In Sweden we consider a sleep of eleven or twelve hours necessary for the younger school-children, and of at least eight or nine for the older ones. Yet the investigations have shown that this requirement lacks much of being met in all classes through the whole school. Boys in the higher classes get but little more than seven hours in bed, and, as that is the average, it is easy to perceive that many of them must content themselves with much less sleep. It is also evident from the investigations that the sleeping time is diminished with the increase of the working hours from class to class, so that pupils of the same age enjoy less according as they are higher in their classes. It thus appears constantly, that in schools of relatively longer hours of work, the sleeping time of the pupils is correspondingly shorter. In short, the prolongation of the working hour takes place for the most part at the cost of the time for sleep. This, of course, is wrong. Above all, let the school-children sleep."

AN INTERESTING DISCOVERY.—A most interesting discovery has just been made at the old Cinque Port of Sandwich. The Stour, a river which has perhaps more frequently changed its course than any other English river, has lately entered an old channel near its confluence with Pegwell Bay, laying bare a wreck which has probably occupied its present position for several centuries. The vessel is one of foreign build, and the wood is in a fair state of preservation owing to the fact that it has for many years been entirely embedded in the sand. It is a matter of local history that over three hundred years ago, in the reign of Henry VIII. an Italian vessel belonging to one of the Popes sank at the entrance to the then flourishing port of Sandwich. The sand sifted around it, forming a great bank, and blocking up the entrance to the haven, and it is recorded that from this date the prosperity of Sandwich as a seaport greatly declined. It is believed, with some show of reason, that the ancient wreck now discovered is identical with the Papal Caryke, or Carrick, which sank at this spot in the reign of Henry VIII.

OBITUARIES.

ENOCHS—Died, in Natchez, Miss., Jan. 10, 1891, DUDLEY NORRELL, son of E. A. and Laura V. Enochs, aged three years five months and eighteen days.

It is hard to realize that we shall see him no more on earth, no more feel the loving clasp of his darling arms; but we know that the kind Father doeth all things well. He does not needlessly afflict, but in mercy gently leads his children. He has only transferred your precious one from this world of sin and strife to that land of joy and peace beyond the skies, and we can truly say,

"Sweet is our hope in this moment of anguish;
We'll meet him again in the city of God."

Then, look up, dear stricken parents, from the dark clouds of sorrow that encompass you, and you will see the glorious light of God's mercy shining through the darkness. Take comfort in the thought that your darling little one is safe in the haven of eternal rest. His barque will never be tossed to and fro by life's impetuous waves. How consoling the reflection that his sweet, sensitive disposition will never come in contact with the cold, calculating world; his gentle, loving nature never be exposed to the chilling blasts of adversity!

His precious soul, free from earth-stains, has gone to the paradise of God. May the strong cords of parental love draw you heavenward, and may you realize how blest it is to be able to say, in this, your great affliction, "Thy will be done."

Farewell dear little Norrell; but only for a season. Though thy dear form molders in the grave thy gentle spirit is beckoning us from earth away to the realms of unalloyed bliss, in that deathless world beyond the tomb: and when we are called upon to cross over the Jordan of death, may it be to us, as to thee, only a little brook!" AUNT ELLA.

DANIEL.—MARY ELIZABETH HAMBLIN was born Aug. 1, 1831; was married to J. W. Daniel, Aug. 1, 1850, and departed this life, Feb. 8, 1891, at her home near Washington, La.

Sister Daniel joined the M. E. Church, South, in early womanhood, long before she was married. She was a devoted Christian, a Bible Christian—one who proved her profession by her life. She was a constant reader of the Bible. Her last reading was in Matthew's Gospel. One of her daughters writes: "Her bookmark rests at the twenty-fifth chapter of Matthew. How sweet that verse!—'Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.' We know she has entered in and is now enjoying all the blessings of Heaven." The universal language is, "She was one of the best women I ever saw." How the community and church will miss her, and, oh! how she will be missed in her home. She always took and read the ADVOCATE from the first number. Her good influence is seen in the family of children she has raised and molded into Christian men and women. They live as monuments to her godly life. She was a great friend to all the minister of the gospel, and entertained them with hearty hospitality. She was a devoted wife, loving mother and true friend. We shall miss her. She leaves a husband, eight children and grandchildren, with a host of friends, to mourn her death; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. They look for a reunion in the home above. T. S. R.

McREE—Bro. DAVID WILLIAM MCREE, son of J. and M. J. McRee, of Caseyville, Miss., was born Feb. 13, 1866, and died Dec. 21, 1890. He joined the church in the year 1878, under the ministry of Rev. P. A. Johnston, in the tender years of his youth, and remained a member until sad and unfortunate death, which occurred in his effort to defend himself against the strange and unlooked-for attack by Rob Applewhite and Will Bine. The above dates show that he was early professed faith in Christ, and his happy, cheerful and genial disposition showed that he actually absorbed in his life the early lessons of his Christian home.

The general tenor of his young life was Christian; but for years from his school-boy days he suffered under a sore temptation, which made the variations in his life, and by which he was led away from the piety of his youth; but, O! be praised! that in an hour of great need he cried for mercy and obtained pardon and peace—so that in his death he could say: "All well!" "I am going to my heavenly home." He tried to sing, "I will meet you in the city of the New Jerusalem," and passed over there.

In his youth he was a good boy at home, and fully loved. He was appreciated as a clever neighbor and warm friend. May God bless the bereaved loved ones, and bring them together again where partings will be no more, and where all tears will be wiped away!

On March 29, 1891, the writer preached a funeral sermon, as a tribute of respect to him, to a large audience of sympathizing friends.

J. W. ELLISON.

POINDEXTER—Died on March 30, 1891, MRS. C. POINDEXTER, wife of Dr. T. B. Poindexter, and daughter of Dr. Philemon Chew, formerly of Tensas parish, La. Deceased was born in Mississippi in 1843; moved when a child to Tensas parish, La., where she continued to reside until 1883, when she came with her husband and two little girls to Franklin parish. She was taken with pneumonia on the twenty-first, and on the thirtieth passed out of all suffering and pain.

T. B. P.

PIERCE—NANNIE BERTHA PIERCE, daughter of W. and A. J. Pierce, was born June 30, 1869, and died, of pneumonia, March 30, 1891, which made her twenty-one years and nine months of age. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen, and ever after until her death she lived a consistent member of the church and led a consecrated Christian life, "looking to Jesus, the author and finisher" of her faith. Her Christian mother raised her, as her father died when she was quite small. A lover of home, she delighted to make it attractive for her only brother, and happy for her mother and sister. She took much pleasure in the work of the Sabbath-school, in which she was found at her post of duty. Her smiling, cheerful countenance bore witness that she delighted in the work.

She has entered the gate of life. Fortunate girl! Secure in the love of Jesus throughout the unwasting ages of eternity! She was known among her friends as a pure, sweet Christian girl. The name, "Nannie," was a household word for all who knew her. To know her was to love her. She leaves a host of friends to mourn her death and sympathize with her loved ones. Yes, Nannie has gone to that bright world above, where we all hope to meet her when life's labors are over, there to clasp hands and revel in the smiles of Jesus throughout the ages of eternity.

Her devoted friend, C. H.

WANER—On Jan. 21, 1891, the death angel invaded the home of Bro. William F. and Sister Lulu Waner, and claimed for its victim their little daughter, MARY ETTA. She was a dear lover of the Sabbath-school, and was an excellent singer for one of her age. She was loved and appreciated most by those who knew her best. This treasure was given them, Dec. 29, 1883, and, though her stay on earth was short, her presence in the home sweetened the cares and toils of life. He who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not," said it was long enough.

Grieve not, dear parents; little Etta is not dead, but is only transplanted in a purer and better land, and now her little spirit is with him who said, "Come unto me." It is hard, we know, to give her up, but God by this would draw you nearer him. He would make you lose your love, for earth and draw your affections heavenward. Many a beautiful blossom has been transplanted from the earthly to the heavenly garden; still the dear Lord had need of this one. Parents and loved ones, you know where she is. Live for God, and you will overtake her in the sweet by-and-by.

L. FENN.

JOHNSON—JAMES CAVE JOHNSON was born near Loaxahoma, Miss., July 12, 1851. In this community, where he was born, he has spent nearly all his days. His character was well known to his community, and it was good. He was married in February, 1881, to Miss Carrie Thomas. In this happy union there has been six children born to them (one dead). Five, with their widowed mother, now struggle with life's conflicts.

Cave Johnson was a man of foresight. He could see wisely both sides of life—present and future; hence he made provisions for both worlds. He left a competency for his family. He was converted in 1885, and joined the M. E. Church, South, and had been an active worker in the church in the office of steward to the time of his last illness. His home altar was always kept erect with its sacred lights to cheer them on through the day. His last illness was painful, and it was borne with Christian resignation to the end, saying: "God has been so good to me all the time. I can trust him forever." He fell on sleep with his fathers, March 6, 1891. He is buried in his churchyard, with all of his community attending. The funeral service was conducted by his pastor,

J. W. POSTON.

LENOIR—Bro. WALTER A. LENOIR was born in Marion county, Miss., Aug. 31, 1822, and died in the same county, Jan. 21, 1891. He was married to Miss Harriet Foxworth, Aug. 3, 1847. To them were born twelve children—seven of whom are still living, and all are members of the church. He joined the Methodist Church at Topisaw Camp Meeting before the war. He was converted under a prayer made by Miss Fannie Equin (now Mrs. Lyons).

Bro. Lenoir lived a Christian at home. From the time he joined the church till his death he habitually had family prayer. He gave liberally of his means to charitable purposes. For a long while he was a steward in the church. He was highly esteemed as a Christian in the county where he was born, reared, lived and died. He was the preacher's friend, and his house was the preacher's home. He loved to talk about religion, and delighted in attending protracted and camp meetings. His last words were, "Glory! hallelujah!" He leaves the heritage of a Christian character to his loved ones and the church. M. H. MOORE.

SMITH—SARAH A. SMITH (nee McGlaughlin) was born, Feb. 28, 1819, in Newton county, Ga., and died, Jan. 1, 1891, near Liberty, Amite county, Miss., aged seventy-one years ten months and three days. She was married to Wiley Smith, Jan. 9, 1841. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in early womanhood, and lived a consistent life and died a triumphant death.

Her dying testimony to those who were present was bright, clear, satisfactory and full of comfort. She expressed herself as ready and willing to die, and join the host of saints and departed loved ones, whom she said she could see gathering around her room and bed; and soon her spirit was with theirs beholding the beauties of the Lord, and singing his everlasting praises. She leaves two sons to mourn her death. May the grace of God comfort and sustain them! W. W. CAMMACK.

MILLER—Dr. Z. T. MILLER was born in Copiah county, Miss, Oct. 25, 1848; died in Tensas parish, La., Jan. 26, 1891. The widow's weeds and orphans' tears attest the coming of the angel of death, and his coming has robbed us of one of nature's noblemen. Dr. Miller was a consistent member of the Baptist Church. His love for the good and beautiful was apparent in his life. He trusted in Christ as his Savior, and from an exalted plane of Christian manhood he extended the right hand of Christian fellowship to all good people, and was always ready to help a fallen brother rise. The sorrow of his friends and patrons attest his skill as a physician and his worth as a man.

Farewell, friend, brother; we loved you on earth. May God help us to meet you beyond the sunset gates of gold! J. M. S.

PRITCHETT—WILLIAM J. PRITCHETT was born Jan. 21, 1881; departed this life, Feb. 24, 1891. William J. Pritchett was the only son of J. W. and Mellie Pritchett, and was born in Conecuh county, Ala. He was like the flower that blooms in the morning and withers in the evening. He came to make glad the hearts of the parents and other loved ones, and to lend sweetness to the home but for a little while, and he went unto him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not." He went away, leaving the hearts of the parents and little sister sad and the home desolate.

May the family never forget the dying word of a child! THOS. H. MOODY.

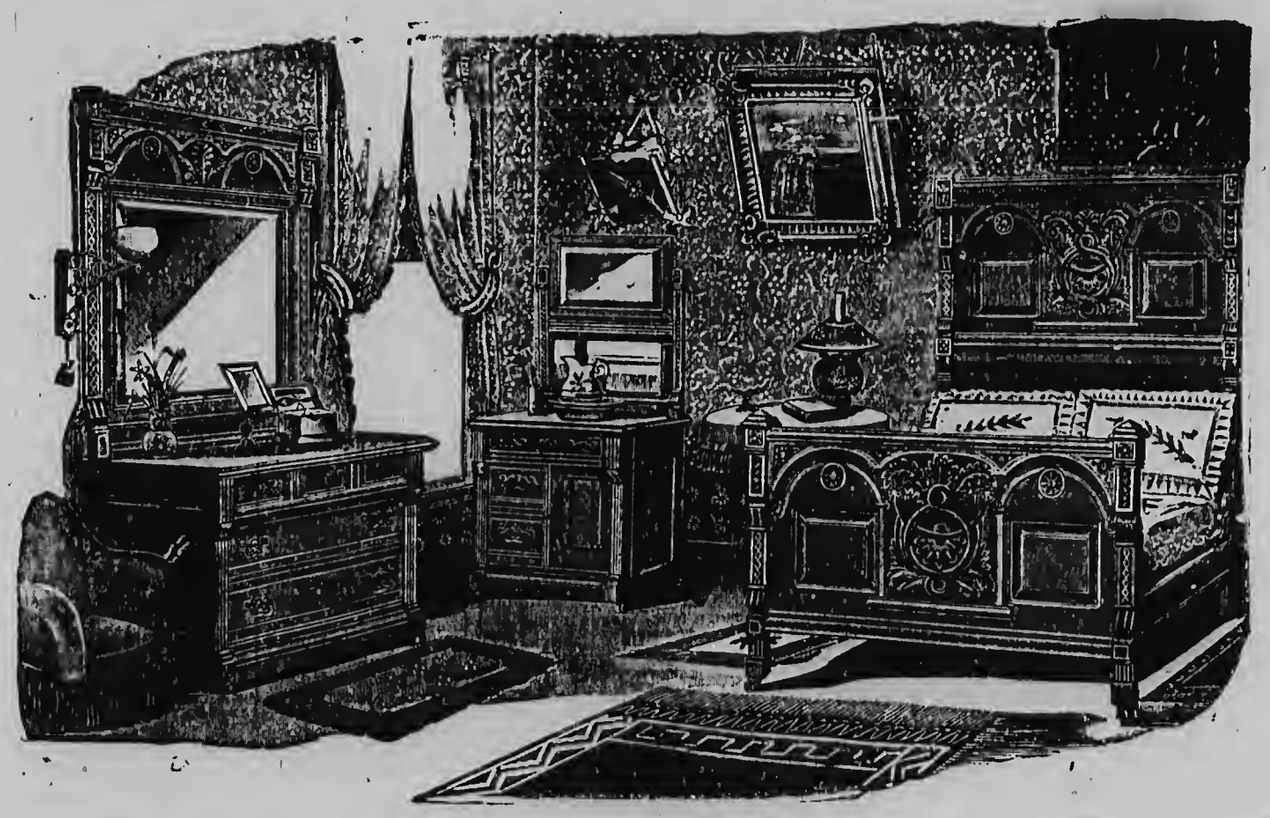
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greator variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

THE LAST DAYS!

A Text-Book on the Second Coming of Christ and Events which shall be Hereafter.

Compiled by JOHN E. RODD, New Orleans.

This is a most captivating and wonderfully instructive little work on this glorious coming event. This event is of such great moment that it is mentioned 318 times in the New Testament, or once in every 35 verses. It seems to have fallen in Mr. Rodd's good fortune to classify these passages under proper headings and in an intelligent manner, and in doing so he has done a great service to the Christian world.

This book contains but fourteen short chapters, and they are all Scripture quotations, prefaced by a few lines, only, of introductory remarks; but, as a convenient TEXT BOOK upon this subject, its value and usefulness can hardly be overestimated.

52 pages; paper cover; only 5 cents each; 50 cents per dozen, post paid.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., Jan. 5, 1891.

Farrand & Votey Organ Co.

GENTLEMEN.—After nearly a year of trial of the magnificent organ you erected in our Church, I feel constrained to write to express my unqualified satisfaction with it in every respect. It is not only the finest-looking organ I have ever seen, being a grand ornament to the Church edifice, but the sweetest-toned instrument of the kind I have ever listened to. While it is fully as large as it ought to be, and fills the large audience-room with tones full of majesty, there is not a harsh or rough-sounding pipe in it. On the contrary, it is so soft and truly musical, that to listen to it is an unfailing joy. All our people concur in the above. Yours truly,

H. L. CHAPMAN,
Pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church.

P. S.—Give my regards to Mr. Wood, whose gentlemanly and genial manners, while engaged in erecting the organ, gave us all great pleasure.

Yours, etc.,
H. L. CHAPMAN.

Electric Belt Free.

The attention of the reader is called to a large advertisement of The German Electric Belt Agency, headed as above. It will benefit any of our readers afflicted with chronic diseases to read this advertisement through.

Keep It Before the People.

To insure good health it is necessary to keep the liver in regular action, the blood in free circulation, the bowels free by gentle purgation, and the stomach cleansed of fecal matter, all of which Maguire's Cundurango will accomplish. 75 cents per bottle.

A great deal of time is contracted in opportunity—which is the flower of time.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Haffenger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A fire in Little Rock, Ark., on April 18, destroyed property to the amount of $500,000.

The complete official canvass of the mayoralty election in Chicago gives the Republican candidate a plurality of 298 over the Democratic candidate.

Cardinal James Gibbons, Roman Catholic primate of America, arrived in this city, April 17, from Baltimore, on a visit to relatives. He will spend a week or ten days here.

At a meeting of nearly six hundred World's Fair laborers, in Chicago, on April 19, it was resolved that if their demands were not acceded to, a strike would ensue. The men ask eight hours and $1.75 per day, instead of ten hours and $1.50.

The President has been received with much courtesy and enthusiasm in all the cities visited by him in his Southern tour. Postmaster-General Wanamaker accompanies him. The party spent last Sunday in Galveston, and attended services at the First Presbyterian Church.

Among the various measures passed by the Texas Legislature (just adjourned) is a law organizing a board of three commissioners for the regulation and control of railways. The commissioners are appointed by the governor for a term of one year each, at a salary of $4,000.

The Sixth Massachusetts Light Infantry Veterans, the first armed and equipped regiment that marched to the relief of the national capital in the Civil War, and which was fired on by a mob while marching through Baltimore, celebrated the anniversary by visiting that city on April 19. They were welcomed by the mayor of Baltimore and given a cordial reception.

The New York Senate has passed without opposition the bill drafted by the commission which has been considering the feasibility and advisability of consolidating the communities about the harbor of New York. It authorizes the commissioners to draw up a charter for the greater city, and, as it has been reported favorably to the Assembly, it will undoubtedly become a law.

Dr. Henry B. Baker, ex-president of the American Health Association and widely known among scientists, has informed his colleagues of the Michigan Health Board that he has discovered the cause of the grip. He states that the germs of influenza are generally at all times present, but there must be certain coincident meteorological conditions to irritate the throat and air passages sufficiently to let the germ gain an entrance to the body.

FOREIGN.

Since Signor Crispi's fall no effort has been made to induce Italy to join with Germany and Austria in a commercial alliance.

The executors of the will of the late Prince Napoleon have formally asked the French government's permission to inter his remains at Ajaccio, the capital of Corsica, where Napoleon I. was born.

The revolutionists in Chili have conquered the northern provinces, and are preparing to make a southern raid. Many of the government leaders and troops have deserted, and the entire naval fleet is in the hands of the insurgents.

The process of making soap from corn has just been discovered by a Chinese chemist. This discovery promises to produce an entire change in the art of soap-making. His production is said to be absolutely pure, and better than the finest soap now made.

The English having demolished a temple in Benares (India) in order to provide a site for new water works, as a consequence, serious riots have occurred between the natives and local authorities of Benares, who are supported by British troops.

The committee of bankers appointed by the government with instructions to examine thoroughly into the various aspects of the financial situation in Brazil has rendered its report. This report says there is no danger so far as Brazil is concerned of a commercial or financial crisis.

The draft of the new commercial treaty between Spain and the United States, looking toward reciprocity of trade with Cuba, was concluded on April 17. It is understood that the treaty fixes very low duties on flour and other articles imported from the United States into the Antilles.

A recent cablegram from Rome stated that the postmaster of New York had refused to permit a number of Italian newspapers to be circulated on account of lottery advertisments in their columns, and had returned them to the Italian publishers, with a statement that entry into the United States was forbidden.

Lieutenant Clark, of the Tenth United States Cavalry, has been detailed to serve with the Westphalian Hussar Regiment No. 11. This is the first instance of a United States army officer being detailed to serve in a German regiment, and the fact that he is permitted to join the Westphalian Hussars show the kindly feeling of the German government.

Marquis Di Rudini, premier, in the Italian Chamber of Deputies, said, on April 16, if it were proved to be impossible to obtain a favorable solution of the New Orleans difficulty, grave complication would not arise, but he would deem it a matter of profound regret that the people of the United States, so advanced in civilization, should show themselves far removed from the principles of right and justice, universally proclaimed and scrupulously observed in Europe.

Mr. Parnell has addressed a manifesto to the members of the National League of Great Britain. In conclusion he says: "I call upon my fellow-countrymen in Great Britain to ignore the convention summoned by Irish whigs under the shadow of English influence, and call upon them to maintain the attitude of self-respecting people, to assert the principle of national independence, to show the spirit of a fearless race, and to declare that Irishmen shall alone regulate the conduct of Irish business."

"Johnson's Anodyne Liniment prevented my death from bronchitis," writes an ardent friend.

e Woman's Temperance Convention.

The ninth Annual Convention of the isiana Woman's Christian Temper- e Union was held in Grunewald ll, in this city, last week. The hall most tastefully and beautifully orsted with flowers and ferns and greens and national flags. A large trait of Miss Willard, the president the National Union, graced the e. The convention was called to er by the president, Mrs. C. E. Mer- , and opened with religious serv- . There was a very good attend- e of delegates. The first session spent in introducing visitors to the vention. A number of ladies and e clerical brethren were intro- ed, who gave brief words of wel- o and encouragement. The even- session was taken up with the for- addresses of welcome by Mrs. uch and Mrs. Graham, of this city, an impromptu response by Mrs. ley, of Baton Rouge. The presi- then read her annual address. address touched on these points: advantage of a knowledge of par- entary law to the Union, securing ugh Sisto aid training-schools for , an industrial school for girls in Orleans, the necessity of raising age of protection for girls, the progress of the temperance work ng the children, scientific Bible through the correspondence ol of Boston, the apathy of many essed Christians regarding the of the Union, and, lastly, an ex- tion of a correspondent of the AD- ATE for having the temerity to ise the tendency there is apparent me quarters to attach other things temperance to the work of the . The address was listened to great interest.

e morning session of the second s proceedings was occupied in re- ing reports from the various com- ees. These reported on Sunday- ol work, temperance literature, so- purity, railroad rates, prison work, rmented wine, the press, juvenile , and work among the colored ie. Most of these reports showed ress in the work done. Mrs. H. B. , the editor of the White Ribbon, introduced to the convention. Kells is one of the ablest workers e temperance cause, and we are that our temperance women of siana have been favored with her nce, and express the hope that icient paper, the White Ribbon, be the recipient of a handsome list ew subscribers as the result of her to our convention.

e evening session was given up to Young Woman's Christian Tem- nce Union. Miss Susie Lyons, superintendent of the Y. W. C. . and Flower Mission, presided easy grace, and under her guid- there was a most enjoyable even- Miss Hartman delivered her an- address, which was followed by dress by Miss Belle Kearney, one Mississippi's rising young women, state superintendent of the Y. W. . U. of that State. She was lis- d to with deep interest as she gave alled, but eloquent, recital of the erance work being enterprised and carried forward by the young women of our land. Our convention has been signally fortunate in the visit of these two earnest and devoted temperance workers of our sister State. The session closed with an address by Mrs. Lathrop on the work being done by the Y. W. C. T. U.'s.

The Saturday morning session was devoted principally to hearing reports from the work of the local Unions throughout the State. These reports showed that while in some parts of the State there had been hard work to make progress, the general cause is going forward; and, as given by the different representatives of the Unions, these reports were very interesting, and were listened to with profound attention. The resolutions brought in by the committee on that subject were unanimously adopted, and are epitomized as follows:

The resolutions reaffirm allegiance to the National Union, and to Miss Willard as its leader; express surprise at the action of the government in taking steps to extend the trade in American beer in Mexico and South America; express gratitude for the sympathetic efforts of God's ministers in this State, and request their continuance; approve the stand taken by the Farmers' Alliance on the prohibition question, and solicit the co-operation of the Alliance in the work of temperance reform, and in the Union's efforts to secure the establishment of an industrial school for girls in Louisiana; urge delegates to study up the law relating to the sale of liquors to minors, and recommend that the law be so amended as to forbid minors to enter saloons; urge that steps be taken to secure French literature for the Union's work among the French; urge the circulation of the petition for the closing of the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; and, finally, urge local Unions to co-operate with the Prohibition Association.

A resolution, reaffirming the resolution of last year on the Lottery, was passed with only one negative vote.

The afternoon session was held in the interest of the children, and quite a large and enthusiastic company of little temperance folks assembled in the hall at three P. M. There were sensible little speeches and bright little songs by the young girls and boys, and some words of cheer and encouragement by some of the older ones, and various and sundry cooings of three temperance babies who were introduced. The prizes, such as banners and medals, were awarded; the banner being presented to the Louisiana Avenue Band of Mercy for securing the largest number of pledges among the little people, and the medals for the best essays on temperance written by pupils in the public schools. These medals were offered by Dr. McDonald, of San Francisco, and were won by Nathaniel D. Cook, Bessie Armstrong, Virginia Leclerc, Emma Handy, Carrie Carpenter, Joseph Venter, and George Vincent. Mr. Easton, superintendent of city public schools, and Mrs. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, made brief addresses to the children.

The closing session of the convention was well attended. Resolutions of thanks were passed, and Monroe, La., selected as the place for the next annual meeting. The officers of the Union elected for the year are as follows: Mrs. C. E. Merrick, president; Mrs. B. D. Wood, vice-president; Mrs. M. L. Graham, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lydia Bodley, recording secretary; Mrs. J. B. Cole, treasurer. We understand that four other vice-presidents will be chosen, and that all unfinished business will be attended to by the Executive Committee. The evening closed with an address by Mrs. M. T. Lathrop on woman's work in the cause of temperance. She spoke with telling effect for more than an hour, and her thrilling words will abide in the memory of many, and do good in after days. Thus was brought to a close a profitable and interesting session of the Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The Blood of Christ Not a Fountain.

No inspired writer ever refers to the blood of Christ as a fountain; and when his blood is referred to as washing, the thought is confined to the figurative idea of washing, set forth in sprinkling, rather than the idea of a real washing, such as might be necessary to remove filth from anything. To remove sin required the blood of Christ; but it was sprinkled—and from this idea there is no departure by inspired men. From this fact no uninspired man should have ever been so thoughtless as to intrude upon the delicacy and sacredness of the blood of Christ by the word "plunge," or "dip." He must be wild with fanaticism on the subject of immersion who could speak of plunging a sinner into the blood of Christ, when there could only have been something less than a gallon. Why should anyone take to the word "immerse," either as to the blood or water, when the word is not found in this connection anywhere in the Bible? I can never sing that old hymn, so familiar to all, without a recoil in my feelings for the reckless departure from God's reference to the blood, and the almost sacrilegious idea of plunging the sinner into the blood of Christ.

"There is a fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
Lose all their guilty stains."

What is a fountain? It is an ever-flowing stream, or spring, flowing always, before and after, as to a given point of time. What is a flood? It is a great quantity of water, or anything that could flow.

Why any man would use these words with reference to the blood of Christ is certainly very strange to me, when no inspired man ever did so.

We know that poetic license allows the poet to enlarge or magnify an idea, as usage among men; but surely such license should not invade the divine thought and use of language, nor should it stretch beyond what is true. Turn to Moses' hieroglyphic language, where Christ and his blood and his redeeming work are presented in pictures, and the blood is always in small quantity, and handled delicately by sprinkling. Paul refers to the law, with its divine service, as "a shadow of good things to come," and as the "pattern of heavenly or spiritual things"—all foreshadowing and outlining the redeeming work of Christ. The idea certainly is not found with Moses. Is it found among the prophets? It may be presumed that the poet took Zecharish xiii, 1, as the Scripture that justified him in his judgment, in his wild and exaggerative imagination.

But let us look at the passage. "In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for sin and uncleanness." Now, where is the blood in this statement? It is not there. Unless blood was plainly mentioned in the text, we can make no application; unless a plain precedent be found somewhere else, we must be silent.

The prophets, we see, were inspired to use imagery—such as mountains, deserts, valleys, springs, and rivers—for John's use in introducing Christ; and hence Christ is presented to the Jews, and to all mankind, as "the fountain of living waters."

Jeremiah says: "For my people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water." (ii, 13.)

Again he says (xvii, 13): "O Lord, the hope of Israel, all that forsake thee shall be ashamed, and they that depart from me shall be written in the earth, because they have forsaken the Lord, the fountain of living waters."

Isaiah calls a thirsty man to Christ as to the water of life. "Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money," etc. (iv, 1.)

Again referring to Christ, he says: "When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them. I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water." (xli, 17, 18.)

Here the fountain is opened; but it is water, and not blood.

Again: "Behold, I will do a new thing; now it shall spring forth; shall ye not know it? I will even make a way in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert. . . . I give waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert, to give drink to my people, my chosen." (xliii, 19, 20.)

Again Christ is referred to as springs of water: "They shall not hunger nor thirst, neither shall the heat nor sun smite them: for he that hath mercy on them shall lead them, even by the springs of water shall he guide them." (xlix, 10.)

Zechariah, in the fourteenth chapter and eighth verse, explains his fountain. Speaking of Christ, he says: "And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem." This leaves us without doubt that the fountain is one of water, and not of blood. This is clear.

Ezekiel puts these waters, or rivers, as coming forth "from under the right side of the house" (xlvii, 1), evidently pointing out the Jordan, with its two great springs bursting forth from the mountains, which are symbols of thrones; and John, in Revelation, saw this river as "the river of the water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." (xxii, 1.)

In all these figures Christ is referred to as the remedy for sin and uncleanness, and as fountains of water, without the slightest reference to his blood. The spiritual meaning of water is love. Love, therefore, is the ever-flowing fountain and "river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High."

This love stands back of all other things as giving us Christ, "the fount of every blessing," in whom is centered every consideration in man's redemption. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son," etc. This love gives man pardon through Christ; "hides a multitude of sins."

The fountain referred to being one of water, the symbol of love, let us cease the idea of plunging the sinner into the blood of Christ, or into the water either; for as in the blood, in every case where sin is to be removed by the ordinance of the law, the water is sprinkled; and only where filth is to be removed, is there ever a literal washing or wetting required.

The word "sprinkle" has a great thought in it. It came from God. It is the Bible word for a cleansing, a washing, a purification, a baptism. Let every reader of this article study this matter well before they criticise it, or reject it. If you can show me a plain case of Christ's blood being referred to as a fountain, then I will listen to you, and we will see whether Christ's blood is a fountain or not.

J. W. ELLISON.

Seashore District, Mississippi Conference.

It was our good fortune, on coming to Hattiesburg, to find ready to our hand a comfortable district parsonage, and thus we were spared the trouble and inconvenience to which many preachers and their families are subjected. This building was erected during the administration of Bro. Rayner, several years ago. The oaks planted by him have grown to fine proportions, and elicit the admiration of all passers-by. Dr. West and Bro. Cooper, during their occupancy of the parsonage, made improvements; so that now it has become a desirable home.

All the works in the district are well manned; I suppose never better. There are sixteen pastoral charges, with eighteen preachers supplying them; but, while there are so many, all the territory is not occupied. This is a district of magnificent dimensions; and a considerable part of it, especially toward the northeast, is unsupplied with the ministry of the Word. Domestic missionary and church extension money can be wisely expended in the bounds of the district. I am able to report that the several charges, almost without exception, are in good condition. The new preachers in the district—Bros. Powell, Parker, Howell, Ellis, Abney, Savage and Backus—were all warmly welcomed, and are doing efficient work. Those returned to their former fields of labor have taken hold again with fresh hope and zeal. The prospect, as I regard it, is good, indeed. Sickness, especially la grippe, has interfered with some, and in one section I was informed that "there had been a great many measles scattered around."

I regret to mention that Dr. Harmon has been greatly hindered by very serious illness, beginning Feb. 1, and continuing until the present time. Too much hard work at the outset, perhaps, intensified and prolonged his illness. A man should be quite strong, physically, who should attempt to preach three sermons a day.

Bro. Howell, on Purvis circuit, occupies a new parsonage. Bro. Ellis, at Estabutchie, is domiciled in another neat and comfortable preacher's home, built within two months after the enterprise was first spoken of. Thanks to the liberality of the mill owners at Estabutchie, and to Bro. Ellis' own labor, the cost was not very great. It is proper to say that Ellisville Church made a fine contribution to this parsonage, while the aid given by Bro. Rayner was most generous. Bro. Backus, at Heidelberg, is in a bright new parsonage.

Biloxi is going to have a new church, at which all who know anything of the place, and our cause there, will greatly rejoice.

I can not now tell of all the good things done, and all the favorable indications. I do not see why there shall not be a revival in every charge soon. The attendance on preaching, and the spirituality manifested, give expectation of it. The assessments for ministerial support have, in most instances, been increased. In some they are too small yet. In one case there has been a reduction from last year's estimate.

I note a serious evil on some of the circuits, in that we have goodly churches erected on land to which we have no title. I learn of two cases in which it is thought we will suffer the loss of the property. "Somebody has blundered."

This is a beautiful land now, in the pomp and fragrance of the spring-time—a land of flowers, running through all the notes of color, from the glorious japonicas, which I saw in February at Col. Stuart's, in Ocean Springs, to the honeysuckles which line all the streams. What a delight it would be to the president of Centenary College to see them! He has before him a pleasure almost unimagined when he shall be presiding elder of Seashore district.

This section has also great agricultural possibilities, while of the large timber interests it is needless to write.

The Gulf and Ship Island railroad will be finished at an early day.

Notwithstanding much bad weather and many swollen streams, I have not, up to this time, failed to fill an appointment.

I desire to make grateful mention of the exceeding kindness with which I have been received in every place. Two causes have produced this: there are multitudes of good people here, and, then, the office has been well and ably filled by my predecessors, and I have had only to enter in.

E. H. MOUNGER.

In Memoriam.

W. M. KLEIN.

The committee appointed by the Crawford Street M. E. Sunday-school to draft resolutions commemorative of the late William M. Klein, respectfully submit the following:

On March 29, 1891, the Crawford Street M. E. Sunday-school sustained an irreparable loss in the death of its noble and beloved superintendent, for on that beautiful Easter morning the pure spirit of William Mount Klein winged its flight to the summer-land of God.

Whereas, We are called upon to mourn the loss of him who, from his earliest childhood, has been identified with us as an efficient co-laborer, and for the past year our loved and honored superintendent; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of William M. Klein our Sunday-school has lost a true and consecrated superintendent, for to the teachers he was a wise and faithful counsellor, and to the scholars a noble example of earnest Christian manhood.

Resolved, That we, as a Sunday-school, deeply sympathize with the bereaved family of our beloved leader, and feel assured that He who wept over the humble grave at Bethany looks in tender, loving compassion on the sorrowing hearts who mourn this dear one's vacant chair.

Resolved, That these resolutions be placed on the minutes of the Sunday-school; the city papers and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be requested to publish them, and a copy sent to the grief-stricken family as a testimonial of our love and gratitude for their honored dead, whose short young life will ever remain a sweet and tender memory.

"He sleeps! the strife of life is done,
And all its warrings cease.
He sleeps! that noble, manly one
Has entered into peace;
And tender recollection keeps
Its watch o'er one who softly sleeps.

"He wakes! for lo, the shadows fall
From his young soul away;
He answers to the morning call
Of God's eternal day;
And endless daytime brightly breaks
For one who in his Savior wakes."

Notes from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: In my last letter to your columns, I had just started from Yamaguchi for Hiroshima. After an unpleasant night's travel on a small steamer, Hiroshima was reached in time for breakfast. At this place we have a church building, with a good membership, Rev. B. W. Waters pastor; and a girls' school, presided over by Miss N. B. Gaines, assisted by Miss L. C. Strider. These three, with Sister Waters—formerly Miss Lula Lipscomb, of China—and B. W. Waters, Jr., just one month old, make up the Methodist mission at Hiroshima. Surely a goodly company, zealous and successful in the Lord's cause. My last visit to Hiroshima was in November last, and the improvement in the work all around since then was very noticeable. The attendance at church, where I had the pleasure of preaching, has largely increased; several new Sunday-schools, with a goodly number of attendants, have been organized; while the girls' school has increased from four, present at the day of opening, to forty on the register now. The explanation of all this is that the Lord is with them, and they are all hard at work. One of the human means used of the Lord to the blessing of the work at Hiroshima, has been the erection of a substantial and commodious building for the girls' school. Up to last fall the school had held its sessions in Miss Gaines' dwelling-house, and, as a consequence, had had a small attendance, never exceeding more than ten or twelve, notwithstanding the faithful work of the principal and of Miss Bice, who was her assistant last year. Now that the new building has been opened, everything has been changed; new life has been infused into all the work at Hiroshima, and the promise for the future is very large. The leading newspaper of the city made the statement, a few days ago, that our school, on account of its superior morality, as observed in the lives of its students, was sure to become the largest school in the city. The force of this remark may be seen when it is known that Hiroshima is a city of over eighty thousand inhabitants, and has one very large girls' school (Buddhist). One gracious fact about the school is, that its pupils are being won for Christ, and are doing what they can to bring others to the feet of the Master. I came away from Hiroshima impressed with the fact that our church has made no mistake in establishing this school, and doubting if it ever made a better investment than it did in erecting this property.

In this connection, it may be mentioned that last Sunday week six students of the Kwansei Gakuin, our boys' school at Kobe, professed faith in Christ, and were baptized. Bro. Utley, the principal, has six or eight other students in his probationer's class, and has hope that everyone of the hoarding students of the school will give themselves to Christ during the year. Amen! W. E. TOWSON.

Union Gospel Mission.

The first anniversary of this mission was held at their hall near Keller Market, on the night of Monday, April 20, 1891. Having been asked to talk, I was on hand and found the place packed with people. The little folks acquitted themselves with great credit, and the report of the work and finances of the mission indicated that gratifying results had been reached. There is evidently much good being done by the faithful labors of the three young men who have the affairs of the mission in hand. I would bespeak for Bros. Vail, Harrison and Bien the sympathy, prayers and material aid of the Christians of our city. They will soon begin their open-air services in Keller Square. JNO. T. SAWYER.

FLOWER SECRETS.

(Whispered from a basket of Winter blossoms sent by a friend.)

BY MAY M. ANDERSON.

They whisper in language by few understood
Sweet secrets to brighten each day,
Of green sunny places deep down in the wood
Where cousins, the wild blossoms, stay.
Of gay fairy revels they witness at night
When moonlight and starlight grow dim,
When the heart of each rose and each hyacinth white,
With nectar is filled to the brim.

And often they paint, when I listen with care,
Their home as the Autumn grows cold;
Their warm, sheltered chamber, their quiet life there;
Their joy as the Winter grows old.
And out in the air and the sunshine once more
They smile at the mocking bird's strain,
And bask in the sunshine, while April's sweet love
Is written on hillside and plain.

And, oh, how they breathe in their fragrance and bloom
Of climes that are fairer than this;
Of skies that are cloudless, of days without gloom
Where life holds the secret of bliss!
Of dear ones now roaming o'er hills of the blest,
And gathering, perchance, as they go,
A blossom of beauty by soft airs caress,
And thinking of us still below.

If God fashions blossoms so fair for us here,
Oh, what must they be up above?
More wondrous than tenting! More grand must appear
Those heights formed by infinite love!
You see that the flowers your kindness supplies,
Bring fancies to lighten my gloom;
Their brightness will perish, but faith lifts her eyes
Where blossoms eternally bloom.

Our Church Extension Work.

PLAIN FACTS, AND PLAIN DEDUCTIONS.

The Facts. At the recent meeting of the Board of Church Extension of the M. E. Church, South, held at Louisville, Ky., April 8-11, some facts were developed that claim the attention of all who love the church.

The receipts by the Board for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1891, were $72,917.85. Total last year, $71,122.05. Increase during the year, $1,795.80. These receipts would be further increased by adding the amount received by the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, which was detached from the General Board, Oct. 9, 1890; also $872.50 of unredeemed pledges.

The General Board and the Conference Boards helped this year 387 churches, paying them $82,729.42; last year, 364 churches were helped, and they were paid $84,549.32, showing an increase of 23 churches helped, apparent decrease in payments of $1,819.90. This decrease in payments is only apparent. Owing to the fact that several churches for special reasons have declined to receive loans authorized by the Board, or have not been ready to comply with the requisite legal formalities, these loans have not been paid, though the Board has been prepared for several months to do so. Had this money been paid over, it would have shown a net increase of eight churches helped, and a net increase in payments to churches helped of $4,280.10.

In the report which will be made of the proceedings of the Board at its annual meeting just held, it will be seen that 172 churches asked for help; that money in donations and loans was asked for to the amount of about $120,000; and that the Board had only $15,000 in donations and $25,000 in loans to disburse. Note here the fact that the reason why only $15,000 could now be donated to needy churches was this: In its anxiety to meet the pressing wants of churches, the Board at previous sessions had promised aid to said churches, relying upon the liberality of our people for the means to make good these promises; but as the money did not come in, these outstanding promises, to the amount of about $11,000, had to be met—making, in fact, $26,000 in donations for the present year. The Board, in its anxiety to meet the urgent necessities of so many struggling church enterprises, incurred these liabilities, banking on the liberality of a great church organization; but, with a prudence that all will commend, it was deemed best this year to restrict appropriations within the limits of the receipts of last year, so as to avoid debt and its endless evils. The aggregate amount loaned to needy churches for the present year is $25,000.

These figures were gone over and over by the members of the Board; all the applications for aid were considered faithfully, and the inadequate amount on hand was distributed according to its best judgment. As far as possible the classification of the several Conference Boards was followed in grading the applications for aid in the order of their importance and urgency. No field was without its representative, and no needy case lacked an advocate. But it is beyond human wisdom to make one dollar do the work of six dollars. When there is not enough money to go round, some needy cases must be left unhelped. The only question was, which were the most needy. If any mistakes were made, it was certainly not from any lack of sympathy or earnest effort to get at all the facts, and to do the best that could be done with insufficient means.

Deductions. The deductions from these facts and figures are obvious to the intelligent reader who has enough interest in the work of the church to give them proper consideration. They are:

1. That our church extension work is well managed. No one who knows its history and has watched its progress from year to year doubts it. Secretary Morton has earned the confidence of the church as an able, energetic and faithful administrator. His associate, Dr. Morris, is like-minded. The church believes in them both with good reasons therefor. The members of the Board have served the church well from the start.

2. The prudent policy adopted by the Board is to be commended. Debt must be avoided. The money contributed can be appropriated, and no more.

3. Disappointed applicants for help should not blame the Board nor its executive officers. Every dollar in the treasury was disbursed by them.

4. Every dollar of the assessment of $100,000 for the current year should be raised. Think of it, brethren and sisters. That would be only 8⅓ cents per member. Our preachers and people should look into this matter. With such a field before us, with such pressing needs, and with such ample resources, to fall below 8⅓ cents per capita for this cause reveals an amazing delinquency. Every pastoral charge should meet its assessment, and many might go beyond.

5. Let the whole church rally to this work now; this the watch-word: Early collections, no deficits, advance at all points.

A MEMBER OF THE BOARD.

Small Salaries.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Geo. H. Thompson, in the ADVOCATE, of April 16, says: "Your note on this subject pleased me. Would not an editorial on this view of the question be timely? . . . Owing to the stress now put on one side of the question, it would be well to stress the other side some, too."

The brother's first sentence is a concession sufficient to have suggested the untimeliness of "stressing the other side of the question." He says: "I am by no means alarmed at the large salaries paid our preachers." The next concession is stranger still, in the light of "stressing the other side of the question:" Hear him: "I believe a large per cent. of Methodist ministers are not paid enough to support them comfortably." In the light of these facts, is it not strange that anyone feels called upon to "stress" that side of the question which had been "stressed" in its practical operations to the hurt and shame of the church, and to the deep mortification and distress of the faithful servants of God and their families?

Reference to the starvation rates of the allowances and receipts of other days is no argument justifying its continuance; nor does it minister to the probable improvement of those works where the people send their preacher away, leaving debts unsettled. And it is a fact, well known, that "stressing the other side of the question," "editorially" or otherwise, will have but the one tendency, and that is, to choke and hinder the spirit of liberality and benevolence, the lack of which has always been the ugly obstruction in the way of the church's aggressive work. As long as we read, "The laborer is worthy of his hire," and "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn," we hold that, until the laborer gets his hire, and the ox that treadeth out the corn has been fed, there is but one side of the question that deserves to be "stressed," and that is the side which reveals the duty and obligation of the church to minister of their temporal goods to those who minister to them in holy things to that extent necessary to keep their spiritual advisers decently clothed and fed. Until this is done, there is no need, or just occasion, to "stress the other side of the question." We know of no spirit more artful and difficult to manage than the spirit of covetousness; therefore, it needs not to be strengthened in its intrenchments by editors, or anyone else, as we see it.

Your note, which pleased Bro. Thompson so well, was so pleasing to a member of the church where they were behind with their preacher for the previous year's work, that he called my attention to it with approving comments, right in the face of the fact that the circuit of which he was a member had been sending their preacher away in debt for several years past; not paying the assessment even, by a good many dollars.

This, too, where a full settlement of everything assessed the circuit did not require two dollars per member. This was not a poor circuit as to ability; for I suppose that the taxable property of the membership of the circuit would reach a hundred and fifty or two hundred thousand dollars; and its cotton-growing strength would equal from twelve hundred to two thousand bales. With these facts before us, which properly represent a large portion of our field, we think it "untimely to be stressing the other side of the question" by editors or others.

MOLLIE A. CLARK, Conf. Treas.

The Contents of the Sunday Paper.

Dr. Holland, of St. Louis, at one time rector of Trinity Church in this city, has written an article to the Living Church on "The Reasons Why Men Do Not Go to Church." Among the reasons adduced is the Sunday paper, an inventory of the contents of which he gives as follows:

Leaving out the literary soup, and the political olives, and the plain commercial loaf, and the few religious items that take the place of salted almonds: "Baseball," two and a half columns; "Cycling," one column and a third; "General Sporting," including "Football, Handball, Gun Club, Pool Tournament, and Pistol Practice," one column; "Race Track Notes," one column; five columns of "A Romance of Two Brothers;" three columns of "The Witch of Sprague, a Fantastic Tale;" three columns of Rudyard Kipling's insolence about America; two columns of Bill Nye; two columns of Fun at a Glance; a column and a half of Correct Loads in Whist; a column on Beef a la Mede; three columns on the Shrine of Thespis; three on Theatre Entertainments Provided for the Lenten Weeks; two on "What Fashion's Devotees Will Buy for Easter Sunday;" two on Lenten Amusements, or "Forms of Feasting for the Days of Fasting" (I give the names according to the bill of fare), besides such entremets as these: The Ring, "Sullivan Not Looking for Future Honors," "A Boy Steals from the Matron of a Mission," "A Sixteen-Year-Old Girl Missing," "Fell from the Elevator," "Robbed by a Colored Woman," "Convicts Armed," "Has Gibson Fled?" "Peculiar Arrest of Richard Johnson, a Drunken Negro," "Negro Boy's Find;" "A Very Peculiar Stabbing," "Sly Elopers," "The Cowles Divorce Case," "A Young Lady Burned to a Crisp," "Torn on the Track," "Mammoth Mine (Explosion) Verdict," "Two Freight Trains Collide," "A Brother's Fatal Prank," "Spontaneous Combustion," "Found Dead in a Shute," "Dying of a Dog Bite," "Smallpox in Illinois," "A Farmer's Hand Lost," "A Pair of Bad Bell Boys," "A Counterfeiter Captured," "A Society Leader in Trouble," "Suspected of Arson," "A Wounded Burglar Bagged," "Killed in a Trivial Quarrel," "Betrayed by His Mistress," "Obscene Publications," "He Terms It Larceny," etc. All of which is to take the place of the epistle and gospel for the day. There is not a human being in the country who could intelligently peruse a moderate fraction of the contents of such a journal, and then be an interested hearer of the gospel. The devil must regard the Sunday morning newspaper as an unrivalled antidote to spirituality, for there is no doubt that it finds its way into thousands of Christian homes.

FROM THE WORK.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

We have just held our preachers' meeting for the Holly Springs district. The district seems to be in good condition. We discussed quite a number of subjects which relate to the nature of our work. Among them the use of tobacco came in for its share, and the facts brought out made it clear that, as pastors, it is not right for us to use tobacco in the presence of children whose parents are opposed to its use, thereby multiplying the efforts of parents to save their children from what they consider a great evil. I would much prefer a pastor for my children who is not addicted to this filthy habit, and there are thousands of fathers and mothers who share my convictions on this subject. We were all agreed that intoxicating liquors should not be used as a beverage, and that we should work, pray and vote for the destruction of the whisky traffic. The morphine habit, which is such a curse in many places, is not so common here. We have in Holly Springs an infirmary for those addicted to the morphine habit, presided over by Dr. Gray, one of our regular physicians, who never fails to cure the worst of cases which are brought to him. Our church in Holly Springs is in good working order; the Sunday-school, woman's prayer meeting, W. M. S., L. R. B., Y. M. C. A., Epworth League and our weekly prayer meetings are all at work. With very few exceptions, our church members are consistent; they do not dance, play cards or drink whisky. We are looking after our collections ordered by the Conference, and they will all be brought up. We expect to spend about twelve hundred dollars on our parsonage and Sunday-school room now soon, and then we will have everything in "apple-pie order."

I shall make the assertion, subject to amendment, that the Holly Springs station pays more money to the cause of missions than any other church in the State to the size of the town. Let no brother move an amendment to this whose town, with less than twenty-five hundred inhabitants, does not pay more than five hundred dollars to the cause of missions.

J. W. HONNOLL.

HAYNESVILLE CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The second Quarterly Conference for Haynesville circuit convened at White Hall, April 11. The presiding elder was in time to preach at eleven A. M. The Conference was called together at three P. M., and a thorough examination of the numerous interests of the church was made. At the close of the Conference a pointed talk was made, the main point of which was the importance of officials attending Quarterly Conference. (That was the right line.)

Sunday morning we met and enjoyed a feast of love in the quarterly love-feast. The good Spirit came upon us while Bro. Garland prayed. At eleven Bro. Sheppard entered the pulpit with a shining face that indicated association with and words from God, and for fifty minutes we listened to his earnest, burning gospel words, and many tears were seen in the eyes of his auditors. A delightful communion service followed, and many partook to their comfort. A sweet little girl of ten or twelve years came at our bidding, and joined the church. Her tears and little words spoke to us of rejoicing in another world, and in other hearts than ours. We are praying for, working for, and expecting a sweeping revival all over the circuit. Bro. Knickerbocker, my assistant, possesses adaptability, and is doing good work.

HARRY W. MAY.

PICKENS, MISS.

We have had a most glorious meeting in Pickens. It began with the prayer meeting service Thursday night, April 2. On the morning of April 7 we were reinforced by Rev. Geo. S. Inge. For six days he remained, preaching twice, and once three times a day. His preaching was in power and demonstration of the Holy Ghost. Bro. Inge does not indulge, in cant, manipulation, or sensation; but tenderly, earnestly, and powerfully shows the destructive influences of sin, and the ability, readiness and graciousness of Christ as a Savior. He is a man mighty in word and deed; expects results, and is not disappointed. Prof. D. J. Evans was with us part of the time, leading in the service of song and aiding the work otherwise. Our congregations were large and attentive, frequently testing the capacity of the spacious house. The entire community was brought under the sanctifying influence of the meeting. Our town surrenders to Jesus. As nearly as we can estimate, there are fifty conversions, already twenty received into our church, and ten applications for membership in other churches. We have organized a prayer meeting for young men, which promises well. The ladies will meet and organize to-morrow evening. The general meeting is full of interest, and well attended. To date thirty-six have been received in the church.

Our Easter services at this place, in behalf of the woman's training-school, located at Kansas City, Mo., were a great success. In the morning a collection was taken for the women, and amounted to nearly ten dollars. In the evening the program for the children was carried out, and more than twenty dollars were realized.

We have a flourishing juvenile society. We are moving under a cloudless sky; the sails are unfurled to the breezes, and we are heading for glory. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow." H. C. MOREHEAD, Pastor.

NORTH WILKINSON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

It has been nearly two years since I sent the ADVOCATE a report from my work. Two years ago I was sent to North Wilkinson circuit. I lived in the Mt. Carmel parsonage, near Gloster, Miss. It was my happy privilege to live among the good people of that community for two years. Last December, in Canton, I was assigned to the same work, with an assistant, who now occupies the parsonage at Mt. Carmel, and I was sent to the one at the Old Bethel Camp Ground, ten miles east of Woodville. The preachers for several years have refused to live in this parsonage—they would live on the railroad; but as I never owned anything like a railroad, and was told by the appointing powers of our Conference to come to this place, I thought it best to obey. Wife and I, with the little folks, landed here Jan. 3, found the good people of this place here with a good dinner. We were expected on the first; but as we failed to come, they did not weary of well-doing, but continued to come until they saw the preacher and his family comfortably situated in their new home. This is a pleasant place to live in. We have prayer and class meeting every Wednesday evening; well attended. Some of the brethren walk four miles to prayer meeting and Sunday-school. There is a part of this work building up very fast, while other parts are not doing so well. We have four good Sunday-schools on the work. We are doing some work on the church at Bethel. There is quite a number of the members on this work that are wide awake to the interest of the church. Bethel Church is said by some to be in the best condition, spiritually, of any church in the county. As an evidence of this fact, the brethren, who are farmers, leave their work every Wednesday evening to come to prayer meeting. We have from twenty to thirty-five in attendance. Our second Quarterly Conference is to be held soon, and we are expecting our beloved presiding elder to be, as usual, at his post. I have sold 10 family Bibles, 20 hymn books, 12 Disciplines, have 9 new subscribers for the ADVOCATE; 7 accessions to the church, a number of marriages, with more to follow; finances well up to date. Pray for us, that we may have a good year.

W. M. SULLIVAN, P. C.

STATE LINE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our second Quarterly Conference convened April 11 and 12. Bro. Mellen came down on the local, Friday, April 10, and I met him at the train. It was raining hard, and the water was shoe-deep on either side the track; but I made it aboard of the train and took his grip, and as soon as the train pulled down to where we could alight without taking the water, we jumped off. I put him in the hands of a brother, with whom he spent the night. We intended to have gone to Adamsville, Friday afternoon; but the weather was too threatening. We took an early start next morning, and we churned the mud and ground sand for about eight or nine miles when we came to a swollen creek. The presiding elder got out and figured for some time and decided that the waters were falling. I suggested that we cross; so we got in the buggy, and Bro. Mellen took his valise in his lap and put his feet up on the dash-board, and I drove in. The water came into the buggy, but not sufficient to wet us. We reached the shore safely. We then had to drive to make up time. Sometimes we were in the road and sometimes in the woods. We reached Adamsville about twelve o'clock. We found a little crowd there to whom Bro. Mellen preached. After services dinner was served, after which we had our quarterly meeting, with only one steward present. We spent the night with Bro. Platt. Sunday morning we had services, but were disappointed in not being able to hold communion services. I hope this will answer as a hint to the stewards. Our work is progressing slowly. God speed the time when church officials will feel their responsibilities! Pray for us. P. H. HOWSE, P. C.

ESTABUCHIE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I arrived here on Jan. 4, after a journey of four days through a rough, dreary-looking country. When I got here I found no parsonage, nor one even thought of. I felt gloomy. Three months from the day that I landed here I moved my family into as comfortable a parsonage as there is on the Seashore district. I began the money with which to buy the material for building, and did the most of the work myself; so I still find a for the plane, hatchet, saw and square. I wish to extend my heartfelt thanks to Bros. John A. Ellis and B. S. Ragner for their liberal contributions to the parsonage. I requested others of our prominent ministers to contribute, but so far, they have failed to respond. Happy to say that the parsonage has been built and paid for without the aid of church suppers, ice-cream festivals, entertainments, or anything of that sort, and is partially furnished.

This is a laborious work, having eight appointments reaching over a territory of about sixty miles in length. Denominationally, we have quite a mixture—Episcopal Methodists, Congregational Methodists, Presbyterian Methodists, hard-shell Baptists, Missionary Baptists, Mormans and Holiness people abound. My congregations are increasing with every service throughout the entire work. Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Morriston on April 11 and 12, with fine results. Now that I have the parsonage off my hands and mind, I am making an effort to establish a camp ground on the work, and I feel confident of success. Pray for us.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

A Request for Prayer.

I have just finished reading our Sunday-school Lesson in our ADVOCATE about Jonah. How I do enjoy the lessons!—and want to thank the writer for them, and pray God to bless him abundantly.

And now we are in trouble, as a Sunday-school. We need a superintendent. Our Sunday-school is carried on by a few faithful teachers (all ladies), assisted twice a month by our pastor. We need a Christian man, a man of God (and they are here in hearing almost—of our Sunday-school bell. God has taught us to pray and believe, and we shall receive. Now we want you, and every Christian whose eye falls on this, to help us to pray for the much-needed help.

Indian Mission.

Received since last report the following amounts: Judge A. G. Myers, Brandon, Miss., $5; Thomas A. Holloman, Phœnix, Miss., $5; Rev. T. J. Holloman, Canton, Miss., $5; W. H. Townsend, Zachary, Miss., $5; W. H. Thornton, Lake, Miss., $5; Rev. D. J. Mitchel (NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE), $5. Many thanks to the brethren, and may God abundantly bless them and theirs with the Indian Mission. Brethren and sisters, please send in.

BOOKS.

DRINKING WATER AND ICE SUPPLIES. By T. M. Prudden, M. D. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, 75 cents.

This little volume contains some very important things that every housekeeper in town and country should know. Pure water is a desideratum everywhere, and the author shows how it may be obtained. Being a scientist, he gives some valuable knowledge of water-bacteria and explodes some false notions in vogue concerning those wonderful little creatures.

THE SPECULATOR. By Clinton Ross. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, New Orleans. Price, 75 cents.

This is a clever story, exceedingly well told, of the rise and reign and downfall and sudden death of a man who made the acquisition of money the one purpose of life.

ISRAEL OFTEN REPROVED.

Amos iv, 4-13.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"He, that being often reproved hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy."—Prov. xxix, 1.

CRITICAL OUTLINE.—I. The Iniquity of Israel. II. Its Reproofs.

MEMORY VERSES.—6-8.

TIME.—About 787 B. C.

When God plans to revolutionize a nation, he generally confides the execution of his designs to those instruments that appear to be the least competent to perform them. This is the divine method of conducting a reform either civil or religious. Luther was the son of a miner; Amos was neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet. Perhaps the wisdom of this manner of procedure depends on the principle that, in order to elevate anything, he that would do the work must first descend to the level of the thing to be raised. Then the resulting effect will be determined only by the different power of the impelling force. Israel's piety had well nigh become a tradition at the time of our present lesson. The nation had forgotten the service of the true God, and become entangled in the revolting rites of heathen idolatry. The time for reproof had come. The cup of iniquity was run over, and Israel must taste the bitter dregs of punishment. For this purpose God sent not a chosen prophet, nor yet one that had had any training in this line. He chose as his messenger a plain herdsman of the little town of Tekoa.

ISRAEL'S INIQUITY.

A scene appears upon the scene and, in tones of irony most galling, begins to rebuke the sins of the people. Idolatry, instituted by him who made Israel to sin, Jerohoam, was then in full sway. Bethel was the seat of the calf worship. But a fall from its whilom position of honor! Jacob's place of prayer was now become a place of abomination; Jacob's ladder crowded with angels had been displaced by the altar consecrated to the golden idol. As a consequence, all communication with the true God had ceased. Unrestrained, they had given rein, their consciences utterly dead to all influences to good, and even multiplied transgression at Gilgal. Gilgal was a town near to Bethel and quite convenient as a seat of idolatrous worship.

But more than this: Israel had refused to return unto the Lord. He had hearkened not at all to the voice of mercy. Sin is a fearful thing in itself; but how great the augmentation of its sinfulness when the sinner persistently refuses the offers of pardon! Israel had departed from God, and was persistent in his course of evil. See the long-suffering mercy of the Lord! Though his people would not return, yet he would not to lament their folly and entreat them with the calls to mercy.

ISRAEL'S REPROOFS.

Calamity has a great power over human hearts. God makes use of these means. A call to repentance frequently comes in the shape of some dire misfortune. We should remember that these trials are not penal, but corrective. They are designed to educate into lives of greater faith and love. Sometimes what makes us mourn and, if rightly interpreted, prove an angel's finger beckoning us heavenward. Notwithstanding, however, the magnificent design, these plans of God may be frustrated. Man, in the exercise of his free will, has the power to resist all these warnings. He pays, indeed, the penalty, but fails of the reward designed. Such was Israel's case.

He had been reproved by famine, by pestilence, and by the fatality of destruction, and yet was unrepentant. God had even sent an earthquake to shake up their slumbering consciences. But all to no purpose. It takes something more than a physical paln or commotion to change a man's heart. Religion does not consist itself in mere externals. Its nature is not physical, but spiritual. Israel had been as a brand plucked from the burning, and yet had not returned. After such appalling pleading, was not even the mercy strained? Could justice longer forbear? The sword-stroke must and yet Mercy extends her hand. Prepare; God must be met; you are in a state of preparation; time, however, is granted. Prepare to meet thy God." Oh, the tender mercy of the Lord! His judgments are consistent. Though Israel has consigned himself by his flagrant violation of a just and holy law, yet mercy holds the time of doom in order to give room of penitence.

This call is made to every sinner. Man has two places of meeting with his transgressor. One is at the mercy-seat, where Jesus answers prayer; the other—and eternal woe to him that is unprepared!—is at the judgment of the great white throne, where Christ wields the scepter of inflexible justice. Man had his choice between meeting him in mercy and in judgment; so with you. Which shall it be?

I've heard of a woman who said she would walk five miles to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription if she couldn't get it without. That is how much had tried it. And it's a medicine which makes itself felt in toning up the system and correcting irregularities as soon as its use is begun. Go to your drug store, pay a dollar, get a bottle and try it—try a second, a third if necessary. Before the third one's all taken you'll know that there's a remedy to help you. Then you'll keep on and a cure'll come. But if you don't feel the help, should be disappointed in the results—you'll find a guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper that'll get your money back for it.

How many women are there who'd rather have the money than health? Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription" produces babies. Wonder is that there's a woman willing to suffer when thore's a guaranteed remedy in the nearest drug store.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Mild and effective.

Bishop Thompson confirmed a class of thirty persons in Natchez recently.

Natchez, by city council resolution, has legislated all kinds of stock off her streets.

During the last decade the percentage of increase in population has been, for Vicksburg, 13.20; Natchez, 43.11; Meridian, 165.07.

There is talk that Ruhln & Howard, of Nashville, Tenn., will remove their cotton factory to Summit. The Board of Directors of the Summit Cotton Mills regard the project favorably.

Crop prospects about Greenville are said to be better than for a decade. A movement is on foot to establish a large cotton yarn fsotory in Greenville, with an experienced manager at its head.

The Alahama coal-men have opened competition with Pittsburg coal-men. Their coal will be shipped by train to Greenville, Miss., and thence to New Orleans by river. The Henry Marx recently carried the first tow of nine barges down.

A new and splendid hotel is to be built at the famous Artesian Springs in Madison county, and everything will be in readiness for the guests by June 1. The waters are said to cure liver, kidney and bowel diseases.

At a meeting of the Board of Swamp Land Commissioners, last week, the 30,800 acres of school indemnity lands confirmed to the State by the United States government were put on sale. These lands are some of the finest pine lands situated in Hancock county.

President Clark, of the Mobile and Ohio railroad, is making arrangements for a branch road from Birmingham to Corinth. He has arranged all the finances, and will shortly file articles of incorporation for the new company in the office of the secretary of State at Montgomery, Ala.

Everybody seems to be getting ready for the unveiling of the Confederate monument in Jackson, June 3. The Mississippian says:

The unveiling of the Confederate monument promises to be the biggest day in the history of Mississippi.

The sub-treasury project has not only stirred up the Mississippians, but keeps them on a jump. One of our exchanges says:

Five or six Mississippi papers favor the sub-treasury; six or eight are on the fence; the rest avow their opposition to the measure, from week to week, giving reasons for the faith in them.

The enterprising editor of the Dawn of Light has succeeded in getting a company organized at Walnut Grove for the construction of a railroad from that place to Forest, or some other convenient point on the Vicksburg and Meridian road. The road proposed is not of the regular kind, but something on a cheap plan, the cost of which is being estimated to be about $2,000 per mile.—Walnut Grove Record.

In the past year there have been thirty handsome residences erected in north Jackson alone; an equal, if not greater number in west Jackson; while of late the south ward has been attracting considerable attention from investors, and is rapidly coming to the front. The building of dwelling-houses is the best evidence of prosperity in a city. Where a man builds his house, there he stakes his all. Jackson can, doubtless, show a longer list of new dwellings than any other city of the State.—Mississippian.

The History of Mississippi, by ex-Governor Robert Lowry and Col. Wm. H. McCardle, is now in the hands of the printer, and will be soon on the market. This publication has been compiled with the utmost diligence and research and will be invaluable to the citizens of Mississippi. It is designed to cover every important political movement and every event bearing upon the development of the commenwealth from the earliest French settlement on to the death of Jefferson Davis, also sketches of the notable men whose lives bear upon the State's history.—Mississippian.

The following from the Clarion-Ledger heats the story told in these columns about an old lady in Southwest Louisiana:

From a private letter we learn that Mrs. Elizabeth Breeland died at Leaksville, Greene county, Miss., on March 27, last, at the advanced age of one hundred and seventeen years, having been born in the year 1774. Her maiden name was Smith, and she was a native of South Carolina. She leaves an offspring of more than three hundred, consisting of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Louisiana Notes.

W. S. Parkerson will address the Memorial Association of Jackson, La., May 1.

The Alexandria city council is taking steps to build water works at a cost of $17,000.

The parish of Lafourche has paid all liabilities and finds itself with a bank account of $5,703.

Franklin will soon have another shingle factory with a capacity of 100,000 shingles per day.

Shreveport is agitating the subject of establishing a cotton factory. A man in Mississippi has offered to furnish the necessary machinery at a reasonable price, and the proposition is meeting with favor among the prominent cotton men and merchants of the city.

The Iberville police jury will exempt from taxation for ten years all central sugar factories erected by chartered companies.

The water from the Ames' crevasse, opposite this city, is very seriously affecting the country about Lafourche, and fears are entertained that the whole of the interior of that parish will be inundated.

Verily, Alexandria will soon be discovered to be the hub of Louisiana. There is talk now of extending the Natchez and Trinity railroad to Alexandria. If so, it will open an important timber country to the world.

The Monroe Times says that the grading between Columbia and Alexandria is nearly completed, when tracklaying will begin and Monroe and Alexandria will be linked in the near future. Alexandria is becoming like the "Eternal City."

The Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf Railway Company proposes to erect the car manufacturing and repair shops at Lake Charles, provided the tax payers give the company a bonus for ten years of a tax of two and one-half mills on the dollar.

Mr. W. W. Duson is sinking an experimental well near Crowley to find out if a good supply of water can be obtained for irrigating purposes away from streams. If this experiment turns out well, as expected, this whole country can be successfully planted in rice, irrespective of water courses.

The land in Acadia parish, until within a few years back, has been considered practically worthless except for stock grazing. The successful raising of rice, however, has opened the eyes of many people here and elsewhere to the immense profits to be reaped in such ventures, and the whole parish is now determined to put in as much as possible of this valuable crop.

More new buildings have been erected in Baton Rouge during the first three months of 1891 than in any town of ten thousand inhabitants in the South, and new contracts are being let daily. We are not beeming, but just steadily growing.—Weekly Truth.

Delhi is "looking up," as the following dispatch shows:

In the past two weeks there has been $20,000 worth of land sold in and around Delhi, purchased by a Michigan emigration agent. It is supposed that the prospect in the near future of a North and South railroad has given the town a boom

It is understood that arrangements have about been consummated for extending the New Orleans and Northwestern road beyond Rayville, La., its present terminus, to a connection with the Houston Central, Arkansas and Northern railroad, and into Arkansas, and also to connect the track in this city with that of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railway.

The following from Baton Rouge shows the state of things in agricultural matters:

News from all parts of the parish indicates that farmers are well up with their work and are not behind last season in that respect. Some have had to plow up and replant on account of injury by the late frosts, but this is not general. Many farmers have determined to put in more cane this year.

A writer in the New Delta, describing Claiborne parish, says:

Its area in square miles is 778; in acres, 447,920; amount of land vacant, 50,000 acres; population in 1880, 18,857; rate of taxation, 11 mills on the dollar.

And this in regard to Homer we can substantiate ourselves:

There is probably no town in the State that can boast of more beautiful and inviting looking homes than Homer. Paint is liberally and tastefully used, and largely assists in accomplishing this desirable attraction to the town. The native shade trees and neatly kept, flower yards add greatly to the picturesque appearance of the residence portion of Homer.

Very Remarkable.

Some three months ago I caused a card to be published in a "city daily," offering a home and heirship to an orphan girl and boy from four to seven years of age, in a good family, in well-to-do circumstances. No one has been secured. A girl alone will be received. The place is still open. Children must be of respectable parentage. Home will be in Southern Arkansas.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Briefs.

The Treasury Department has decided that Lottery tickets from abroad should pay a duty of twenty-five per cent. ad valorem under that section of the McKinley Bill which provides that all printed matter, not especially provided for, shall pay such a tax. According to this, a ticket worth $10 will have to pay $2.50 duty.

The Supreme Court has decided the Lottery case in favor of the Lottery. The court was divided; Chief-Justice Bermudez, Justices Watkins and McEnery in favor of the Lottery, and Justices Breaux and Fenner against. Of course, the people will now have to vote as to whether we shall have the Lottery for another twenty-five years. If the Antis don't wake up and work like beavers, the Lottery will win again.

A good little book is Dr. Cunnyngham's Hand-book of the Sunday-school. It treats of the Ancient Bible School, the Modern Sunday-school, Methods of Teaching, the International Lesson System, Sunday-school Literature, Children's Day, Our Church Law Regarding Sunday-schools and the Epworth League. This is followed by a valuable appendix of Sunday-school statistics, and the International Lessons for 1891 and 1892. This is just the book for every pastor and Sunday-school superintendent and teacher, and it can be had of Bro. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp St., for fifteen cents a copy.

Our church in East End, Meridian, Miss., under the pastorate of our young brother, H. C. Brown, is making good, steady progress. It was organized a little more than three months ago, and now has a membership of about one hundred, and every Sabbath there are additions. The Sunday-school is superintended by J. B. Chatfield, and already has an enrollment of one hundred and forty-two scholars. The congregation has already moved to larger quarters, and are preparing to build a handsome church—one that will be an ornament to the growing city of Meridian. Such growth deserves to flower out in a "beautiful and holy" house of worship. We congratulate our friends and wish them still greater success.

The concert saloons went to law to compel the tax-collector to let them alone in their infamous business, and Judge Ellis rendered the decision in the case last week. It was enough to make the hair stand on end. The decree of the court was that they should close up until they paid $10,000, the amount due for license for 1891, and two per cent. per month interest from March 1 till the license is paid, and five per cent. attorneys' fees on said amount and interest and costs of suit. Why such a business should be licensed at all is a deep disgrace to our law-makers, but when licensed they should be made to conform strictly to the licensing law. Judge Ellis has rendered a judgment which every decent man and woman in the town approves.

The Sunday-school Association of Louisiana will hold its fifth Annual Convention in this city, May 5-7, in Carondelet Street Methodist Church. A full program has been prepared. Besides addresses from our home folks, there will be addresses by Wm. Reynolds, of Illinois, and Mrs. W. F. Crafts, of New York, and our superintendent of public schools, W. H. Jack, of Natchitoches.

An Explanation.

MR. EDITOR: The article in your issue of April 9 does me, the cause and organization I represent so great an injustice that I ask you to give space for as public an explanation.

The report from the Nashville Banner was never intended to open the way for such misrepresentation; for the editor making it gave a friendly and discriminating synopsis of the address upon "The W. C. T. U. and its Mission." Like most reporters, he remembered the amusing, and threw together two humorous phrases which, in the lecture, were wide apart, and had no relation to each other, thus leaving them without their proper setting.

These were held up by that article as bearing upon woman's suffrage, being irreverent to the church, and are made the basis of a warning against a noble organization, its leaders, and its much-needed work.

If the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE were a paper doing service for the liquor traffic, I might not seek room for protest; but, as a Methodist woman who has given years of loyal service to the church, as a temperance worker known for seriousness rather than jesting, I ask you to give the setting of the expressions so severely criticised.

The word "racket" is a quotation from a story told by Gail Hamilton to illustrate how a woman tried to secure the accomplishment of what she could not do herself, viz.: to "build a barn." When questioned why she was out tossing the lumber about and attempting the impossible, she replied: "I know I can't build a barn, but I intend to stay here and keep up such a racket that Halicarnassus will be glad to come and build it." Then came my application in these words: "If the W. C. T. U. is anything, it is an organized 'racket' on this temperance and prohibition questions, and the 'racket' is just begun and will go on until the fathers of the country answer to its mothers why they are willing to make the 'door-yard fence the dead-line of their own boys' safety.'"

The second phrase was reported in the Banner as aimed at a Northern Bishop. This was an error. I said, "editor," not "Bishop." I was discussing, not the church questions, but the industrial life of women and its relation to the home. I briefly give the relation of the criticised phrase:

"Many people are troubled about the effect of the platform work of a few exceptional women on the home life of the country. If any such are listening to me, I wish to ask you seriously to consider a graver problem found in the industrial life of women. If you can imagine an ideal state of society where all men are sober and bread-winners, and all women supported, there might be room for some theories insisted upon; but we face no such ideal conditions. It is said that in New York City alone 27,000 women support their husbands, and the children and a large percentage of these husbands spend their time and part of the wife's hard earnings in the saloons.

"We have a Northern editor who has 'three fits a day' about the possibility of a few women in a generation getting into the General Conference, and when he goes down town to his office he is in the throng with thousands of toiling women who go out from home in the cold gray of the morning and return in the colder gray of twilight. These women have no home life; they are bread-winners, and are forced into the highways, not by ambition or choice, but dire necessity; and such necessity comes largely because men are false to what is said to be the 'divine order of things.'

"I have never heard women criticised for doing hard work to feed their children, or even their idle husbands; but let honest students of women's sphere study her industrial life."

This is the "head and front of my offending." Could your correspondent find no good thing in all that reported address? Was it best to forget the law of kindness, and strike a blow to hinder a great and noble cause, and so prejudice good people, that we must undo his work before we can begin our own? Well may we ask, "Is he for us or our enemies"?

MRS. MARY T. LATHROP.

We cheerfully give the above explanation a place in our columns as an act of justice and courtesy to Mrs. Lathrop. Our correspondent, who wrote the article complained of, was evidently misled by an incorrect report of Mrs. Lathrop's address delivered in Nashville, Tenn. But the tenor of her explanation places our correspondent (*) in a false position. It puts him in the attitude of antagonism to the woman's temperance movement. After repeated readings of the article of "," we can not see anything in it that will justify the thought that it antagonizes that movement in the least. On the contrary, "" says: "'Devout women' have respectful hearing among us when burdened with a message and mission for our social and spiritual good. . . . In their specific work they will have the hearty sympathy and support of all Christians." In these words there is nothing that antagonizes temperance work. What our correspondent objects to is that "irrelevant issues" should be brought in and made part of temperance work. It is well known that this has been done, and temperance workers in the South regret it and contend against it. The "blow" of our correspondent was directed against that particular thing. It is in these words: "But when it" (temperance work) "becomes the propagandist of woman's suffrage and the disorganization of family life and church government, the church assemblies will cease to encourage it, and Christians who are not able to surrender the historic interpretation of the Bible will drop it." Surely there is no opposition to temperance work in that sentence. If anyone sees in those words a "blow" at the woman's temperance work, it is because such an one recognizes that the things named are constituents of that work. This is our correspondent's contention.

As far as the ADVOCATE is concerned, it has no mean record in its support of the woman's temperance work, and its appeal is to its patrons and readers as against all outsiders. As far as the editor is concerned, he has just this to say: When Miss Willard made her first visit to New Orleans, and had not where to place the sole of her little foot, contrary to the popular mind on the subject, he opened his church and invited her to speak, which she did. He has upheld her in her temperance work ever since; but when pressed to follow her on some other lines, he respectfully declines.

This is the "head and front" of the ADVOCATE's offending, and we leave the whole matter to the calm judgment of our readers, with this final word: The ADVOCATE will not be "read out" of the Christian temperance work by any traveling lecturer from abroad, nor by any president of a State Union at home.

Ministerial Education Again.

Appreciating the logic of facts, I wrote to the secretary of our Ministerial Association for all the data of the association from its organization. Nothing so interests people as to know what is being done with money contributed for any cause, and especially to know whether the cause has succeeded. We are now able to give a full report, and we believe one that will satisfy all concerned. A detailed report would be too tedious.

This association was organized in 1870, which makes it just twenty years old. In this time, up to date, $4,220 have been collected and expended on the education of young men, making an annual average of $211—a sum very small, indeed, in proportion to the demands. That this money has been judiciously expended is evident from the fact that it has assisted twenty-five young men in securing, in part or in whole, classical educations, and covers an aggregate of fifty-five sessions of school. Or, again, twenty-five young men have been aided at an expense of about $75 per year. We do not claim to have borne all the expenses in every case; for, indeed, we have had, in some instances, only to supplement the means of those who lacked only a part necessary to run them through the session.

Yet, so far as our association is concerned, we can safely compare figures with the catalogues of our best and cheapest colleges. These figures show about one-half the ordinary expense for board and incidentals for the average young man at school. We doubt if it can be shown that any organization has ever done so much good on so little capital. Those who have contributed to this most worthy cause can thus see that their money has not been squandered, and we guarantee that the future shall show as good a record as the past.

Some are ready to ask, Where are those who have received these benefits, and what are they doing for the church? We would be glad to give the names of all, but consideration for others forbid. Suffice it to say of the twenty-five persons assisted by this society: all, perhaps, save one, are leading honorable lives so far as we can ascertain. One is a prominent member of the Pacific Conference; one is in the Texas Conference; another is connected with a school in that State; seven are members of the Mississippi Conference, and are all appreciated for their intelligence and worth (how I would like to give names just here!); five are now at Centenary College and doing well, and two are pursuing a theological course at Vanderbilt; one has left us, and is a minister in the Baptist Church. One very notable feature connected with this association is that its first president, Hon. Thos. Reed, was a layman, and its first secretary was our enterprising, progressive brother of the local ministry, Rev. I. Miller. This is suggestive, at least, of the necessity of such an organization, and the high appreciation of an educated ministry by our thoughtful brethren of the laity. Why should their interest in this department of the church be less to-day than then? Yea, does not the advanced ideas and the general disposition to educate in other branches demand an equal increase in zeal for an educated ministry? By this I do not mean a ministry who have passed through a regular theological course, but one educated in the power of thought and a right use of our mother tongue.

This must be if we stand abreast of the times and compete successfully with our sister denominations in the great work of building up the church of God. To do this we need all the sympathy and aid that the laymen of the church can give us. The association, composed, as it is, almost entirely of traveling preachers, can do little more than plan and stress the cause before their congregations. Their usually small allowance will permit them to contribute but little compared with the needs of the work in hand.

Another fact worthy of note is that of the beneficiaries upon this association up to date a considerable majority have been sons of laymen—men good and true, but unable to educate their sons for such responsible positions.

Another fact is, as given by our worthy secretary, that we are likely to have an increase of applicants at the opening of the fall terms of our colleges, and that we are totally unprepared to meet the demands unless means be devised. Men of Israel, help! We can not afford, with our 37,000 members in the Mississippi Conference, to refuse aid to a single worthy applicant.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

A Returned Missionary.

Mrs. S. G. Weems, wife of Dr. J. M. Weems, our missionary in Mexico, arrived in our city last Friday, accompanied by a young Mexican girl, Julie Roldan. News of her coming had preceded her, and several of our elect ladies—Mrs. Carre, Mrs. Lyons, Mrs. Bartels, Mrs. Auvray, Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Alexander—with Pastor LaPrade met her at the Southern Pacific depot. Mrs. Weems was quite anxious to get on to Brookhaven to meet her daughter, whom she has not seen for two years; but the solicitations of the ladies prevailed, and she consented to stop over for a few days. On Saturday, at one o'clock, a public reception was tendered her in Carondelet Street Church. Many of the ladies of the missionary societies of our church in this city were present, and a few gentlemen. Mrs. Weems gave a very interesting account of our work in Mexico, stressing particularly her own work among the children. She has a day-school numbering from forty to sixty, and the progress she is making with them is quite gratifying. She represents our cause as going forward, and that already during this year about one hundred have joined our church in her husband's district. She gave some thrilling instances of the power of the gospel in the hearts and upon the lives of the Mexicans, which showed us that the old truth is still "the power of God unto salvation." As the Mexican Mission started in Carondelet Street Church, and has always been a special field where our missionary ladies have delighted to spend their efforts, these recitals of Mrs. Weems were especially encouraging. At the close of the informal talk, Pastor LaPrade proposed that money enough be raised, by each contributor paying one dollar per month, to employ an additional Bible woman for work in the City of Mexico, and ten or twelve names were given.

Sunday morning Mrs. Weems visited the Carondelet Street Sunday-school with her protege, Julie Roldan, and gave a pleasant talk to the school. On Monday she left here for Brookhaven. Mrs. Weems expects to spend about two months among her friends in Mississippi.

The first number of the Tennessee Methodist is on our table. It is a six-column eight-page paper, and this first number gives promise of much for the future. We wish our friends in their new venture all possible success. Rev. B. F. Haynes is editor, and Rev. J. M. Wright, D. D., and Prof. J. M. Webb, assistants. Price, $2.

The West Virginia Methodist has been consolidated with the Central Methodist, and its editor, Rev. S. G. Preston, is assistant editor of the Central.

Notes.

The president of the Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in her annual address, delivered in this city, last week, asserted that all the Christian ministers in this city who really favor that organization can be counted on the fingers of one hand. If that is so, then the members of that organization ought to re-examine the principles which govern it and its methods of work to see if the cause does not lie in those principles and methods.

A layman in our office spoke of the note we had last week in regard to our young preachers growing. He said that he knew one preacher, "every one of whose sermons evinced that he was a good student and a thorough searcher after truth. This preacher is growing constantly upon his congregation, and growing constantly in the enrichment of his own mind, and when he speaks he has something to say. He not only possesses the truth, but he is possessed by it. He feeds the people. The reason is, he not only prays, but he studies and makes the best preparation for his pulpit services." We know the preacher, and what the layman said is true.

The Wesley Centennial has brought to light many new things in regard to the marvelous man, Wesley. We reproduce a short story given to the Methodist Times, of London, by a Quaker:

Wesley and Whitefield were once together at the same country inn, where they occupied the same double-bedded room. They were both exceedingly weary, and Whitefield was soon asleep, without any outward manifestation of prayer or devotion. Wesley came to his bedside with the words, "Faith, without works; faith without works; it will never do." Whitefield, on rising in the morning, found Wesley on his knees, by his bedside, fast asleep. We may imagine his pleasure as he exclaimed, "Work without faith; works, without faith; it will never do!"

The president of the Louisiana Woman's Christian Temperance Union, in her annual address, lamented the apathy shown by members of the Union in the good cause, and seemed to be surprised at it. The reason for that apathy is not hard to find. There are many different lines of work enterprised by that organization, and these strike different people with varying degrees of force. Some are more in favor of one line than another, and thus differences are engendered in the organization itself, and that cripples its efficiency. There is nothing truer than this: "When the supporters of any cause, no matter how good it or they may be, got to differing, the cause is certain to suffer."

We call the special attention of our members in the Mississippi Conference to Bro. Holloman's article, in another column, on Ministerial Education. The facts which his paper brings out in regard to the work of the Ministerial Aid Association of the Mississippi Conference are very gratifying indeed. That this association has assisted, in whole or in part, in educating twenty-five young ministers is a fact worth thinking over. Such statements as are made by Bro. Holloman show how much good may be done, and how widely that good may be distributed, with a little money judiciously handled. And now, as they have done so well, they have earned the right to expect a little more help than they have heretofore had. Read the last sentences of the article, and you see they need more help. Your duty, brother?

Bishop Keener knows what a "luxury" is. Hear him:

Oh, what a luxury it is to hear a good sermon from a man who has worked hard over it and then gone into the closet with it, and it shows as much of the closet as it does of the lamp. That is the sort of preaching that will take the world, and why should we not take it?

He knows also, not only how to preach, but he knows what sort of preaching the world needs. Hear him on that point:

As you get older you will find that you have wasted a great deal time on side issues; brethren, get wise; waste no time in side issues; preach Christ and righteousness, so the Holy Spirit can use the text and the sermon; do not preach on nothing and everything and something; try to preach upon Christ; life is what we want, and power, and this is what Methodism holds forth to the world, a system of life and religion. Religion is simple existence; it is only knowing Jesus. Now preach that.

He has also a very clear conception of the esprit de corps of the itinerancy, and he has formulated that conception in words as poetic as they are true. Hear him on that point:

There is a rythmic grandeur in the itinerancy; as grand as the aotheosis above, is this movement below. The same harmony that is found in the tones of the lute in the upper realm is the harmony that moves us, the Spirit of Love, the harmony of the Spirit of all grace and of all truth, the Holy Spirit. He it is that binds us together and makes us flow into each other. We are in the highest sense free, and we come together in this very beautiful bond and co-action under the great impulse of the Savior himself, marshalling his forces, for he is a God of order.

Personal and Otherwise.

Dr. George W. Carter will fill out the unexpired term of Dr. Edwards' pastorate in Lynchburg.

The great German warrior and tactician, Count Von Moltke, died April 24, aged ninety-one years.

Rev. W. R. Lambuth, our missionary to Japan, who has been some time in this country, lectured last week in Waynesboro, Miss.

Up to date more than 88,000 have been reported as collected on Easter Sunday for the Scarritt Training-school at Kansas City.

Our presiding elder, Dr. C. F. Evans, has had quite a spell of sickness; but we are glad to be able to say that he is improving and will soon be himself again.

The annual meeting of the college of Bishops will be held, May 6, in Wilmington, N. C., and the annual meeting of the Board of Missions will be held in the same city, May 8.

Rev. R. S. Woodward was in town last Monday making purchases of furniture for his new district parsonage at Brookhaven. We congratulate all concerned on the success of that enterprise.

Last week the Independent published the opinions of one hundred Bishops in regard to the opening of the Columbian Exposition on Sunday. It is an "extraordinary array of advocates for the Sabbath."

Dr. J. B. Walker has recovered sufficiently to be able to remove to his country home, where it is hoped that his convalescence will be so accelerated that he may soon regain his accustomed vigor.

Dr. T. C. Wier passed through the city last week on his way to Bunkie, La., to perform a marriage ceremony. He gave us a call going and coming. He was much pleased with his trip to that part of Louisiana.

Several preachers' wives have been in attendance upon the Woman's Temperance Convention: Mrs. B. F. Alexander, of Morgan City; Mrs. B. F. White, of Monroe, and Mrs. J. A. Parker, of Baton Rouge.

We had the honor of a pleasant visit last week from Mrs. H. B. Kells, the able editor of the White Ribbon, the organ of the W. C. T. U. of Mississippi. The pleasure of the interview will abide with us for many days.

We regret to learn that Rev. A. E. Clay, our pastor at Dryades Street Church, was so unwell on last Sunday as to be unable to fill his appointments. We trust that he will be spared a protracted spell.

To overcome the marks of age, all who have gray beards should use Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers. The best and cleanest dye made for coloring brown or black.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. A. Bowen reports from Aberdeen, Miss.: "The Rev. Sam P. Jones and Rev. George S. Inge are conducting the most powerful meeting here we have seen. Thousands attend every day. This meeting surpasses the one last year. Services will continue till Sunday night. Rejoice with us over scores of conversions and a deep work in the church."

—Rev. T. S. West writes from Wesson: "We have just closed a very interesting protracted meeting; thirty-three accessions. Dr. John Boring, of the Holston Conference, assisted. He greatly delighted our people with his plain, pointed, searching gospel sermons. I enjoyed his preaching very much. He did not tell us much about astronomy, geology, astrology, ichthyology, or any other ology—except biology. He ignored almost all of the classics except the Bible. From this book he quoted largely. He impressed me as being a holy man, one having attained to the third blessing, for he has the grace of humility."

—Rev. J. M. Cowan reports from Martin charge, Mississippi Conference: "We are in the midst of loyal and appreciative people. Since my arrival at the parsonage in Hays, on Tuesday after the first Lord's day in January, the 'good things' have been coming in every week. It has been a gradual pounding all the while until yesterday, when to our very great surprise the good ladies of Cane Ridge neighborhood stormed us, bringing with them the necessaries and substantials, such as sugar, coffee, flour, rice, grits, canned goods, pickles, and other nice articles, nearly or quite enough to last the prophet's little family six months. Pleasant people, indeed, to work with! The outlook in every way on this charge is good."

—Rev. J. G. Sibley writes from Summit, Miss.: "The good ladies of Summit know just how to make a preacher and his family to understand how they feel toward them. A few days since a fine company of the finest ladies of this place came down upon us with such tremendous bundles of life's choicest necessaries that we will not need the groceryman's wagon any more in a great while. It is needless to undertake an inventory of them; therefore, suffice it to say, there was enough in variety and quantity. God graciously and abundantly bless each donor and help the thankful recipients to be worthy of such kindness! This charge is constantly improving along all lines; and our love for this people increases with our acquaintance with them. They have shown us kindness only. We were pleased with them at first, and they grow upon us as the year advances."

Memorial Tablet.

The North Mississippi Conference, at its last session, appointed a committee of three—T. J. Newell, J. M. Wyatt and J. W. Honnoll—to have a memorial tablet to the memory of the Rev. John Barcroft placed in the Methodist Church at Holly Springs. Messrs. Carson and Bradberry have just placed in the church a beautiful tablet, 3x2, containing in good-sized bronzed letters the following inscription:

Presented by the North Mississippi Conference.
To the Memory of the Rev. John Barcroft.
Born Aug. 7, 1833; Died July 6, 1880.

He was thirty-one years a traveling Methodist preacher; four years presiding elder of the Holly Springs district, and twenty years the faithful secretary of the North Mississippi Conference. His last words were; "If my Master has called for me, I am ready."

The church at Holly Springs is preparing a nice tombstone for his grave. J. W. HONNOLL.

PASTOR'S BOOK—NOW READY.

Messrs. Shaw & Blaylock:

The J. T. L. Annis Pastor's Book has just reached me. I can not commend it too highly to Pastors. In revising it has been brought to a high degree of perfection. No Methodist Pastor should be without it. I am thankful for such a book.

Respectfully, T. L. ADAMS.

The above book, revised and enlarged, can be bought only from the undersigned. Price, postage paid, 50 cents per copy.

An Appeal.

To the Brethren:

Not a dollar has been raised or appropriated by you to carry on the book business here since this great interest has been committed to my charge. I have never before appealed to you through the press for money, either as a gift, an investment or as a payment on account. I now ask (in a financial strait) that every reader of the ADVOCATE who is indebted to me for any amount will remit either all, or as much as they can of amount due me on account, at once.

I further request all friends of the enterprise to send in a cash order for Bibles, books, tracts, or Sunday-school literature. If all readers of the ADVOCATE will comply with this request, present need will be met, and I will be very grateful.

Church Organs.

The following letter was received without any solicitation whatever, and explains itself:

FARRAND & VOTEY, Detroit, Mich.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., Jan. 5, 1891.

Farrand & Votey Organ Co.

GENTLEMEN.—After nearly a year of trial of the magnificent organ you erected in our Church, I feel constrained to write to express my unqualified satisfaction with it in every respect. It is not only the finest-looking organ I have ever seen, being a grand ornament to the Church edifice, but the sweetest-toned instrument of the kind I have ever listened to. While it is fully as large as it ought to be, and fills the large audience-room with tones full of majesty, there is not a harsh or rough-sounding pipe in it. On the contrary, it is so soft and truly musical, that to listen to it is an unfailing joy. All our people concur in the above. Yours truly,

H. L. CHAPMAN,
Pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church.

P. S. Give my regards to Mr. Wood, whose gentlemanly and genial manners, while engaged in erecting the organ, gave us all great pleasure.

Yours, etc.,
H. L. CHAPMAN.

Half-Fare Excursion to Birmingham and Return.

Agents Queen and Crescent Route will, on May 5 to 8, inclusive, sell excursion tickets from all coupon stations to Birmingham, Ala., and return at one fare for the round trip. Tickets good for return until May 31, on account of the Southern Baptist Convention.

NOTICES.

To the Pastors of Greenville District:

Dear Brethren: Will you please forward me the names of the delegates and members of the District Conference immediately, so that I can have the roll made out by the Conference.

C. H. OWEN.

To the Preachers of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: It is positively necessary for me to have the names of the delegates to the Brookhaven District Conference as soon as possible; therefore, will you all please send me the names of all of them who will be at all likely to attend, soon as reasonably possible for you to do so, and oblige,

Your obedient servant,

J. G. SIBLEY,
Summit, Miss.

To the Preachers and Sunday-school Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference—

Brethren: See to it that timely arrangements are made for the observance of Children's Day by every church and Sunday-school in your charges. Let no time be lost nor means spared in making ample provision for the occasion, that all the children of the church in our bounds may partake in the delight and profits which it affords. Send to me at once for programmes.

G. W. BACHMAN.
Kosciusko, Miss.

All persons attending the woman's missionary meeting on May 7, and the Winona District Conference on the eighth, at Lexington, Miss., can return on one-third fare by getting certificates from agent, properly receipted at time of purchasing tickets. We are making arrangements to take cars of all who come. Trains arrive here at seven A. M. from the east and six P. M. from the west daily. We hope to have a full attendance.

J. C. LOWE.
Lexington, Miss.

To the Delegates of the Brandon District Conference, to Convene at Hickory, May 27-30:

When you buy ticket get certificate from agent that you paid full fare going, and this certificate, when signed by secretary of Conference, will entitle holders to tickets for return at one-third fare. I hope all delegates will come. We will take good care of you. Trains on which delegates come arrive 2:48 P. M. and 8:02 P. M. It will be better to come on Wednesday. If you wait until Thursday, you will miss the opening service. Come prepared to stay over until Monday.

Mr. Editor, we want you to come.

J. M. MORSE.
Newton, Miss.

We hope every missionary society and every pastoral charge in the Brookhaven district will be represented at the district missionary meeting, to be held at Wesson on Friday, May 8. We are planning for an interesting and profitable occasion. The meeting will open at half-past nine A. M. at the Methodist Church. The day sessions will be devoted to the reading of reports from auxiliaries, discussion of plans and other matters of interest connected with the missionary work in the district. At the evening service, beginning at half-past seven, there will be a missionary address by Rev. R. S. Woodward. Mrs. Weems is expected to be in the State at that time, and we hope to secure her presence at the meeting. Pastors are especially invited to come and aid us with their counsel.

ADDIE V. MARSHALL,
Dist. Sec.
Brookhaven, Miss.

To All Concerned in the District Conference of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference:

The Columbus District Conference will be held at Sturges, instead of Shuqualak, May 28-31. This change is due to no fault of the good people of Shuqualak. Sturges is on the Aberdeen branch of the Illinois Central railway. The mail train going east reaches there before eight A. M., and the local freight going west before eleven A. M. The local freight will wait at Starkville for members coming on the morning M. and O. train, via Artesia. Will all the members please come as promptly as possible, and will the preachers please see that the Quarterly Conference records are brought for examination?

Let me urge that reports of charges be in writing, both for accuracy and as a favor to the secretary. The session will begin at ten o'clock A. M., Thursday, May 28. Bishop C. B. Galloway is expected to preside.

A Good Cyclopedia.

"The COLUMBIAN CYCLOPEDIA seems to me to strike a happy medium between the loose, superficial works and the too elaborate and profound ones, which few are competent or desirous of using. Most of the larger general cyclopedias are overloaded with a mass of technical science and official detail that is embarrassing and useless to ordinary readers. The COLUMBIAN is eminently practical, sufficiently full, and carefully compiled, well got up, convenient in form and extent, remarkably cheap, and, as I should judge, admirably adapted to families and general consultation. I think that if properly presented to the public, it will have a very wide sale, and be an exceedingly useful work. There is ample room in the market for a Cyclopedia like this, which combines, likewise, the advantage of being an excellent Dictionary of the English Language."—PROF. JAMES STRONG, S. T. OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

ONCE UPON A TIME.

BY FRANK DEMINSTER SHERMAN.

When I was young, and long before
The Muse came tapping at my door,
I used to often sit and think
Of things which now I've put in ink.
What curious things I used to dream!
How very true they all did seem!
And when I came to bed at night
I begged my mother to recite
The Tales of Once upon a Time,
All written down in simple rhyme.
How eagerly I listened, and
How far I went in Fairy-land!
And these same songs she sang to me
Still murmur in my memory.

For me she made the world anew—
A jewel of each drop of dew;
The autumn leaves of golden tint
Were coins come freshly from the mint;
The birds were poets all who sang;
The flowers were bells the fairies rang;
And everything I saw became
Another, with another name.

So, little folks, my verses are Like beads from childhood's calendar
For you to string on Fancy's line,
To be your joy as they were mine.
Perchance for you they shall repeat
The same old stories, strangely sweet,
Which filled my days and nights with joy
When I was but a little boy;
And you shall start where I began,
To learn to be a happy man.
I wish you all the joy I had To make my childhood bright and glad!
—Harper's Young People.

MR. EDITOR: My papa takes the ADVOCATE, and we all enjoy reading it. I also enjoy reading the little peoples' letters. I have just been reading some of them, and beg Addie E. Ball not to be offended when I say she is mistaken about the word "reverend" being in Psalm iii, 9. She will find it in Psalm cxi, 9. We are all sitting around a pleasant fire; papa is reading Wesley's notes; mama and my teacher are looking for something in the Bible, and I have been reading the ADVOCATE until I started this letter. I have three little brothers and one sister. Little sister is sick. I am going to school, and the teacher, Miss Kimball, boards at our house. We do not have Sunday-school regularly. Our pastor is Rev. C. D. Cecil. He preaches on the first Sunday in each month. We all like him very much. I will close by asking a question: How many verses in the Old Testament? Hoping this will not reach the waste-basket, I remain,
Your friend,
MARY F. McLEAN.
Gayden, La.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading the children's department in your paper and like it very much. I am a little girl ten years old. My oldest sister and brother are off at school, and I have one brother at home. I am the baby. I go to school. The teacher boards with us. Her name is Miss Cora McCalip. I like her very much. I study grammar, geography, spelling, arithmetic and reading. We have a nice Sunday-school. Papa superintends. Mama is my teacher. Our pastor is Mr. A. D. Miller. We like him very much. Hoping this will escape the waste-basket, I will close by answering the cousin's question: There are 254 chapters and 8,081 verses in the New Testament. Where do you find the word "prospereth," first, in the Bible?
Your little friend,
EMMA GIZA.
Brandywine, Miss.

Many years have gone since a good family doctor originated Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl seven years old. I have a dog named Capt. Jinks. He is a very smart dog. I have a cat named Dinah. She is a good mouse-cat. Mama has just read I. Smith's letter, written from Wesson, Miss. She says it is the best letter she has ever read in this column, and she thinks he will turn out either a Bishop or a President. I would like to know his name. I have to do like he did, and ask my mama how to spell all the words, though I can read in the fourth reader. I never have gone to school any. I lived in New Orleans until I was nearly three years old.
PRITCHETT E. HARRISON.
McKenzie, Tenn.

MR. EDITOR: I go to school at McTyeire Institute. Rev. J. H. Harrison is the principal. I have been going to school here seven months. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Miss Nannie Witt is my teacher; but she is on a visit now. We will observe Easter Sunday, and hope to make a good collection for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school. The children have made several dollars already. We will have an entertainment to-night in behalf of the Ladies' Parsonage Society.

A Dog's Funeral.

Even a homely dog may win affection by being kind and loving. The New York Times thus describes a dog's funeral which recently took place in Bucyrus, Ohio: "Frank, the pet dog of the men employed on the Toledo and Ohio Central railroad, died last week. His body was placed in a handsome casket, and on the day of the funeral an engine and car were draped in black, the casket was placed in the car, and the train bore Frank's remains to the grave, while all the engine bells in the yard were tolled.

"Frank was an ugly dog in appearance, but happy in disposition, and he had barked in a neighborly way and wagged his tail sociably among the trainmen for years. He won their hearts. Some men came fifty miles to attend the funeral, and there were tears shed over Frank's grave."

How to Look at a Gift.

Patty had received a doll's trunk at Christmas; and as Prue seemed to wish for one, the grandmama, who acted as "fairy godmother" to the children, gave her one for her birthday.

It happened to be a little smaller than Patty's, and Patty liked nothing better than to call Prue's attention to the fact.

Prue bore it very well; but finally, when Patty said, with a pitying air, "Prue, I'm so used to my big trunk, that when I look at yours it looks so small to me!" Prue turned, in fierce and virtuous indignation:

"Well, I don't care, Patty, you're not a bit nice! It isn't the smallness you ought to look at when anybody gives you anything—it's the kindness."—Ex.

Everybody knows that at this season the blood is filled with impurities, the accumulation of months. All these impurities and every trace of scrofula, salt rheum, or other diseases may be expelled by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Be sure to get Hood's.

Willie's little sister Bessie was allowed an "outing" with her mother, one evening, but Willie could not go, and was only reconciled at last by the permission to "sit up late" with Aunt Hattie. As the evening wore on, however, the little man grew drowsy—gaping every few minutes. Auntie said, by and by, "I expect Willie's sleepy," whereupon he straightened himself up very briskly, and said, with much emphasis, "Oh no, I isn't, auntie—only my mouth needs stwetching!"—Exchange.

Ralph and his brother Teddie are as unlike as can be. Ralph is a quiet, grave little soul, given to much thinking, and Ted is a real little chatterbox. One night mama put her boys to bed, and for a season a perfect little stream of chatter issued forth from Ted's bed, with but an occasional short remark from Ralph's. At last a plaintive little voice called out: "O mama, won't you please to stop Ted, so's I can think!"—Youth's Companion.

Little Leo, aged three, was watching the sunset. It was very brilliant, and the clouds, all crimson and gold, had a mottled appearance. "O grandma, grandma," he cried, "do come quick and see—the moon is melting the sky!"

One day, while Gertie was watching a pet lamb which was quietly chewing its cud, she exclaimed, "O grandma, see! the little lamb is chewing gum!"

A MARVELOUS CLOCK.—The tower of the public building now in course of erection in Philadelphia is to be provided with a clock, which, for size alone, will be one of the marvels of the world. The centre of the dial (twenty-five feet in diameter) will be 351 feet above the street. It is calculated that it will take a year to place the clock machinery in the tower after the building has been completed. The bell is to weigh between 20,000 and 25,000 pounds, and will be second in weight to the great Montreal cathedral bell (which weighs 28,000 pounds), and it is calculated that its peal will be heard even to the most distant part of the city. Chimes similar to those of the Westminster clock will be used, ringing at the quarter, half, three-quarter, and an hour. To distinguish the time at night, the dial will be illuminated by electricity, so that the position of the hands can be seen from any point of the city. The minute-hand is to be twelve feet and the hour-hand nine feet in length, while the Roman figures on the dial will measure two feet and eight inches in length. A steam engine will be placed in the tower for the purpose of winding up this most wonderful timepiece each day.—Age of Steel.

THE NEW YORK PASTEUR INSTITUTE.—Dr. Paul Gibier, director of the New York Pasteur Institute, in his first annual report gives as follows the results of the preventive inoculations against hydrophobia performed at the above institute during the first year of its existence (February 18, 1890, to February 18, 1891): 828 persons having been bitten by dogs or cats came to be treated. For 643 of these persons it was demonstrated that the animals which attacked them were not mad. Consequently the patients were sent back, after having had their wounds attended, during the proper length of time, when it was necessary.

In 185 cases the anti-hydrophobic treatment was applied, hydrophobia of the animals which inflicted bites having been evidenced clinically, or by the inoculation in the laboratory, and in many cases by the death of some other persons or animals bitten by the same dogs. No death caused by hydrophobia has been reported among the persons inoculated. Indigents were treated free of charge. The persons treated were from all parts of the country.—Scientific American.

SUSTAINING CAPACITY OF THE GREAT REPUBLIC.—According to a recent census bulletin, the ratio of land and water surface is 98.16 and 1.84 per cent. respectively. This bulletin also gives the area of the States and Territories by counties, and the classification of the latter by sizes. The average number of persons to each square mile of the land surface of the Union is 21.08.

As illustrative of the sustaining capacity of the United States, the bulletin says that if Texas, the largest State in the Union, was as thickly populated as the State of Rhode Island, it would have 83,523,628 inhabitants, while if the United States had a density of population equal to that of Rhode Island, the population of the Union, instead of being 62,622,250, would reach the enormous sum of 945,766,300, or nearly two-thirds of the present population of the world.—Scientific American.

American Characteristics.

"See thou twist not the rope so hard till it length it break." How often we hear it said, that Americans break down so much earlier in life than Europeans. Bismarck, Moltke, Gladstone, De Lesseps are all very old men, but still vigorous. How many have we of their age, still active and robust. Whatever may be the cause, we can not deny the fact. All that is left to do is to restore the lost vitality. Read what Compound Oxygen has accomplished in this direction. We have scores of testimonials from overworked patients. We simply give you a specimen, and refer you to our brochure for more.

HOUSEHOLD.

Boys' Rights.

BY REV. GILBERT FREDERICK, D. D.

The demand of the hour is for personal rights. All classes of people through labor, social and other organizations are demanding "rights." Knights of Labor, Farmers' Alliances, woman's societies, etc., ad infinitum, are clamorous for individual "rights." These "rights" are not always right, yet they are none the less demanded. There are rights, however, for which few men plead. Has ever an ear heard, amid the din of this strife, that boys have rights? If never, then let it listen now.

BOYS HAVE RIGHTS IN THE HOME.

Some man, who I fear is already "dead at the top," has published his plan for rearing boys. He recommends that as soon as the boy nature begins to show itself the boy be placed in a good-sized barrel, headed in and fed through the bung-hole until the disease has had its run and the boy can be released with safety to the family and community. There are many men who have not had the courage to publish their theory for bringing up boys, who agree in general with the above, some of whom put their theory into practice as far as circumstances and good society will permit. It would not be a bad thing for the boys to organize an Arctic expedition to discover that north pole of humanity who invented this direction and to protect themselves from all who would practice its like. In some families the father monopolizes all the privileges of noise-making, and the boy must move noiselessly about like a little gentleman. The older ones may track in mud and may barter and play, but the boy must keep clean shoes, never swap knives or tease his sisters.

Any boy that is worth raising has spirit in him; it is a part of his nature and necessary to his coming manhood that he should be active. He has a right to make his share of noise in the home. Let us make a parable of what our eyes have seen and our ears have heard.

Charlie was making a noise in the sitting-room and his mother sent him to the kitchen, the girl sent him to the barn, the coachman sent him to the street. He came to a playground where was a sign: "No boys allowed on these grounds." He deciphered a poster on a door, "This house for rent, to a family without boys." He sat on a curb-stone and a policeman said, "Move on." At last he met a pleasant-faced man standing before an open store, who spoke kindly, enticed him in, showed him his birds and played games with him.

After this the boy was much away from home; indeed, home had lost its charm to him. Week by week the games of cards were played, with bad companions and diluted drinks. Money and little articles were raised from the home. At last the mother awoke, was horrified to find that her son, yet hardly grown, was a drinker, a gambler and a thief.

Overdrawn, you say, this parable is, yet we have counted in the saloon of one small city, on one evening, forty-two boys between the ages of ten and seventeen. In one place were ten such, in another fourteen, in another sixteen, sitting at tables and gaming under the direction of the proprietors.

Boys have rights at home, and no parent has a right, from motives of personal comfort or by inconsiderate treatment, to turn them out of doors. If a saloon-keeper can keep the average boy occupied for hours and weeks, perhaps, parents ought to find a better way to do the same at home, and with infinitely greater profit to the boy.

BOYS HAVE RIGHTS IN FATHERS.

The boy who spoke of his father as the man "that stays at our house on Sunday," may have been given to exaggeration, as boys are apt to be, yet he did no worse than magnify a truth. Multitudes of boys get no training from the head of the family. All too often the father believes he has no time and no responsibility for the training of his children. The fever of business with him is never broken, and a needed element of strength in the education of the boy is lacking. We know fathers who have spent months breaking a colt who never spent a day breaking a boy, but that same boy has spent years breaking the heart of his mother.

Eli grossly neglected the training of his sons, and thus brought his own gray hairs in sorrow to the grave. So also did King David suffer from his mistrained, over-petted son, Absalom. It is not only the duty and privilege of a father to train his boy, but the boy has a right to demand that his father give time, study, patience and example to his proper upbringing. This sin of neglect entails destruction upon the children in the third and fourth generation, besides weakening the home as an educational force and badly affecting society in general.—Standard.

OBITUARIES.

LOVELACE—JOHN H. LOVELACE was born on Belly Island, Catahoula parish, La., July 17, 1821, and died March 30, 1891, having resided on the Island his whole life. Bro. Lovelace was twice married: first, when twenty-one years old to Miss Patience Kirkland; his second marriage was, April 28, 1859, to Miss Lucy O. Allen of New Castle, Ky., who still survives her husband. Only four children of the two families are now living.

Bro. Lovelace joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pine Hill, in 1876, under the pastorate of Rev. C. R. Godfrey, and has filled nearly all the offices of the church to the satisfaction of his brethren and with honor to himself. He believed that "dependence was the bond of society" and, therefore, encouraged social intercourse among his neighbors. He was charitable to a fault, and his heart went out in sympathy to the sorrowing.

When asked by the writer, only a short while before his death, about the future, he gave the very brightest evidence of the power of the religion of Christ, both to live and to die by. We laid his mortal remains away in Pine Hill Cemetery, on the evening of April 1, with Masonic honors and a Christian burial, surrounded by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The soldier of Christ has laid down his armor and taken up his crown.

May the God of love fill the vacancy in the heart of his loving wife and daughters, and help them to realize that "earth has no sorrow that Heaven can not heal."

W. L. HAMIL, P. C.

WELCH—Sister NARCISSUS WELCH (nee Saulsbury) was born in Desha county, Ark., Dec. 1, 1842; married John A. Welch, Nov. 7, 1875, and died near Leesburg, La., Feb. 26, 1891.

Sister Welch professed faith in Christ about fifteen years ago, and joined the M. E. Church, and led an exemplary Christian life until the messenger came and called her from labor to rest. She had a loving nature, and was loved by all who knew her. As a mother, she was loving and tender, and endeavored by precept and example to point her children to her Savior as a companion, true and faithful, and all those who knew and associated with her felt the influence and force of her godly life.

Sister Welch had consumption, and was confined to her bed for several weeks before her death; but in all of her suffering she leaned on the strong arm of God, and was resigned to his will. She loved the songs of Zion, and often asked us when visiting her to sing, in which she would take part, and then testify that the Lord was present and precious to her soul. In her parting messages to her family and friends she was calm and serene, asking those she loved to shed no tears for her; and her last words were, "Lord Jesus, bear me over."

May God comfort her husband and five little children, with her aged mother and many friends, and may they follow her as she followed Christ, and meet her on the other side of the river, where parting comes no more!

C. F. STAPLES, P. C.

ALFORD—SIRLEY WEEMS, infant son of Bro. and Sister W. J. Alford, was born near Mt. Hermon, La., May 10, 1890, and died March 27, 1891. In September, 1890, he was dedicated to God in baptism by the writer according to the beautiful ritual of our church.

He was a beautiful and sweet-spirited child, and manifested unusual intelligence for one so young. He could understand much of what was said to him, and had already begun to talk. He was the idol in the pleasant home of a large family, forming the bright and happy center of the love of parents, brothers and sisters; but now he is gone. The cradle is empty, his voice is hushed, and our hearts are sad. But we ought not to grieve, for he has gone to be with Jesus. He is now more sweet and beautiful than ever in his home beyond the sky, and we all may go to him, to part no more forever. Oh! may the precious Savior, who has taken the darling babe, draw after Him the love and lives of those left behind until He shall form the center of their souls and be their everlasting song!

J. G. STALEY.

WOOD—JAMES S. WOOD, son of S. H. Wood, was born March 21, 1871, and died while on his return home from Pontotoc, April 6, 1891.

He, in company with three other young men, intimate friends and associates of his, left town in a wagon about twelve o'clock, and when they had gotten two miles from town, opposite a spring, he and Wiley Hubbard left the wagon to go by the spring, and before they had quite reached it Jim took palpitation of the heart and died immediately.

The writer conducted his funeral services before a large congregation of relatives and friends on Tuesday at two P. M., and laid his remains to rest in the Camp Ground Cemetery. We extend heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

W. D. BASS.

Pontotoc, Miss.

RANEY—LUTHER RANEY was the son of Rev. E. W. Raney and M. J. Raney. He was born June 20, 1856. He joined the M. E. Church, in the summer of 1879, under the ministry of Bro. Andrews. He was married to Miss Lula Huggins in 1886, and the Lord blessed his home with two children. Bro. Raney died March 28, 1891, at his home in the neighborhood of Four Mile Lake, in Sunflower county, Miss. He leaves a mother, wife and two children to wait their call to meet him in the better land.

May God help them to live so as to be ready for the Master's call! We have many reasons to believe that Bro. Raney was ready when the Master called him. He was an honest man, and a true member of his church.

W. H. SANDERS.

JAMESON—SUSIE MILNER JAMESON (nee Sims), wife of D. M. Jameson, was born near Vernon, Jackson parish, La., Dec. 14, 1862, and died in Vernon, Feb. 5, 1891.

Sister Jameson was religiously trained by her parents. She never gave herself to the so-called pleasures of the world, as children and young people generally do. She was piously inclined, and sought and obtained religion at a very early age; joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a pious life; was faithful in the discharge of the duties devolving upon a Christian in the various relations she sustained in life. She was a quiet, earnest Christian; was one of Israel's sweet singers, and loved to praise the Lord with her voice. Her disease was consumption, with which she suffered much for the two last years of her life; but from it and out of all her troubles the Lord has delivered her.

The writer saw her frequently during her sickness; he found her resigned, trusting in the Lord; professed to realize his gracious presence at all times. She was perfectly rational to the last. A few minutes before she died one said to her: "Susie, you are almost in heaven; are you not?" She replied, with a smile, "Almost in heaven." She leaves a husband, a little daughter, two brothers, a sister, with a large number of relatives and friends, to mourn her absence. "But they sweep not as those who have no hope," etc. JAMES L. WRIGHT.

PHELPS—Bro. A. H. PHELPS was born in 1812; died March 11, 1891, aged seventy-nine years.

Sister MARY PHELPS, wife of A. H. Phelps, was born ——; died Aug. 31, 1889, aged about sixty-seven years.

Bro. and Sister Phelps came to this country (Jackson, Miss.) about eight years ago from Clark county, Miss.; made their home on Fort Bayou, Miss. Sister Phelps ended her pilgrimage at this place. Bro. Phelps moved last year, 1890, to Purvis, Miss., and ended his life at the home of Bro. Martin Quave.

Both were members of the Congregational Methodist Church. All who knew them loved them, and believed firmly that they have gone to the home of the redeemed spirits. They lived godly Christian lives. Wherever they lived, their influence was felt. They leave to mourn their death a host of friends and seven children. But they do not mourn as those who have no hope. But all are satisfied that when they see them again they will be among the redeemed. Both were laid nicely away in a new graveyard at Shiloh Church, on Fort Bayou, Miss., to await the general resurrection.

NATHAN N. KING.

KRIESSER—Mrs. S. M. KRIESSER, who was born near Orangeburg, S. C., Dec. 9, 1831, died near Crystal Springs, Miss., March 15, 1891. She was married to A. C. Kriesser when she was about twenty years of age. She has belonged to the Methodist Church for over thirty years. Her sickness was long and painful, but she suffered uncomplainingly. In the year 1889 one of her sons while employed on the railroad was killed. She never recovered from the effect of this terrible affliction. Another son left home, and has long been lost sight of, and she died not knowing whether he still lived or was dead. If he lives, she leaves six children; if dead, she has gone to meet him.

Our dear sister died in the faith. Her husband and children are lonely and desolate, but do not mourn without hope. The text from which we spoke at her open grave is, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." We laid her away in sorrow, but in hope. May God comfort the sorrowing ones!

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

STOVALL—GEORGE PONDER STOVALL was born Nov. 14, 1888; departed this life Jan. 19, 1891, aged two years two months and five days. Little George was a child of unusual grace of mind, manners, form and feature, and those of qualities, combined with a most lovely disposition and a readiness to talk sweetly, made him a great favorite with all who knew him, and caused his fond parents to almost idolize his presence, and the deep impression made by his child-like simplicity to be kept in the basket of memory of a loving grandmother. To them his presence was a joy and hope of a bright life; though while kneeling at the family altar, the prattling of little George is not.

May God comfort them in their great sorrow, and may the memory of their precious little boy be to lead them as a guardian angel to that beautiful home above, to which he has gone!

LAZINESS A FOE TO ORIGINALITY.—We do not know who said it, but it is a fact well stated, and we regret not being able to give the writer proper credit. The great enemy to individualism is laziness, and those who know anything of human frailties will, I am sure, bear me out when I say that "mental" laziness is far more common and far more difficult to overcome than that of the body. It is so much easier to accept dogmatic teaching, and to shift the responsibility of our views on to others rather than to concentrate our thoughts and work out the lessons of our own observations. It is much more pleasant to butterfly from theory to theory than to seek truth with patient tenacity; why trouble ourselves to learn self-reliance, when natural indolence protests against the sacrifice!

It is easier to imitate than to originate; plagiarism and mimicry are such prominent features in our lives, that their presence might almost be quoted as an argument in favor of our evolution in past ages from simian ancestry. How plausible are the excuses we make for our want of this individualism! We are so dreadfully afraid of being thought bumptious, we are so delightfully humble, we really do not wish to intrude our opinion, and yet all the brightest lights of our profession have been men of strong individualism.—Scientific American.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

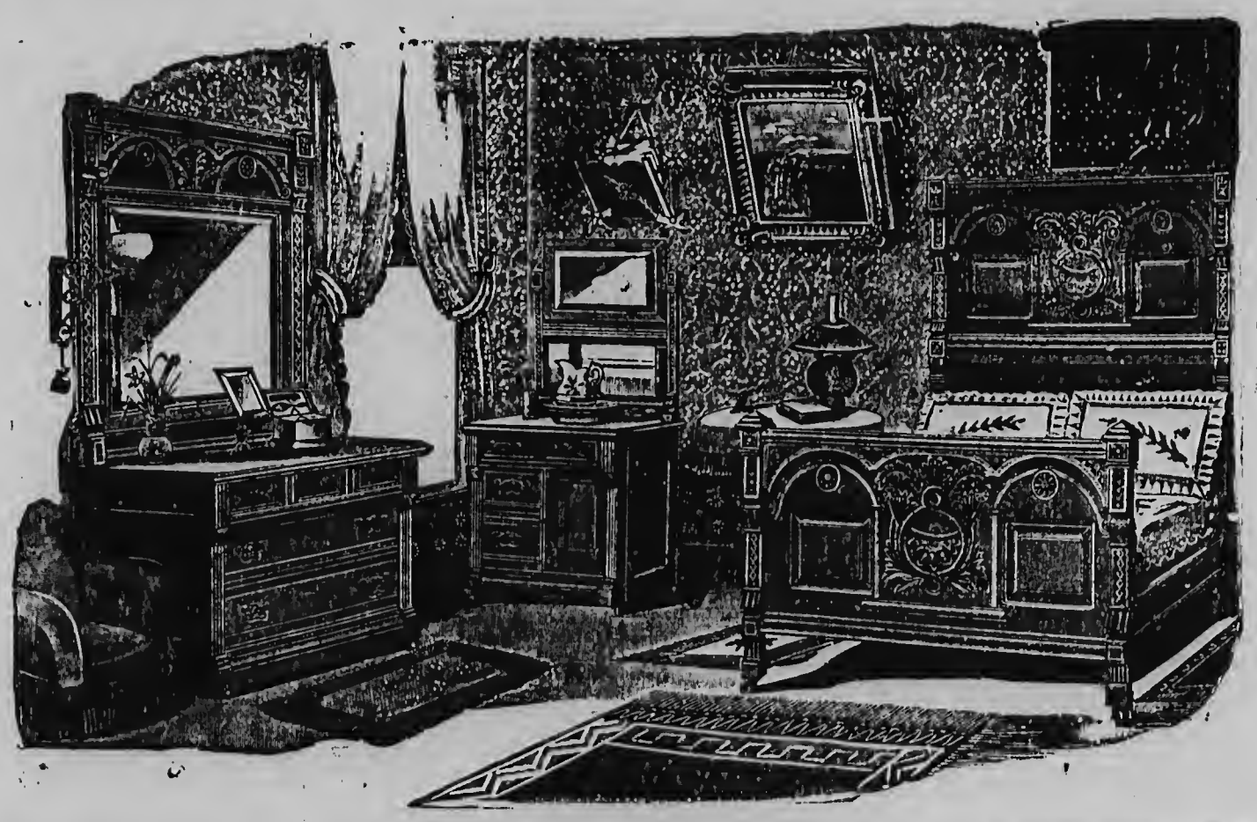
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual: all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

Keep It Before the People.

To insure good health it is necessary to keep the liver in regular action, the blood in free circulation, the bowels free by gentle purgation, and the stomach cleansed of fecal matter, all of which Maguire's Cundurango will accomplish. 75 cents per bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Ex-Gov. Evans, of Colorado, has presented the University of Denver with $100,000 for its further endowment.

Cardinal Gibbons, who has been in this city for some time, on a vacation, left here for Baltimore, his home, on April 27.

The Treasury Department has ordered a duty of 25 per cent. on Mexican Lottery tickets sent in through El Paso by express.

At the session of the National Republican League, in Cincinnati, on April 22, J. S. Clarkson was made president of the organization.

The thirty-ninth annual session of the American Pharmaceutical Association convened in this city on April 27. A large number of delegates from other States were in attendance.

Warrants for the repayment of the direct tax fund were issued from the Treasury Department, on April 23, to the following States: California, $200,000; Arkansas, $156,000; Illinois, $600,000.

Senator Reagan, having been appointed by the governor of Texas chairman of the railroad commission of that State, has resigned his seat in the U. S. Senate. Hon. Horace Chilton has been appointed to fill the vacancy.

Memorial services in honor of Gen. Jos. E. Johnston were held at the First Presbyterian Church, in this city, on April 26, under the auspices of the veteran associations. Dr. B. M. Palmer delivered the memorial sermon.

The enlistment of Indians in the United States Army is said to be proceeding satisfactorily, and the adjutant general is confident a full quota will be gotten. It only needed a few influential Indians to take the matter up.

The International Young Woman's Christian Association, which was in session at Scranton, Pa., adjourned on April 26. One of the last acts of the convention was to record its protest against the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday.

The presidential party spent last Sunday in San Francisco. The President and Mrs. Harrison attended services at the First Presbyterian Church. Postmaster-General Wanamaker addressed a Sunday-school at noon and the Y. M. C. A. in the afternoon.

U. S. District Attorney William Grant, to whom had been assigned the arduous work of compiling a report for the government touching the recent uprising in New Orleans, has completed his labors and forwarded the result thereof to the department at Washington.

The organized Italian stone-masons of New York City, who are on a strike, in demanding that the non-union stone-masons quit work, brought about a riot on April 23, which was peacefully quelled by the police, who arrested the prominent offenders and dispersed their followers.

The negroes who were deluded into going to Oklahoma, last Fall, in large numbers, have found none of the good things promised them—no work, no government rations. It is said many of them are starving. They are now trying to make their way back to their former homes in the South.

The receipts of the New Orleans Postoffice for the year ending March 31, 1891, are larger than had been anticipated, the falling off in the Lottery business being expected to produce a much greater decrease. The total of receipts for the year was $366,995, which is $27,585 less than the receipts for 1890. The salary of the postmaster will remain at $3,860.

FOREIGN.

A lady who has died in Glasgow bequeathed £70,000 to Gen. Booth for the Salvation Army.

A commission composed of three cardinals has been formed by the Pope's orders with the object of affecting economical reforms in the administration of the interior affairs of the Vatican.

At a crowded free trade meeting in Paris resolutions were adopted urging the government to revert the old commercial treaties and to reject the new tariff proposals of the customs commission.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies has passed a bill extending the age of military liability three years to forty-two. Hitherto the limit has been thirty-nine. The measure is an unpopular one.

Letters from the state of Chiapas, the frontier of Guatemala, say that a sad state of affairs prevails in Guatemala. The dissatisfaction is supreme against President Barrilias, and only the want of a proper leader keeps back a revolution, which can not long be delayed.

Emperor William has summoned all the princes and the crowned heads of the different German states to attend the funeral of Count Von Moltke, which will take place on April 30, and which will be attended by imposing military ceremonies. The body will be escorted in state from the Von Moltke residence to the railroad station, whence it will be taken to Creisau for interment. The ceremonies at Creisau will be quiet and without display, in accordance with the late count's will.

A powder magazine in the vicinity of Rome (containing 250 tons of powder) exploded on April 23. Forty houses have been reduced to a heap of ruins. Many of the famous historical windows in the Vatican were shattered. It is said that forty persons were injured at the scene of the explosion and about 200 persons in the city were slightly hurt. King Humbert, who visited the scene of the explosion with his military staff and other officials, used his own carriage to convey wounded people to the hospital.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

They're all on the same level when you wash with Pearline. The woman who is strong can keep her strength for something else; the woman who is weak will feel that she is strong. It isn't the woman that does the work—it's PEARLINE.

So it is with the clothes. They needn't be strong. The finest things fare as well as the coarsest. They all last longer, for they're saved the rubbing that wears them out. Work was never so easy—never so well done. And safe, too. Nothing that is washable was ever hurt by Pearline. If it were otherwise—do you think we would continue to sell enough Pearline yearly to supply every family in the land with several packages.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled. 182 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

In which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is good.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never swaps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

THE LAST DAYS!

A Text-Book on the Second Coming of Christ and Events which shall be Hereafter.

Compiled by JOHN E. RODD, New Orleans.

This is a most captivating and wonderfully instructive little work on this glorious coming event. This event is of such great moment that it is mentioned 318 times in the New Testament, or once in every 25 verses. It seems to have fallen to Mr. Rodd's good fortune to group these passages under proper headings and in an intelligent manner, and in doing so he has done a real service to the Christian world.

This book contains but fourteen short chapters, and they are all scripture quotations, preceded by a few lines, only, of introductory remarks, such as a convenient TEXT BOOK upon this subject is. The value and usefulness can hardly be overestimated.

52 pages; paper cover; only 5 cents each, 3 cents per dozen, post paid.

A Plea for Christian Enthusiasm.

BY J. B. A. AHRENS, D. D.

otto—"The world upside down."—Acts 6.

The Christian religion aims at the ersal of existing affairs. "The rld lieth in wickedness." Its rescue uires upheaval, commotion, revo- tion, evolution.

Neither peace nor compromise with e powers of evil are admissible. It recreancy to cry: "Peace, peace," en there is no peace. Nothing s than subjugation of Satan and his les will be satisfactory. The Master ures that he had not come to bring ace, but the sword. Woe unto us, we are silent in the face of clamor- s wrong, when we are submissive to e dictates of evil. We must war a od warfare. Having put on the ole armor of God, we must coura- usly face the foe. Flowery beds of e are not for us. Peace-loving is tamount to ease-loving. We shrink m the inevitable contention. Hence spend our years in palliating, con- ning, apologizing, assuaging, brid- g, harmonizing—i. e., time-serving. wastage of effort.

The disciples of the Master were ac- ed of being persons who turned the rld upside down. The charge con- ned compliment. They toiled for e dethronement of sin, and the coro- tion of Jesus.

ut in the endeavor to bring about e necessary evolution, turning the rld upside down, many employ the of flesh as the fulcrum on which rest their leverage. God assures at it shall not be accomplished by ght or power, but by his Spirit; nce pertinent legislation will prove roken cisterns." Spasmodic and rtial reformation is productive of ly "whited sepulchres." Only the ly zeal and wondrous abandon which aracterized Gideon's band can ac- plish the feat. It requires enthu- m which borders on aberration. St. ul was supposed to be beside him- f.

It is lamentably true that the chil- n of this world are wiser in their neration than the children of light. hold their enterprise; the display of ergy, industry, courage, zeal, perso- ance, self-sacrifice! Hard at work rly and late. They calculate closely, wisely, carry out their programme th marvelous ardor. Deprive them- ves of necessary rest and sleep. ink not of comfort. Success in busi- s is their goal. All energies are in- santly bent on reaching it. Riches d honor and pleasure are their life's er; all their endeavors are tributaries reto. Would that, in saving souls, emulated their maddening frenzy! The following reasons will kindle d nourish zeal:

. Sinners, unsaved, will be lost. ill go to the place where Dives lifted his eyes, being in torment. Eternal ile. "Away from me!" means sepa- tion from the good forever. Away m pious parents, from loved ones o loved God. Grovel eternally in ter darkness, where the smoke of ir torment ascended forever and er.

. The salvation wrought by Christ so amazingly great that its neglect ses agonizing grief in God's chil- n. God incarnate! Had not where lay his head. Became poor for our ee. Endured unspeakable hard- ships. Persecution, arrest, ignominy, torture, crucifixion. What, bought with a price, and remain slaves? Liberation offered, and remain prisoners? A royal feast prepared, and deliberately starve? We will do our utmost to prevent it.

3. The Master declares that the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. Sans ceremonie that captain manipulated renegade Jonas, and remarked: "What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, and call upon thy God!" It is our duty to "compel" sinners to come to the Savior. Among tombs respectful silence may be proper; but, surrounded by "dry bones," it behooves us to cry aloud and spare not.

4. Christ furnishes an example of holy enthusiasm. He was consumed by the zeal of God's house. Like a taper, consuming itself while it gives light. While the Lord was in agony unspeakable, he found his disciples sleeping. Justly he interrogates, "Why sleep ye?" Work while it is called to-day.

5. Heaven will be doubly precious to us if blissfully conscious of the fact that we have enthusiastically and faithfully worked for the salvation of our fellow-men. Those who through our instrumentality were brought to Christ will constitute stars in our crown.

6. We are responsible for the talents at our disposal. Evasion impossible. The slothful servant, whose one talent had not been productive, was denominated "wicked." His unprofitableness was considered a crime. His doom was fearful. May you not guiltily crave annihilation when the Lord enjoins, "Give an account of thy stewardship!"

Mississippi State Sunday-School Convention.

This body met in Greenville, Miss., the "Queen City of the Delta," April 28-30. Forty-five counties were represented by one hundred and thirty-five delegates. Over one hundred Sunday-schools and six denominations were represented in the convention. Judge W. R. Trigg, of Greenville, president of the convention, delivered the opening address, which was replete with sound doctrine and solid argument, showing the necessity of earnest Sunday-school work. Hon. W. L. Reynolds, of Illinois; Mrs. W. F. Crafts, of New York; and Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, were present, and helped to make the convention a glorious success. John T. Buck was elected president of the convention for the ensuing year, and assumed his duties the second day of the meeting. Judge Estes conducted a short conference on "our needs, and how to meet them." The fact developed was, we need more consecrated men and women in the church. The president asked for reports from the various counties, and many interesting facts were brought out. First Methodist Church, of Meridian, has 525 enrolled as pupils, and on last Sunday 355 were present. The superintendent said they had 31 teachers, and not one of those teachers played progressive euchre, or danced, or attended theatres; that when one did either of these things, he was excused from teaching. Would to God that that standard was maintained everywhere!

In the afternoon Mrs. W. F. Crafts delivered an address on "How to Teach," which was very instructive and entertaining. She taught us how to use the blackboard, and how to teach the little folks. The next afternoon she taught a class of thirty-five, and so exemplified the lecture delivered the afternoon before. She took the lesson for next Sunday, recorded in Amos, and, by beginning with something familiar—a pair of scissors and a little story—she at once secured the attention of the little folks, and held it throughout the entire lesson. Mrs. Crafts is highly gifted with the talent of teaching the little folks, and I think every teacher went away with higher ideas of his work, and better plans for its prosecution.

Rev. Dr. B. C. Gray delivered an interesting lecture on the "Three Facts." Fact the first, seven-tenths of our old people do not attend Sunday-school; fact the second, about seven-tenths of our young people under sixteen do not attend church; fact the third, our young men and young ladies, especially the former, over the age of sixteen, do not attend either church or Sunday-school. The fact was brought out that about 33⅓ per cent. of our children are in the Sunday-school. Another fact was brought out in the convention, to wit: only 37½ per cent. of our church members are in the Sunday-school. Another fact is, 81 per cent. of the additions to the church come from the Sunday-school.

L. P. Brown, of Meridian, conducted a conference on "the Sunday-school—its officers and hindrances." "Whom shall we select as teachers, and how shall we prepare our teachers?" Mrs. Crafts said she taught a class of 200 teachers in the afternoon, and thereby prepares them to teach intelligently. Mr. Reynolds said: "Appoint only those who are consistent Christians and have a heart for the work. The blessed Master spent a whole night in prayer before he appointed his disciples, and the apostles prayed before they selected a man to take Judas' place; hence we should pray earnestly before selecting teachers. The Bible should be in the hands of every pupil old enough to read. These lesson helps ought to be left out of the Sunday-school." One brother said his hostess had not brought in the frying-pan, or the skillet, or the kettle, and placed them on the dinner table, during his stay. "Now," said he, "these lesson helps have no more place in the Sunday-school room than these cooking utensils have on the table." Judge Estes urged the importance of shaking hands with the people and making them feel at home. One brother said the greatest hindrance to Sunday-school work was the indifference of the old folks. The great need was more consecration, more love to God, and more love for precious souls.

Judge Estes delivered a splendid lecture to a packed house on Thursday night. His subject was, "The Work, and How to Do It." He emphasized the necessity of rolling up our sleeves and going right into the work.

The convention pledged $800 to carry on its work in the State.

The next convention will be held at Oxford.

Officers for 1891–1892: John T. Buck, president; J. H. Neims, vice-president; Rev. L. W. Curtis, secretary; Mr. Mills, of Columbus, assistant secretary; R. H. Smith, treasurer; Mr. J. G. McGuire, chairman Executive Committee. Vice-presidents: L. C. Hall, Huckle, Miss.; J. M. Woodall, Houston, Miss.; J. W. Kavanaugh, Crawford, Miss.; J. C. Cavett, Meridian, Miss.; W. H. Patton, Shubuta, Miss.; Dr. R. J. Turner, Bay St. Louis, Miss.; Evans Hall, Williamsburg, Miss.; Rev. J. A. Whitfield, Brandon, Miss.; B. A. Clark, Kosciusko, Miss.; H. H. Estes, Hemingway, Miss.; W. T. Caldwell, Grenada, Miss.; W. D. Porter, Oxford, Miss.; Rev. W. H. Mellen, Cotton Plant, Miss.; J. T. Fant, Holly Springs, Miss.; Rev. G. H. Lipscomb, Jonestown, Miss.; Thomas Mount, Greenville, Miss.; J. W. Alexander, Hogs' Landing, Miss.; F. R. Carloss, Jackson, Miss.; J. C. Roberts, Centerville, Miss.; Rev. J. H. Gambrell, Brookhaven, Miss.

Strong resolutions on temperance, Sabbath observance, and the work of the American Bible Society, were passed.

The citizens of Greenville entertained the convention in a handsome and royal style. Thus closed a very pleasant and profitable session of the Mississippi State Sunday-school Convention.

T. W. LEWIS.

The Net Result.

MR. EDITOR: As our friend, the professor, seems disposed to stand on his dignity in reference to a certain allusion in the ADVOCATE, of the sixteenth, I will take the liberty of giving your readers the result of those "meditations," as I have had them privately from him.

Among the occupations of children there is none more exciting, or less profitable in the main, than catching doodies. In the abstract, therefore, it might seem a very trivial subject; but, considered as a type, it will suggest meditations that are as useful as they are curious.

A doodle is defined by Webster to be "an idle, silly fellow;" but those grown persons who once were young will remember that this name was given to a horny-headed worm with a many-jointed body, unusually lively in the upper air, and by no means lacking in intelligence, as worms go, which lives, or makes a show of living, a retired life at the bottom of a smooth round hole in the ground. Easily discernible in spring and early summer, this rather gloomy residence disappears as the year advances, and so completely as to raise the suspicion that when one is popularly said to "go into a hole and pull the hole in after him," reference is had directly to the habit of life, and more especially to the sudden disappearance of this furtive inhabitant of our yards and gardens. However this may be, it seems that the days of the doodle, as a visible, tangible being, are few and short. After life's fitful fever, he dies like Dido, and "the place he knew forgetteth him."

It might be interesting to speculate upon the doodleian temper after his withdrawal from the public gaze. Does he accept obscurity gracefully, and with patience?—or does he wear out his little remnant of life in vain regrets and frantic efforts to be once more seen and known and caught of children? Does he die outright, or merely hibernate until the voice of spring calls him to the light again? If the latter, how does he return? If the former, whence come his successors? Above all, from which end of the hole does he begin to dig, and what becomes of the dirt?

These and many other questions crowd upon one who gives serious attention to this subject. Surely no one will question the wisdom of patronizing German universities when he reflects that to some American boy or girl educated there may be reserved the honor of solving so difficult a problem.

But the editorial allusion was not so much to the natural history as to the capture of the worm in question.

The essential features of this pursuit, as I recall them, are:

1. The difficulty of catching the doodle.

2. The greater difficulty of disposing of him when caught.

3. The utter impossibility of accounting to oneself, or others, for the enthusiasm with which he has been pursued.

Now, there is a way to catch doodles. Pursued in any other, the occupation becomes dull and commonplace. Of course, a practical person, or a philosopher, would argue that, as the object sought is to be found at the bottom of a hole never more than a foot in depth, the most direct mode of capture would be to dig for it as we do for other earthworms. But this only shows how little wise people sometimes know about very simple subjects, for the whole interest of catching doodles consists in the difficulties attending it. The use of a spade, or other digging implement, therefore, puts our philosopher out of court altogether. The method most approved in our younger days was, substantially, this: Take a straw, and, moistening the other end as Sambo does the bait before casting in his hook, insert it softly in the doodle's hole; then gently agitate the straw, calling "Doodle" in your most seductive tone, and making, at the same time, urgent signals to the crowd to be quiet (for be it remembered, that since the time of Cain there is no recorded instance of a child's going doodle-catching alone). If the time has been well chosen, it will not be long before the straw begins to move as under the power of unseen hands. A hush falls upon the half-dozen children looking on, or similarly engaged not far away. A cautious pull is given to make sure it is a genuine bite, and then, with a quick, but not violent, jerk, the doodle is landed, amid cries of "I've got him!" from the angler, and shrieks of delight from the lookers-on.

Now comes one of the most remarkable features of this singular business. The doodle is caught; what shall be done with him? The fish won't bite him, the chickens won't eat him—indeed, he is altogether undesirable, a manifest delusion and sham. I recall a single instance of an attempt to appropriate one, and then the rooster that made it, to show his retinue of hens what good eating a doodle is, admitted plainly, in a little while, that he wished he hadn't.

But here again children show themselves to be different from philosophers and practical people, for, as soon as the excitement of success is over—and it subsides wonderfully soon—they turn the doodle over to see him wriggle; then put him back in his hole, and run away with unabated interest to catch another of the same kind, and to dispose of him in the same way. But in nothing does the adaptation of doodles to childhood, real or virtual, appear more clearly than in the facility with which captor and captured do not seem to trouble themselves with the consideration, Cui bono? The doodle returns to his hole with a sedate, not to say crestfallen, air, and yet with apparent satisfaction that he is not needed any longer, while his human counterpart—see Webster—goes off equally pleased that he does not have to give a reason for the enthusiasm that is in him. Indeed, keeping the Websterian definition in view, the grand question is, "At which end of the straw is the doodle, after all?"

Now, the moral of this writing is found in the application of it; for there are doodles that do not live in holes in the ground, and there are doodle-catchers who are no longer children in years. "Mutato nomine"—but we must not be personal.

Brother, reader, have you quit?

"Words, Idle Words."

I do not know of any department of human knowledge more interesting and fascinating than philology. Men have devoted an entire lifetime to this science, and at its end found the vast roaches and wide vistas of the field unexplored. Some of these word-hunters acquire extraordinary acumen and skill, scenting the root or following the trail of a derivation like a sleuth-hound on its victim's track. I have heard of a Greek professor whose whole life was occupied in the study of the dative case, and when about to leave this sphere of "believing, persuading, commanding and obeying," for another post and super, bequeathed, as a heritage to his son, the result of his labors, and bade him go onward. No doubt, such zeal is commendable, if wisely directed. Even this life, which seems but a travesty on the ideal existence portrayed by our Savior, was better than living without any definite object in view. One of the most absurd and amusing standards by which to measure the real value of words, is their length or brevity. Of course, we have all been taught to despise this sesquipedalian verbosity, which, from altitudinous regions of conceit and egotism, looks down upon ordinary mortals. To my mind the worth of a word does not lie in its length, breadth, or thickness; but in its power for expression of ideas. The many-syllabled are just the kind often needed to give the proper form, shade and tone to the thought in expression. What little I know of the ancient classics teaches me to believe that the writers thereof never established any law against words on account of length. Once I heard a local preacher describe the unfortunate condition of the patriarch, Job, as one of "copious decomposition," and I was amused by the repulsiveness and exactness of the picture so awkwardly drawn. This illustration, though homely, will serve to bring to the surface the thought for which I am angling.

Our conclusions and settled opinions in philology, not unlike our theological deductions, have to be sometimes revised. Not infrequently, too, with the former as with the latter, we find the old way the best, because it is the true way. Quite recently I heard stated by a Bishop of our church, and noted an endorsement of the same by our editor, that "definitions do not always define." I think this only measurably true. Some ideas are illimitable; but have not words their meanings, crystallized by long use? And are not these infinite conceptions brought before the mental vision as clearly as possible by words of well-fixed meaning?

As another cogent argument, I marked that the Bishop immediately followed his declaration by giving an etymological analysis of the word "define;" and our editor was bringing light out of darkness, as regards the meaning of some term, when he made the statement. Does not the declaration lead to the conclusion that language is not a medium, or, at best, a very poor vehicle for thought? But I will pause, and say no more on this immediate phase of the subject, feeling assured that if beset by Bishop and editor in the controversial field, it would necessitate an inglorious retreat on my part. But, then, you know they are liable to make mistakes sometimes.

Archbishop Trench, in that admirable little book of his devoted to this study, has a chapter on the morality in words. He tells us our language "bears at once the stamp of man's greatness, and of his degradation, of his glory, and of his shame;" and very clearly shows how some words have degenerated, while others have, by usage, acquired higher and purer significations than when first adopted into our language. What wondrous influence and far-reaching power in words to add to, or subtract from, the sum of life's joys! They may ameliorate its misery, guilt, and shame; they may wreck its fairest argosies of loftiest purpose and noblest endeavor. They are healers of woe, or messengers of peace; sometimes winning souls for heaven, or driving them, lost and despairing, to hell. Be careful, be studious, be thoughtful in your choice of these fleet-winged couriers of thought, for much depends on wise selection, and more on right expression. Since the word is the embodied concept, and the union between the two is so close, I hold that is as much a mark of genius to use the exact word to express the foreshadowed idea as it is to evolve this in the conscious soul; for words enhalm the thoughts of master-minds, hold them in unconscious keeping, and, like an amber cerement encysting some rainbow-hued butterfly, preserve them from decay. Let us all remember words have weight, meaning, influence for weal or woe; are "children of darkness or children of light," as they go forth on various missions among men. A smile beams, a tear falls at their bidding. They can bruise and break, bind and heal, and, more than these, they may, in Christ, be instruments to save a soul from death. He called himself "the Word," and there is such a vast wealth of meaning in this appellation that but few, if any, can compass it. I am sure it means this much: that he was and is the living manifestation of all purity, holiness and truth.

I close with a quotation from Trench: "Is there not something very solemn and very awful in wielding such an instrument as this of language is, with such power to wound or to heal, to kill or to make alive? And may not a deeper meaning than hitherto we have attached to it, lie in that saying, 'By thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned?'"

S. J. DAVIES.

Camp Bello, La.

In Memoriam.

WILLIAM M. KLEIN.

Our church in Vicksburg sustained a great loss in the death of William M. Klein, on Sunday morning, March 29, 1891. His short, but exemplary life; his well-rounded character, his many shining virtues, and his eminent usefulness, deserve more than a passing notice.

Bro. Klein was born in Vicksburg, Miss., April 9, 1866. His mother, who was one of the excellent of the earth, and who entered into rest less than two years ago, trained him up in the way he should go, and he did not depart from it. He was recognized as a member of the church under the pastorate of Rev. R. S. Woodward, in 1884. Previous to this he had given his heart to God, and had been born into the kingdom of Grace. Having made this public profession of his faith, he rapidly developed in all the graces of the Spirit, and soon attained unto the stature of a man in Christ. In the year 1887 he was placed on the Board of Stewards, which office he filled efficiently until his death. In early childhood he became a member of the Sabbath-school as a pupil. In due time he was appointed a teacher, and in the year 1889, though then only twenty-three years of age, he was made superintendent. It was remarkable that one so young should have been intrusted with so grave a responsibility, for the Sunday-school here numbers more than two hundred pupils, besides officers and teachers; but it was no mistake to place him in charge of it. He showed himself a man. He magnified his office, and became one of the best Sunday-school superintendents I have ever known. At the time of his death he was on the Executive Committee of the State Sunday-school Convention, and on the Board of Managers of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city. In every department of Christian work to which he was called, he was faithful and efficient. He took a lively interest in the establishment of the South Vicksburg Methodist Church, and was the friend and patron of that enterprise to the day of his death. His life was one of singular purity and usefulness. He had made a more profound impression on the community in which he lived than many of our best men do in a long lifetime. This was more remarkable from the fact that he was a modest, quiet, unassuming and unobtrusive man. It was the silent force of his character.

On July 3, 1889, he was happily married to Miss Janie Paxton. They were walking together in happiness and usefulness when he was suddenly taken from her side, and she found herself alone—and yet not alone, for the God of all comfort comes very near his children in their sorrow. May his gracious presence be a daily blessing to her, and also to the sisters and brother of the deceased, till they all meet again in heaven!

"OUT OF THE DEPTHS."

BY EMMA SOUTHGATE.

"Out of the depths" where faint, we cling
In faith that questions not, nor strives,
"Out of the depths" like pearls we bring
The peerless lesson of our lives

So slow are we to meet his will,
So stubborn to resist his word,
We match our puny reason still
Against the mandate of our Lord.

Till, in some silence long and vast,
Some deep-set sounding of the soul,
With spirit hushed at last, at last,
We yield our will to his control.

Like Nineveh's unwilling seer,
We hear the word "Arise and go!"
And when like him, o'ercome by fear,
Our faltering spirits answer, "No;"

God's winds pursue us as we flee,
Where his accusing waves are driven,
The storm-tossed bark upon the sea
Becomes the judgment bar of heaven.

And we, with fainting soul must go
Alone into those depths profound,
Where all his billows overflow,
Where his great stillness wraps us round.

With trembling trust to him we cling,
His love uplifts, he guides our way,
"Out of the depths" at last we bring
Life's peerless lesson—to obey.

Why Should We Send the Gospel to Mexico?

Dear Young Friends: I write on this subject, because there are those who claim that Mexico has the gospel, and that we should go elsewhere to do missionary work. If this was true, I would not stay here one day longer than was neeessary for me to arrange the few business matters I have here and get away. But, alas! for poor Mexico, it is not true. As a matter of fact, the Roman Catholic Church has been in this country for more than 300 years; but it is also a fact that it has not, and never will, do the work of a Christian Church among this people. As a proof of this, thousands and thousands of the people have deserted her temples and her altars, and are now either infidels or that which is worse, if possible—they are spiritualists.

One evening, not a great while ago, there came to our house a beautiful, bright young woman, and said to me: "I have heard you preach and teach a religion that one can feel in the heart, and that makes people happy in their sorrows and good in disposition, and I want to know about it." I explained to her what religion was, and then I tried to tell her how she could receive this great blessing in her soul. I asked her if she did not attend any church? She said, "I used to attend the Roman Catholic Church, but it did me no good, and I quit going. I tried hard to be good and always failed, so I concluded there was nothing in religion until I met the Bible woman, and then I agreed to come to you." I asked her if she ever prayed. She said only to Mary, and she confessed her sins to the priests; but it did her no good, and she should not do so again. I then asked why she did not pray to Christ and confess her sins to God. She answered, "I do not know how."

Poor woman, I had to teach her the Christian doctrine of salvation just as a father would teach a little child. Then she came to our church, and it would have filled your hearts with deepest sorrow for her if you could only have seen her eagerness to catch every word that fell from the preacher's lips. After awhile her intelligence grasped the idea of "life for a look," and her bright young face was as radiant as a sunbeam when she told the church of her conversion.

Very soon after this her husband met our Bible woman, and said to her: "What do you people teach in your church? My wife has been going there of late and she is so changed, and makes our home so much happier. I wish to know more of your religion." And a few years ago one of our missionaries was preaching, and he quoted Christ's words to the dying thief, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." An old man rose, and said, "Repeat those words again." And when the preacher repeated them, he cried in a loud voice, "Repeat them again." And when they had been repeated a second time, he said: "And these are Christ's words and my soul will not have to suffer in purgatory. My days are almost ended, and I have dreaded the future more than death and the grave; but, with these words of the blessed Savior, I can now go into the presence of my God in peace. Glory to God for them and for sending you to tell me of them."

How dark, cruel and unfeeling the doctrine that sends everybody, even the little children, to that awful place to suffer after death! And then the poor, sorrowing mothers go to these Romish priests and pay them money to pray the little ones out of this place of suffering. But, according to their doctrine, everybody must go to purgatory and suffer after death. When the Archbishop of Mexico died, a few weeks ago, they put notices on all their churches calling on the people to "pray for the repose of his soul for thirty days." Not only do they say their prayers to saints, and never to Christ, as you do, and worship painted representations of these saints; but, horrible to tell, once a year, in many places, they go through a mock crucifixion of our blessed Lord in their churches. Think of a man claiming to be a minister of the gospel consenting to act the part of Pilate in such a sacrilegious drama, and tell me if you do not think Mexico needs the pure gospel? Is it any wonder the people are turning from such teachers, and prefer no religion to this disgraceful mockery? Will you send it to them, or will you let them perish? J. M. WEEMS.

A Call.

After the meeting of our Central Committee last year a circular letter, addressed to Conference secretaries, was issued with the following instructions: "If you have but one auxiliary with the district and Conference officers, call these together and organize a Conference society; for the Conference society must now elect their own officers and appropriate funds." A beginning was made Feb. 12, and we now call the meeting of March 25, which was postponed on account of sickness.

Will not every charge where an auxiliary has been organized, even if no meeting was held and there is no probability of one at present, be represented at our meeting, May 13, Jackson, Miss., either by person or letter. If you do no more, simply write, "We can not attend, but will pray for those who do." We are preparing an interesting programme. Miss Marshall will be with us. We will suppose that those who do not attend are willing to abide by our decisions.

We were pleased to place on our roll the Parsonage Society of Jackson, Miss., as it has become an auxiliary under the new law, "by contributing annually to the regular fund of the society." A hearty welcome is extended to the Jackson (La.) Auxiliary, honored by having among its officers so many representatives of parsonage households.

Will not our ministers aid us by sending representatives from their charges to our meeting? Rest assured, God will bless you for it! Bro. B. F. Lewis will be pleased to provide for the overflow. Send names to Dr. W. C. Black.

MRS. E. D. JONES, Sec.

Chat with the Advocate.

DEAR ADVOCATE: The preachers say that when they go into a home and see your cheery face lying on a table, or hanging on the wall, that they are sure of a welcome, because you, by your good counsel, have prepared a place for them. But in some of the homes they see plenty of secular papers lying around loose, but no ADVOCATE; and when they inquire if they have the ADVOCATE, the answer is, that they "can not afford to pay so much for a paper that has so little news, and yet costs so much more than the secular weekly paper." It is not profitable to argue with Ephraim when he is joined to his idols, so they let them alone; but they feel as if they were out of their element, and are glad to go as early as possible; or if they do enter into the pro and con of the price of the Christian paper, and its educational value to the members of the family, then they are confronted with some other objection; but sometimes the logic of the preacher and the gospel of perseverance breaks the objector's stronghold, and the ADVOCATE enters another open door with its mission of good-will for all inside the door. And when you once get a foothold, you are very apt to impress upon the minds of all the fact that you have come to stay.

Not long ago your editor wanted to know if any of your readers had been studying the Sunday-school Lessons; and if so, how they liked them. This writer had read and re-read some of them, and been much edified with the same; taking the pains to compare them with others sometimes, always favorably. The lesson for April 12 was compared with the exposition of the same in the California Christian Advocate, not knowing the author of either. Both were good, and of equal length. The subject was, "The Good and Evil in Jehu." The line of thought was somewhat similar; yet, in summing up the character of Jehu, the verdict was different in some respects. The writer in the California Advocate says that "the cruelties of Baal worship, such as human sacrifices, added to its falseness, perfidy and treachery, abundantly justified Jehu in destroying the priesthood at a single stroke." But he only destroyed the Canaanitish god to set up the Egyptian god, that being seemingly nearer the worship of Jehovah. Jehu did well to destroy Baal and the house of Ahab; but he failed to appreciate the high aims of the prophet. Our expositor says: "The killing of forty-two of Ahaziah's relations, the seventy sons of Ahab and the priests of Baal, in succession, stamp Jehu as a human monster." That it was necessary to eradicate Baalism was readily admitted; yet the means employed was doubtful. "God's method would have been different," and Jehu would have been instructed if he had shown as much zeal for the true worship of God as he was in eradicating idolatry. "Though he was the most ardent destroyer of idolatry, yet he lived and died an idolater;" and then we are asked, Which predominated, the good or the evil in Jehu? Without answering that question positively, one would rather say with the Psalmist, "The mercy of the Lord endureth forever." Yet among us all, like Jehu, some may cast away one idol and have another hidden away among the stuff.

But, dear ADVOCATE, though one would like to linger along on this line and laud your many good qualities, there is but one line left, and that is one of the "pleasant places" to stop.

FROM THE WORK.

BLACK HAWK, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I see you notice in the ADVOCATE that a Water Valley girl wrote over five hundred words on one postal card, so I concluded I would give you a postal card report of my work. Please count the words, and let the Water Valley Progress know how many there are.

I am getting along well on my work. My congregations are good. Prayer meetings are well attended. Finances well up. Raised at Acona, the fourth Sunday in last month, on collections ordered by Conference, one hundred and fifty dollars. I will have the whole of assessment in good subscription by the time our District Conference meets. Don't you think that that is just splendid? But this is no more than every preacher ought to do. Begin with the year to do a year's work, and then work all the year, and success is sure. This is the true solution of the question, How can we succeed in bringing up the collections? Up to this time I have had no accessions to the church since Conference, either by certificate or on profession of faith. By the way, I see in your paper a report from a brother, and he says on one occasion, "I received two members—one by baptism, and one on profession of faith." I don't understand the expression; it sounds rather Baptistic to me. I would like the brother to explain, as this is not the first time I have seen the same thing. I noticed last year in the Minutes of Church Conference at one of my appointments the same thing: "Bro. A. B. or Sister C. D. received by baptism." I am asking for information; if I am in the dark, I want to get into the light. What does it mean? I have lost some of my most valuable members by death, and have dismissed several by certificate since our Annual Conference; but am sowing now in the fond hope of an abundant harvest before the year has wound to a close. Please pray for my success. I can hardly expect to get the nice premium offered by Bro. Grant for the largest number of new subscribers to the ADVOCATE; but I am determined on one thing: no work in Louisiana or Mississippi shall take the palm from Black Hawk circuit on the church literature taken. You know my field was well worked last year, and I am only gleaning now. But if by perseverance I should come out ahead and get the prize, I shall always feel glad that I did my duty to the paper. And the brethren who have larger fields uncultivated should always feel ashamed of their negligence. We meet in Annual Conference, we report on church literature, we resolve to do all we can along these lines to aid in the circulation of our literature; we then go to the field assigned us and we do almost nothing. In this we have a fulfillment of the poet's words, "Men resolve and reresolve, then die the same." Brethren, let us do our duty by our Conference organ. Dr. Hoss is making the old Nashville Advocate the best church paper in the United States or Europe; but the Nashville is not our Conference organ. It is brimful of good things, but it does not overflow with matter from near home like our own dear paper should. I prophesy that if we do our duty by our paper, that Dr. Carter will give us the best paper south of Nashville. I am glad to say that the people of Black Hawk circuit are the most conservative Methodists I have ever known. This was proven to me when I first came here, seventeen months ago. Everybody expected Bro. Burroughs to be returned to them; they wanted him; but in the turn of of our Methodist wheel, Burroughs dropped out and I dropped in, and they, the people, received me kindly, and treated me nicely. So, in the location of our college, while we desired it near us, we feel that it is at the right place, and we are determined to do our whole duty by it. Oh, that all the brethren "would go and do likewise!" B. F. PHILLIPS.

[You may think it a "whopper," but this was all written on one postal card. It need not be repeated. It can't go in the postal card column.—EDITOR.]

PERCY'S CREEK, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our second quarterly meeting for Percy's Creek station, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference, has come and gone, and our charge will cherish the precious memories of that occasion—April 18 and 19—for many a long day. The season was one of religious profit to my people. Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary, with our beloved and esteemed presiding elder, made the occasion of our Quarterly Conference of double interest. Dr. Hunnicutt preached us two of his characteristic sermons, which, in point of logical acumen and spiritual force, is not often equalled. His exegesis of what might be lawful, but not expedient to the Christian, was so thoroughly defined and clear-cut as to carry pungent conviction to the hearts and consciences of all who heard him. He cut to the line, and the chips were thrown in all directions. During the Doctor's visit, he secured seven notes for the endowment of Centenary College, with more to follow. His earnest labors and untiring zeal to put Centenary on a solid financial basis scarcely has a parallel; and if anyone can succeed in such an enterprise, Dr. Hunnicutt is that man. May success crown his noble efforts for Christian education! As Centenary is the college for this section of the State, my people are very solicitous as to the upbuilding and success of that institution of learning.

Rev. C. McDonald, our presiding elder, looks after all the interests of our beloved Methodism, and, with an experience of little over two years in that office, displays in the performance of his duties an administrative ability, combined with respect, courtesy and kindness to his preachers and official Boards, that could be emulated to great profit by other presiding elders.

During our quarterly meeting we had one valuable accession to our ranks, and our people are growing in piety and grace. In a financial point of view we are solid; having fully met the demands of the second quarter in ministerial support, and the charge will pay every dollar of the assessments ordered by the Annual Conference. We have in this station a delightful people, who have studied and practiced the proprieties of Christian life, ignoring the doubtful immoralities that are concealed in the giddy amusements of the world. There has been no dancing in our community since our revival of last summer, which would indicate the genuineness of the work done at that time. Our congregations are good, morning and evening, and a more thoroughly Christian-demeaned audience would be difficult to find in any section of the State.

Our District Conference will be held at Woodville on June 5 and 6, and you are cordially invited to be present. Come, for our people and preachers will be glad to give you a hearty handshake. W. W. HURST.

SABINE MISSION.

After three several solicitations by Rev. C. A. Coombs, of Sabine mission, Louisiana Conference, I decided to go out and help him with a meeting on his work. He was to meet me in Lake Charles; but, failing to do so, I procured a buggy, and went out into the bounds of his work to take a look at the enemy. I found he, Coombs, had left his work, and had not even notified me. However, nothing daunted, I began an attack upon the enemy, who was well entrenched in the hearts of men in and around a little church called "Keener Chapel," twenty-five miles northwest of Lake Charles; spending a week in the neighborhood and about "Loxley and Martin's" Log Camp. I found the people eager for the gospel, having from one to two hundred attentive listeners at every service. Preached eight sermons, two lectures, baptized eight children and one man, two accessions to the church, one man converted and will go to preaching, two Sunday-schools started, and Christianity built up in the faith of the gospel. This is only a bird's eye view of the work done; seed sown, which will ripen into the harvest, when the sower is dead and, perhaps, long since forgotten; but God's angel keeps the record. Glory be to God for all! Amen and amen!

The visible results of this meeting would have been much greater but for the fact that there was such a prejudice against all preachers, generated by the leaving of his work by the young man, Coombs, around whom, on account of his address and the young wife he carried with him, the people had rallied as they had never done before. His leaving caused the people to conclude that all preachers were preaching for money, and hence not so much was accomplished as would have been under other circumstances. One result of the trip is, that my not too large exchequer has been relieved of about $14.

N. B. NORWOOD.

COLUMBIA CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Columbia circuit has developed within the last fifteen months from a $325 to a $600 appointment. This result is due mainly to the efforts of the presiding elders, Bros. Cooper and Mounger and a few of the leading men on the work. We have some of the "salt of the earth" on this work; men whose money and intellects are consecrated to God's service. The net increase of the membership last year was about fifteen per cent. The church has had a healthy spiritual growth. We are planning, praying and working for greater results this year.

We have just closed a very interesting and profitable meeting at Columbia. We began the meeting the second Sunday in April by taking up the Conference collections, which resulted in $145. Rev. I. W. Cooper was with us several days, and did some splendid preaching; the immediate results of which are a general upbuilding of the church members, quite a number of conversions, and four additions to the church. By the way, Bro. Cooper is a success anywhere you put him. He succeeds as a pastor, as a presiding elder and as a revivalist. We have a neat parsonage, very comfortably furnished, and now Columbia circuit stands alongside of the very best appointments on the Seashore district.

We have a kind and generous people who are constantly looking after the welfare of the preacher and his family. The continuous breeze of kindness that has been blowing ever since we reached this place culminated not long since in a storm at the parsonage. The good ladies came from every direction and lavished their kindness on the preacher and his family in a very substantial way. Pray for us, that our labors may be abundantly successful amongst this kind people.

M. H. MOORE, P. C.

EBENEZER, MISS.

Our second Quarterly Conference convened here Saturday and Sunday. Our presiding elder, Bro. Thames, came out from Goodman in a sulky, driving a Texas pony that a good brother loaned him there, which operated finely, except, when turning around, he had to alight and lead, to keep him from turning inside of shafts.

Ebenezer is a nice little town, situated some twelve miles west of Goodman. We have a good moral, social and charitable people. We have a good school here, taught by Prof. J. R. Johnson. We have three churches, two white (one Baptist, one Methodist) and one colored. We had quite an interesting, instructive and spiritual meeting. Bro. Thames handles himself well when presiding, and handles those well over whom he presides. I believe he actually enjoys taking up a collection, and I know he made the people enjoy it. The amount of subscription was raised for all the collections at this charge for the year, and $25 on parsonage. We have still about $130 yet due on parsonage, outside of what subscriptions we have, which will be raised during the year. We had a spiritual time in love-feast, Sunday morning, at ten o'clock; and after the sermon, Bro. Thames administered the Lord's Supper, which was one of the most edifying and impressive ceremonies that I have witnessed for some time. The sacrament was administered in a neat silver communion set, presented to our church by Bro. S. N. Sample. He has also given liberally to our parsonage, which should be the more appreciated, because of the fact that he is not a member of our church, but of the Presbyterian. We are thankful, and highly appreciate all that we have received on the parsonage, even down to the smallest amount, for it is not the amount that God looks at, but the sacrifice in giving.

C. W. PERKINS.

PINEVILLE, LA.

Our church belongs to a new field, connected with five country churches east of here. Rev. John F. Wynn is the preacher in charge. Our preacher is gliding along. He had a rough time after his arrival here. His wife was taken down with a most dangerous spell of sickness. Many prayers went up in her behalf, and the great Physician was the healer of her disease. She is a grand worker in the cause of Christ—a noble Sunday-school worker. She has organized a child's prayer-meeting, held immediately after Sunday-school service; quite a success. Our Sunday-school is a consoling spiritual work. We have a prayer meeting that is worthy of note and consideration. It is not confined. I have no other idea but what it will be a means of grace to convert souls to Christ.

Our efficient and Holy Ghost preacher was to-day directed to deliver a message from the Book of God. "Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it," was his text. (I. Thess. v, 24.) Those words sent forth a sermon to be remembered for days to come. The Holy Ghost unfolded the truth in a manner that made me feel that God would come himself to witness the message. We dined at the Lord's table after the sermon. It seemed to me that it was not necessary to make any explanation in regard to the purpose of the supper, for the bread and the cup seemed to answer and explain it. I have enjoyed many hours in our house of God, but never heard such solid truths as fell to-day from our dear brother. Bro. G. W. Bruce was called on to take up a collection for missionary cause; amount wanted was $15. The hat was passed around, and collection came up in full. I tell you it was two hours of solid comfort. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.

BOOKS.

THE GREAT DISCOURSE. By a Layman. Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. Price, $1.50.

This is a topical arrangement and analysis of all the words of our Lord recorded in the New Testament. The author says of his work that it is an "attempt to attain a more direct and personal contact with the Christ through his words than is afforded by a general reading of the Gospels, and to present the divine philosophy in its integrity." At middle life the author found himself a "Christian neither in faith nor work, out of sympathy with Christian ethics as adapted to the uses of modern society, and deeply antagonistic to organic Christianity as manifested in the church." He went to the words of Christ to study the philosophy of salvation, and from these he learned the lesson of the philosophy of life as taught by the Author of life, and from this point he went on easily to personal salvation. The author's Apologia is one of the finest papers we have seen in many a day. The outcome of the author's search for spirit and life is this book in which all the words of Christ are arranged according to topics.

The Pew.

A few suggestions as to the pew. A great need of Christian people is to feel their responsibility for souls. The church is not the field for the minister as much as the force with which he is to work the field. A passion for souls! A resolute endeavor to reach men without regard to class! A sympathy with man as man! A true spirit of democracy which admits no such thing as caste, which accepts even the negro as God's image carved in ebony, and has a supreme care for the majority, gives an atmosphere to a church organization, which nothing else supplies. Such a church will care for temporalities as well as spiritualities; will look after both the body and soul of the people, and not be chargeable with what George Eliot calls "other-worldliness." There is a story of a Dacian slave in the Arena at Rome, who was spared by a lion whose injury he had dressed and whose wounds he had healed years before. There is a tender point in every human heart which love can reach, and love alone. Law and force may have no effect where love proves omnipotent. As Victor Hugo says: "Your powder will project your ball six hundred feet in a second; but the flash of that powder will go a hundred thousand miles in the same time." The ball represents force; but the flash the subtle power of love.—Dr. Pierson.

Sunday-School Lesson—May 10.

Israel's Overthrow Foretold.

Amos viii, 1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have."—Luke viii, 18.

TOPICAL OUTLINE.—I. Israel's Iniquities Recited. II. Her Judgment Foretold.

MEMORY VERSES.—12, 13.

TIME AND SURROUNDINGS.—The same as those of our last lesson.

The chapters intervening between this and our last study are filled with lamentations for Israel's folly and predictions of her coming destruction. In the seventh chapter the prophet gives a very striking picture of the condition of the erring people. It is in effect this: God had applied the plumb-line of truth to the nation, and it had been found far out of line with him and his commandments. Notwithstanding long-continued mercy, yet they not returned unto him. For his veracious disclosure of sin and wickedness, Amos was rewarded with banishment. The rejected prophet returned to Judah, his birthplace, but not, however, before he had uttered the denunciation of Jehovah against Israel. Now, God lets men and nations see the justice of their punishments. There is a profound philosophy in this. His appeal is made to our own consciousness of having done evil. There will be no need, individually, for a formal judgment; each sinner will stand self-condemned before the throne. God arraigned this people before his bar, and, having found them guilty in a fearful degree, rendered a commensurate sentence.

ISRAEL'S INIQUITIES RECITED.

There is first shown the true moral state of the people. "A basket of summer fruit." Fit emblem of decay; prone to corruption. So the inhabitants of their spiritual condition. The summer had past, the harvest had come, and they were not saved. The Lord sent by his messenger the word; this summer fruit is a fit illustration. Dew and rain but injure ripened products; so heavenly influences, unheeded as they are, but harden more, if possible, the sinner bent on his way. The cause of his low state is next assigned. It was Israel's own fault. See the blighting effect of sin! A man can sin away all the gracious influences that Infinite Love can throw around him. The transgressions enumerated by Amos include, in the first place, the tiring of the restraints of the Sabbath. Like some modern-day violaters, these folks sighed for the later abolishment of the sacred day. One day out of seven taken from their unceasing labor of mammon-getting, means a reduction of near fifteen per cent, from the profits of business. To such sordid minds the day set apart for rest becomes one of most unmitigated weariness. These Israelites longed for its passage in order that they might return to their places of merchandise. Following close upon the heels of this, there was another sin. Take away reverence for the Sabbath, and what will not follow! If a man will not respect an ordinance of Jehovah, is he likely to hesitate to trample down the commandments of men? These sinners oppressed the poor—God's adopted children. How many are the woes denounced against them that persecute these claimants of heaven's bounty! The Sabbath is over, and we see these contemners of it seated in the mart. Their counters are laden with the necessities of life; the poor come to buy. What an opportunity to these venders to exercise themselves in deeds of charity. Do they avail of it? To answer—look to their own times. God had appointed just weights, and had said, "Divers weights are an abomination;" but, in the face of it all, the poor were cheated out of their miserable pittance to fill the coffers of the iniquitious extortioner. But crime went even further. When no money was forthcoming, the poor were enslaved to their hard creditors. The rich were growing constantly richer, and the poor poorer. When such a case exists in any nation, momentous times are at hand. Israel had her "money devil." America and all modern civil organizations would do well to profit by her example!

ISRAEL'S JUDGMENT FORETOLD.

The stench of this pool of moral pollution had reached Heaven. God could not passed many things by. Would he also escape his notice? No! Sin never gets away from itself! Wherever it is, it carries its own course. Did not God declared his pity for the poor and his help for the oppressed? Hear the word of the Lord as given to the prophet: "Surely I will never forget any of thy works." Oh, here is a fearful fact; the sinner may do so blinded as to become unconscious to his deeds, but the record stands inerasable, and must stand throughout eternity unless it is obliterated by the cleansing fountain.

The calamities prophesied were of two kinds: First, there was the dread of the impending danger. The land was to tremble on account of the common terror. No time or chance for escape; him that flees the lion, a bear shall devour. After the horror of apprehension, then comes the reality; God's judgments come as the mighty flood. What one of Pharaob's host returned to tell the story of that disastrous pursuit? The suddenness of the destruction is touched upon. At midday, when all is bright, when there is stir and commotion, the sun shall go down in black night forever. How it is but one step from the height of prosperity precipice to the yawning abyss below, so oftentimes the pinnacle of glory is but the threshold of eternal infamy.

But the greatest calamity was yet to come—a dearth of the words of the Lord. What a famine is this! Lamentable in the extreme is the oft-seen neglecture of God's calling, and man's failure to comply; but what awfulness shrouds the scene of man's seeking and God's not answering! When men shall wander from "sea to sea," what a figure of the final estate of the impenitent! The only word of the Lord that gets to that dark world is, "Because I have called and ye have refused, behold your house is left to you desolate!" What desolation is that, when God's Spirit and Word and love are forever withdrawn? The prophecy was fulfilled in Israel's case; in the case of the sinner, it is still a prophecy. In your case its fulfillment is contingent. You need not run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord. Seek him in Christ. "Call upon him while he is near; seek him while he may be found."

Church Extension Assessments.

The assessments, as published in our report, was, by some inadvertence which we do not understand, copied from an old list. The following are correct assessments for the Conference year, 1891-1892, and we hope they will be divided by the Conference Boards to the various charges at the next ensuing sessions of the Conferences:

Mississippi Items.

Kosciusko is soon to have a new Baptist Church.

West Point has subscribed $60,000 toward erecting a foundry.

The Mississippi Press Association will meet in Yazoo City, May 13.

Pearl River county—created by the last Legislature—is to have a courthouse, to cost $4,100.

Contracts have been let for the completion of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad as far north as Hattiesburg by Sept. 1.

The Baptists at Gloster have let the contract for the erection of a new church, to cost $3 500. The church is to be completed by Aug 1.

The Poitevent and Favre Lumber Company, of Pearlington, has bought the entire business of the Goddard Lumber Company of Logtown.

Jim Hill, Vicksburg's recently appointed negro Republican postmaster, has appointed Capt. W. C. Raum, U. S. deputy marshal, as deputy postmaster.

A third national bank, with a capital of $250 000, is about to begin operations in Meridian. The city Board have taken steps for a $10,000 sewerage system to be owned by the city.

The Church News, the diocesan paper for many years of Mississippi, and published at Natchez, has been moved to Jackson. The name has been changed to the Church Guardian, and in the future it will be published here, as a semi-monthly, with the Rev. Frank Hallam, rector of St. Andrew, as editor. Bishops Thompson, of Mississippi, and Galleher, of Louisiana, will be among the regular contributors. It will be the diocesan paper for both Mississippi and Louisiana.

A fine hotel is being build at the Artesian Springs, near Canton.—Louisiana Review.

The first gun made for the Confederacy is now in possession of Mrs. H. I. Miller, of Chattanooga, whose father made it at Holly Springs in 1861.—Mississippian.

The proposition that the present Crawford Street M. E. Church shall be replaced by a new edifice is likely to be carried out at no distant date. At the late Conference of the congregation the pastor, Rev. Mr. Lewis, was authorized to appoint committees on finance and on building, which he will announce later. The site is a magnificent one, and should the congregation decide to build it will be adorned with a splendid edifice.—Vicksburg Herald.

The committee appointed by the union meeting, held Sunday night at the Presbyterian Church, to raise funds for carrying on the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the city, was on the street yesterday for several hours. Fair progress is reported to have been made towards raising the amount desired, $2,000; this sum being necessary for the expenses of the current year. The association has been doing a good work and deserves to be liberally sustained.—Vicksburg Herald.

Louisiana Notes.

The Natchitoches Telephone Company was recently organized.

The docket of St. Mary parish is now clear for the first time since 1866.

The First National Bank of Franklin opened its doors for business, April 27.

Shreveport has a candy factory, with a capacity of 3,000 pounds a day, in operation.

The rebuilding of the oil mill recently destroyed by fire at Natchitoches is well under way.

Delhi is rejoicing in hope of seeing the establishment of a bank, two wood factories and other enterprises in the near future.

Burglars at Plaquemine Brulee made a rich haul from the store of Edgar Barousse last week, securing $1,100 in cash and about $1,900 worth of goods.

The ferry privileges between West Baton Rouge and the city of Baton Rouge, for the term of five years, were auctioned at $6 750 per annum. This is an increase of $1,650 over previous lease.

The truck farmers and strawberry raisers in the region roundabout Ponchatoula are making money this year. Some shippers will net $400 per acre. They can not supply the demand made upon them for berries and vegetables.

The School Board of Caddo parish is active in pushing the school interests. Besides establishing several new schools, the Board is making preparations to erect a high school building, to cost not less than $15 000. Superintendent Hargrove is doing effective work.

The Board of Commissioners for the assessment of railroad, telegraph and telephone lines has assessed the Texas and Pacific $7,000 per mile, and its taps and branches, $3,500; the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas, $7,000 per mile; the Louisiana Central, $1,000 per mile; the Great Southern Telephone Lines, $30 per mile; Western Union Telegraph, $100 per mile, and an additional $100 per mile upon wires over three.

The parish of St. Landry has about 53 public schools. The school fund is over $14 000. The session lasts eight months.

Avoyelles with half the sum has had for years a school session of five months, with for 1890, fifty-three schools. The salaries in Avoyelles are $50, $35 and $20, respectively, for first, second and third grades. In St. Landry there are no grades; each teacher, irrespective of qualification, receives $30 per month. The highest and lowest salary being $30 per month.

In East Baton Rouge the highest salary paid teachers is $35 per month, and the lowest $15 per month.—Marksville Review.

The State teachers' Institutes, under the direction of the State Normal School, will be held at Monroe and Plaquemine, June 1 to 5; Amite City and Homer, June 8 to 12; Minden and Thibodeaux June 15 to 19; Lafayette, June 22 to 26; and Plain Dealing, June 22 and 23. These places have been chosen for their accessibility to the end that school officers and teachers from as many parishes as possible may be given an opportunity to attend these important meetings. The Institutes will be conducted by Profs. Boyd, Brumbaugh, Caldwell, Hill, and Smith, assisted by Hon. Wm. H. Jack, State superintendent of education, and Colonel Wm. Preston Johnston, president of Tulane University.

Catarrh Can't Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they can not reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cured it you have to take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is no quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

A Michigan timber syndicate, represented by a Mr. Weismann, has bought, within the past few days, half a dozen large tracts of timber land in the immediate neighborhood of Delhi, La., with the object of locating an immense timber manufacturing plant at that place, to turn out furniture and all manner of wooden articles.—Vicksburg Herald.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

CROUPY SOUNDS

At night, from baby's crib, are distracting to parents who are at a loss for a medicine equal to the emergency. Not so with those who have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. A dose of this medicine affords certain and speedy relief. To cure colds, coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, and the various disorders of the breathing apparatus, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal. It soothes the inflamed tissues, expectorates and imposes. Capt. U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children were subject."

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, May 7, 1891.

Briefs.

What is the matter with Methodism in New Orleans?

The progress of temperance in Boston is shown by these facts: Seven years ago there were 2,756 saloons in that city: two years ago there were 1,789; but now there are 893. In Massachusetts, two years ago, there were 4,832 saloons, and now there are 2,277.

We have received the proceedings of the tenth Annual Session of the Louisiana Press Association, held in Baton Rouge, last Fall. Besides giving the proceedings of the convention, this pamphlet gives several of the papers read before that body, and they are well worth perusal. We have been much interested by them.

It is believed by some astronomers that the spots on the sun are the results of bodies falling into the sun. And now comes the daring Edison and proposes to construct a huge phonograph on a magnetic hill in New Jersey and connect it with the atmospheric electric currents, so as to register the sound which is made on the sun by those falling bodies! Verily, verily!

We have received the Missionary Hand Book No. 1. It is published by our Board of Missions for the use of Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, and persons desiring missionary information. This No 1. is a condensed account of the growth and work of the English Methodist missions, and contains a good deal of interesting and valuable information. The series will be published monthly. Single copies, 5 cents; per dozen, 50 cents; for one year, 50 cents.

At the last meeting of the Publishing Committee of the ADVOCATE, the editor and the publisher were empowered to select an assistant-editor when, in their judgment, they could give him a suitable compensation. The assistant-editor is in sight; but, alas! where is the money to pay him? It is in the pockets of our subscribers, and we can't control it. We are loth to give up the assistant-editor, but our subscribers who owe us will compel us to do so, unless they pay up. If we had the $7,000 now due, we would have no trouble; but, as it is, we frequently have to borrow money to run on. Won't our friends help us? All we ask is pay what you owe. We have worked for you, and we have worked hard. Now come to our help; won't you?

The citizens of Jasper, Tenn., have tendered the Prior Institute, of that place, to Emory and Henry College as a training-school, to be run under the superintendence of its faculty. The building is well equipped for school purposes, and is worth $30,000. Is not this exactly what we advised some of the Mississippi towns to do in behalf of Millsaps College? To have colleges that are really colleges we must have training-schools, and these schools ought to be under the superintendence of the colleges for whom they are training young men. Emory and Henry will accept the gift on condition of a fee-simple deed, and that the course of study shall be determined by the college faculty, and the school shall not transcend the legitimate sphere of an academy.

The twenty-ninth International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of North America will be held in Kansas City, Mo., May 6-10.

The Value of Church Services.

A brother remarked to us, the other day, that he knew quite a number of Christians who had been regular attendants upon the services of the church for years, and yet they were no better nor broader Christians than they were years ago. These people have no more faith, no deeper love, no clearer knowledge of spiritual things, no wider charity for their fellow-men than they had when they began their Christian life. They are like the stunted trees of the forest. The stunted tree has its roots in the same soil and receives the same showers and sunshine and is enveloped in the same atmosphere as the growing and vigorous tree, and yet it remains in the same condition year after year. It is a case of, what the naturalist calls, arrested development. The things that cause other trees to grow and flourish have no effect upon it. There is something in it which hinders the appropriation and assimilation of the elements of growth contained in the atmosphere and soil and shower and sunlight. Those means of growth and development do the tree no good, for it remains stunted and dwarfed, having such a poverty of life that it produces nothing. Such a tree is neither good for fruit, nor timber, nor ornament.

In the church, the people who are regular attendants upon its services, and who are not growing Christians, are manifest examples of arrested development in the spiritual realm. They have the same ordinances of religion and use the same means of grace, attending continually the same services as others, and yet they do not grow and flourish and bear fruit as others do! There is something in them which hinders the appropriation and assimilation of the elements of growth contained in those things, and they remain stunted and dwarfed, with a life so poor that it produces nothing of value to the religious world.

Without pursuing further this analogy, we may say that such people do not understand the meaning of the church services. They have no just appreciation of the value of those services to themselves, and seem to have not the slightest conception of the profound relation between those services and their own Christian lives and work. We suppose they have never asked the questions, Why were these services originated? and, Why have they been kept up from the very beginning? Having never asked such questions, they are ignorant of the reason for the existence of these services, and do not know that they are founded in the deepest philosophy that governs the movements of the human soul. A man can not understand any fact until he understands the relations which connect that fact with other facts. The church services bear a very close relation to Christian life and work, and the relation seems closer and stronger because Christian life and work can not be separated from each other.

Religion means life—new, fresh, vigorous life—and life means activity, and activity means expenditure of life-force. The best example we have ever had of the real religious life reveals that life to us as a continuous stream of beneficent works. That being the truest religious life, it is the type of all true religion. Religious life, then, is essentially active. Continual activity necessarily exhausts the forces behind it, and unless opportunity is afforded to recuperate and reinforce those exhausted forces they must fail and the life becomes unproductive. If the supply of force does not equal the expenditure of force, the activity will gradually lessen and finally spend itself entirely. A good illustration is a steam engine where the fire under the boiler is permitted to die out.

The law of the spiritual life is "grace for grace," and its best illustration is in the manna given in the wilderness. The supply was just equal to the demand. There was no lack, neither was there a surplus. The condition of bestowment was, its proper use. The church service is the medium through which, ordinarily, the supplies of grace come, and the working Christian realizes this very quickly, and he is a regular and enthusiastic attendant. In his religious work there is an expenditure of force which he soon feels, and he is glad of the opportunity to repair to the place where he may receive a new supply. He never has on hand a surplus of force. Now, this working off and taking on force develops and strengthens the whole spiritual man, and is the cause of Christian growth. In other words, religious development, "growth in grace," is the result of the output of grace in daily duties, and a man must not only receive grace in order to use it, but he must use it in order that he may have room for its reception. Now, just here is the point where the people spoken of above fail. They do no real religious work. They are not active in serving the Lord by active service of men. They attend the church services; but, not having put forth any grace, they attend full of the old grace, and there is no room for a supply of fresh grace. It is of no use to carry a full pitcher to the spring. Their growth stops right at this point, and it will never start again until they begin to expend the grace they already have in active work for others. There is such a thing as "receiving the grace of God in vain."

Two Pleasant Visits.

Our first visit was made to the beautiful town of Amite City, La., to assist Rev. Geo. D. Anders in a meeting. Did you ever visit Amite City? It is a town full of beautiful, large water-oaks, kind men and noble, consecrated Christian women. We are satisfied with the status of the woman question in the South. Should you wish to see what woman can do, go to Amite City and look at the excellent village church, the work of consecrated women. The church needs the help of woman, but we want it on the old lines—in the home, society and church, and less talk about woman in legislative halls.

We visited the home of the late Judge Ellis, of precious memory. To a weary itinerant this home always suggested the home at Bethany. What a change in ten years! The beloved father and mother have left for the heavenly home, of which their earthly home was a type—made so by their own beautiful example. It was a benediction to visit the old home, and feel the influence of sacred memories.

Amite City is also the home of Bro. A. Evans, who is the preacher's friend. How delightful would a preacher's life be if this world was full of such men! We had fine audiences, and much good was, we trust, accomplished. Bro. Anders and family are in great favor. We expect soon to hear he has moved into a bran-new parsonage. Bro. Dan Kelley, a young minister of sweet spirit, is preaching in the waste places near the city. Up to date he has received on his work a bottle of pepper sauce, and this scribe can testify it was warm. It is a good thing for Methodists to keep their preachers warm—a gentle reminder that the preachers should keep the people warm. Ye Methodists, pass the pepper sauce around, and let the preachers take the hint. Bro. Kelley was promised a setting of eggs; but, alas! he had no hen to hatch them.

Our next trip was to Columbia, Miss. They say Columbia is between thirty and forty miles from every other place. We left the Illinois Central at Summit, where Bro. Sibley had secured us a fine span of horses and a sable driver for the long trip of forty-two miles. Pike county is improving a great deal. It is a county of small farms. The small farm nowadays is the paying one. We spent the night at China Grove, where we were delighted to meet our good friends, Bro. and Sister Wood. Bro. Wood is doing well on his circuit. Our stay in Columbia lasted five days, and we attended nineteen services. God graciously blessed his people; sinners were converted and several added to the church.

Columbia is the home of ex-Attorney-General T. S. Ford. He is a prominent Methodist; prays in his family, in public, and pays as he prays! This is religion with the true ring. The Lampton brothers live here, and are noble men. Here, as in Amite City, the Christian women are active and consecrated. With such workers as the Ferrils, Rawls, Fords, Foxworths, Balls, Wadworths, and many others, the pastor is greatly encouraged. Father Winburne, who is about eighty years old, gave us great joy by his regular attendance. There is an excellent parsonage for the pastor, gracefully presided over by Sister Moon. Bro. Moon is a graduate of the Southern University. He grows on his people. He is fearless in his denunciation of sin. He takes direct aim and nearly every time hits the mark. He and a Baptist minister received a letter containing two cartridges. A very nice note was enclosed, stating they thought, perhaps, the preachers needed some ammunition for their sermons. Bro. Moon had been shooting, but not with blank cartridges. Bro. Moon was with me last year when a leading college president in Mississippi put his mouth on a call-bell in a hotel and told the porter to bring him a chair.

Beautiful Columbia on the Pearl, we shall remember a long time your noble inhabitants—our friends.

I. W. COOPER.

Grenada District Conference.

Southern Methodism in the Grenada district, of the North Mississippi Conference, under the efficient leadership of the presiding elder, Rev. J. W. Price, and twenty other faithful ministers, is the most enterprising and influential religious force in that part of Mississippi. Its membership of about 6,500 worship in eighty churches, while most of its ministers are provided with comfortable parsonages. Total amount invested in church property is $92,337. The amount expended last year for church and parsonage property was over $12,000, and a like sum will be similarly invested this year for the same purpose. The amount raised for church expenses and Conference assessments during 1890 was nearly $14,000. The amount raised for this purpose this year will exceed that sum.

Bro. Price says that in most of the city, town and country appointments the M. E. Church, South, is in the lead of sister Protestant churches, and is in Christian fellowship with the latter; that the spiritual condition of the charges is good and improving, and a higher type of Christian life is evident in our membership.

The Methodist Sunday-schools of this district have about 3,000 in regular attendance. It is estimated that there are about 5,000 children attending the Sunday-schools of the other Protestant churches in this district. The great need felt by all interested in this vital part of church work is better teaching by converted teachers, animated with one dominant desire and purpose—that is, the salvation of the children.

There are probably no districts in Mississippi where the ministers and members are more zealous and devoted than in the Grenada district.

In conversing with Wm. T. Wynn, superintendent of education for Yalobusha county, he stated that there were 68 day-schools maintained in this country, of which 5 are high schools. The latter cost $8 per session per capita of average attendance for 10 months, and for the support of the primary and elementary schools 120 days it is $2 28 per head.

Twenty thousand dollars are expended for school purposes per year in Yalobusha county. Number of educable children, 6,500; average attendance, 4,000. Ten new school-houses have been built in this county in the last two years at an outlay of $20,000.

Bro. Price, presiding elder, says that this is a fair picture of education in the counties of Carroll, Lafayette, Leflore, Yalobusha, Grenada and Calhoun, which are in this District Conference, and shows that the people of this section are alive to the importance of public schools.

M.

Mississippi Conference Board of Missions.

By authority of the president of our Board and agreement of all its officers, a meeting is called for Thursday, June 4, proximo, to be held at the First Church, in Jackson, at eleven A. M. The special object of this meeting is to secure the early appointment of one or more missionaries provided for at our last Annual Conference, and for further securing their support. Other matters of moment will probably come before this meeting. According to our Constitution, ten members are required as a quorum. We have decided on the above date for our meeting, believing that many will be able to use cheap excursion rates to Jackson at that time, June 3, being the time for unveiling of Confederate monument. I make this early notice that brethren may arrange their plans beforehand. And I beseech you, true yoke-fellows, to hear this in mind, and let us have one meeting for prayerful deliberation and wise devising. The time is auspicious, the occasion is urgent.

Besides all our presiding elders, who are "ex-officio" members, the following is the roll, as appointed by last session of Conference, viz.: W. C. Black, president; T. S. West, treasurer; T. W. Adams, J. V. Penn, P. Howard, W. B. Lewis, J. C. Enochs, J. S. Turner, J. S. Otis, J. H. Thompson, W. M. Williams, J. F. Cassel, E. S. Drake.

Our "special fund" treasurer, B. F. Lewis, will be with us to give statement of what has been collected, and otherwise to aid in our deliberations.

J. P. DRAKE,
Sec. Board of Missions.

Shubuta, Miss.

As we have said before, the slow progress of the truth in individual hearts and lives can not always be laid at the doors of the preachers. The following from Dr. Storrs, of Brooklyn, is apposite:

Every minister knows, and is sorry to know, when he rises in his pulpit on Sunday morning—I do not know about Boston, but I know about Brooklyn and New York—he is sorry to know that probably three-fifths of even the communicants before him have had their minds soaked and saturated in the news which had come with the Sunday morning papers before they came to church; that it had not been a preparation of reading the Scriptures and of prayer by which they had become ready for the church service; that he is to speak to minds which are in precisely the same attitude toward the truth in which they would have been if they had come on Wednesday or on Saturday morning, and not on the Lord's day, to the church.

Notes.

What is the matter with Methodism in New Orleans?

The best way to keep the moths out of your clothing is to pass the clothing on to more needy people.

Dr. Charles H. Bradford has presented the Southern Methodist Orphans' Home of St. Louis with $40,000.

A lady said to a preacher: "Whenever you lay your hand upon a child's head, you lay it upon a woman's heart."

Now that the Lottery has come to the front again, let every reader of the ADVOCATE put forth every energy to defeat it.

Miss Willard says, in the Union Signal, of April 30: "The woman question and the temperance question are becoming inextricably mixed. Where one ends and the other begins nobody can tell." And yet if you criticise this mixture, woe be unto you!

Prof. Totten, of Yale University, says that his mathematical calculation founded on biblical truth proves beyond peradventure that the Messiah will come again before the year 1900. He does not, however, believe that the "end will come" then. He thinks that will be the beginning of the millenium. Are you ready?

A far-reaching good deed that was when one of our ex-presiding elders sent six dollars to us to put to our Helping Fund. We are sending the paper to many that are unable to pay, and that six dollars will add several to the list, and we have no objection to increasing the list. Who will follow in the footsteps of the good brother?

Let none of our pastors neglect to prepare for a suitable celebration of Children's Day. Be at some pains to make it an interesting occasion to old and young. Bro. Bachman, of Kosciusko, Miss., or Bro. Dominick, of Jackson, Miss., or Bro. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp street, this city, will furnish you all the literature necessary. It is appointed for May 17.

We commend to your thought this short note from the Interior:

What is needed now is obedience to Bible precepts—and none more need to have their attention called to those precepts now than some of those who are set to expound it. There is such a thing—Paul himself feared it—when he said—"lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway."

We desire to call the attention of all our readers to a direction in "our excellent book of discipline," which we fear is not always followed. It is paragraph 223, which reads: "In all our congregations let the people learn to sing and use our own hymn and tune book." What business has any other hymn and tune book in our congregations or social meetings? None whatever.

Listen to this, men and women of Louisiana. A paper outside of our State says: "It would be a lasting disgrace to Louisiana to have fixed in her Constitution a scheme of private gain which has been declared by the Federal Congress to be repugnant to every sense of right and moral rectitude, and which has by the solemn enactment of Congress been excluded from the mail." Do you favor that scheme? Will you work against it?

What is the matter with the missionary contributions? From every quarter we hear complaints. The yearly balances of many societies show a decrease in contributions. Our own figures are disappointing to an extreme degree. Our English brethren are making the same complaint. One of them says that less is contributed to-day than was contributed twelve years ago! What is the matter? Is the missionary spirit dying out?

Preachers ought not only to study to have something worth saying, but they ought to study to speak effectively. The Bible is the book to study in order to have something to say. It is the fountain of truth. A good book on speaking we have lately looked over, and we find in it a great many things that will help the preacher. It abounds in common sense, which on this subject is very uncommon. It is published by Funk & Wagnalls, and is entitled "Before an Audience," by Nathan Sheppard. We don't know who he is, but his book is a readable one, and will be specially helpful to a young preacher.

An article in one of our exchanges has thoughts that will bear repetition. If a man can be religious by hearing as many fine sermons as possible, why can't he be a musician by listening to fine music? If a man can get religion by looking upon religious meetings, why can't he get rich by looking through the bank window at the piles of money within? Church services that don't push a man up to the practice of religion are not worth much. Gormandizing on spiritual food may inflate spiritual pride, but it is the old story of Ephraim feeding on the wind, and when the time for action comes the whole thing collapses with a belch. If there is no earnest practice of religion there can be no solid growth.

Personal and Otherwise.

What is the matter with Methodism in New Orleans?

Bro., Sawyer's meeting at Felicity Street grows in interest and importance.

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, of Alexandria, is assisting Bro. Sawyer in his meeting at Felicity Street Church.

Dr. C. F. Evans, presiding elder of the New Orleans district, will preach the annual sermon at Centenary College, May 31.

We understand that Dr. J. B. Walker stood his trip to his country home very well, and has been steadily improving since his arrival there.

The editor left Tuesday evening to attend the annual meeting of the Board of Missions, which begins its session Friday, May 8, in Wilmington, N. C.

What has become of the Pacific Methodist Advocate? Bro. Dubose, have you put your old friend? We haven't seen your face nor heard your voice for a month. Where are you?

Dr. Phillips Brooks has been elected Bishop of Massachusetts by a handsome majority. We look upon Dr. Brooks as the greatest preacher in the Episcopal Church in this country.

Bro. Carradine is in the midst of a glorious revival. A dispatch from him says: "A gracious revival in Centenary; numbers of conversions and sanctifications and interest spreading."

A private note from Bro. Holloman, our pastor at Canton, Miss., says that he has been suffering for two months from the effects of the grippe, but hopes to improve with the warm weather. We trust that hope will be realized.

Several of our preachers are in attendance upon the State Sunday-school Convention, now in session in Carondelet Street Church. Among them we note Revs. B. F. White, of Monroe; R. S. Collier, of Valley circuit; W. Schule, of Sabine, and J. A. Parker, of Baton Rouge.

The second Sunday in May is "Advocate Day" for the Wesleyan and St. Louis Advocates. We mentioned this subject in regard to our paper, suggesting a day for special effort for the ADVOCATE, weeks ago, and not a single line in favor of it has come to this office! If our delinquent subscribers would pay what they owe, we would be satisfied for while!

The Methodist Book Concern, Hunt & Eaton, 150 Fifth avenue, New York City (Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati), have just issued what is described as an exceptional story for young people in the simple dramatic force and decisive religious undertone—"Left to Themselves: Being the Fortunes of Philip and Gerald." The story is by E. Prentiss Stevenson, of the Independent (N. Y.).

PASTOR'S BOOK—NOW READY.

Messrs. Shaw & Blaylock:

The J. T. L. Annis Pastor's Book has just reached me. I can not commend it too highly to Pastors. In reading it has been brought to a high degree of perfection. No Methodist Pastor should be without it. I am thankful for such a book.

Respectfully, T. L. ADAMS.

The above book, revised and enlarged, can be bought only from the undersigned. Price, postage paid, 50 cents per copy.

—Rev. H. O. White writes from Delhi, La.: "We are moving on well, considering the hard times. Much interest is manifested in all parts of the district. Congregations are large, and we are hoping, praying and expecting a successful year in every way for the church. The preachers are at work in the spirit of the Master. We expect to hold four Sunday-school conventions in the bounds of the district, that this cause may be built up. I don't think we do enough on this line."

—Rev. W. G. Evans reports from Jasper, La.: "I have just closed my second meeting on this work, at Keyeu Jacque. I was most ably assisted by the Holy Spirit, and, being armed with the sword of the Spirit, you may rest assured the victory was the Lord's. God wrought a wonderful work for us there. Many reclamations. Two old church members came back and three joined on profession of faith. We now have a fine Sunday-school and prayer meeting at this point. Congregations here and at one other point are very good. One of my new appointments, Hamburg, promises to do well. I have one more place appointed for the gospel now. I will try and go on the fifth Sunday in May, but not before, and hold a meeting there. I wish every month had a fifth Sunday, so I could do this kind of work. Pray for us."

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also gives night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

To the Preachers.

The success of every movement of Methodism depends on the preacher in charge. Much has been written of Mr. Wesley, and his name has been justly praised; but Mr. Wesley by himself would have fallen far short of this work. The connectional success of Methodism is as much the work of her thousands of faithful preachers on districts, stations and circuits as of that great leader. No organization can be so perfect as to succeed without the co-operation of the many.

Methodism is a system which for working purposes is not equalled anywhere. But its efficiency is dependent upon the individual preacher. The various Boards organized for work must rely upon those in charge of the congregations. These are the pivots of every enterprise in Methodism.

The Board of Church Extension makes this appeal to the preachers on behalf of its work. Appropriations have been made in donations for more than $30,000, and it is earnestly wished to pay every dollar of these before April 1, 1892. Our dependence is the collections in every congregation taken by the preachers. The Board has made these appropriations, looking to this means to meet them. Outside the work of raising this money, the secretaries have all the work they can possibly do. If the preachers will carefully and separately present this claim to their people, the entire assessment will be raised. The facts will stir intelligent liberality. If the assessment be raised, the work will be vastly simplified.

We ask two things:

First. That every preacher in charge present this cause to his people separately. The practice of putting several collections together sadly prejudices the work to be done.

Second. That each preacher take this collection at once and send the money, not to this office, but to the treasurer of Conference Board. Ten thousand dollars sent by June 1 will secure the completion of thirty-five churches during the present building season.

Brethren, the responsibility is on you, and we are looking to you to meet it. DAVID MORTON, Cor. Sec.

Another!

In January my friend made his proposition to he one of ten to contribute each $100 yearly to send a missionary to Japan and keep him there. In February one brother of like spirit with him and the Master agreed to the proposition. In April another joins them, and a fourth man has said that if the third one did go into the movement, he would also. Who will be the fifth wise one to join these faithful brethren? Who will be the sixth? the seventh? the eighth? the ninth? the tenth? T. L. MELLEN.

Old Nursery Favorites.

There was Tom, the son of the Piper,
Jack Sprat, and Merry King Cole,
And the Three Wise Men of Gotham,
Who went to sea in a bowl;
The woman who rode on a broomstick,
And swept the cobwebbed sky,
And the boy who sat in the corner,
Eating his Christmas pie.

These were some of the old favorites, but they have been supplanted by the "Pansy" and "Chatterbox" stories, "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and "Five Little Peppers." The old-fashioned pills and physics have been superseded, and wisely, too, by Pierce's Purgative Pellets, a mild, harmless and effective cathartic. They are pleasant to take—so gentle in their action that the most delicate child can take them, yet so effective that they will cure the most obstinate cases of constipation, stomach, liver and bowel troubles. They should be in every nursery. As a gentle laxative, only one for a dose.

Without the newspaper great advertisers can not exist. Without the advertisers, great and small (but mainly the small advertisers), the newspaper of to-day would be impossible.—James H. Beals, Jr.

A Free Trip to California.

MR. EDITOR: Tell Mrs. Brown that figs and olives are grown in California and that there is money in them. About a year ago I bought two acres of land of Walter J. Raymond, of Dayton, Ohio; paid $2 per acre down and have paid $1 per acre each week since. The lands are planted in figs and olives by Mr. Raymond's son, who lives on the land, cultivates and cares for it; last week I received a check for $100 which was my profit on the sale of the fruit, which is sold on the tree, and I am to have a free ticket next month to visit the land. Anyone can obtain an acre of this land by writing to Walter J. Raymond, Dayton, Ohio, who guarantees a yearly profit of $50 on every acre purchased and a free trip to California. Why should anyone be poor, when they can, by looking around a little, make money as I have done?

Any one knowing the address of Rev. John Boring, at time of reading this, will confer a favor by sending me the same immediately, at Canton, Miss. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

To the Preachers and Sunday-school Superintendents of the North Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Please observe Children's Day. Let us all comply with this part of the Discipline. If the third Sunday in May is not a convenient time, I trust we will use some other day. Your brother,

J. M. WYATT.

Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., will preach the commencement sermon for Grenada Collegiate Institute. Rev. S. D. Long will preach for the Young Ladies' Missionary Society. Rev. A. Monk, D. D., will deliver the annual address, and Prof. Wm. Rice Sims will address the Alumnæ Society.

T. J. NEWELL.

Our District Sunday-school Conference will be held at Woodville, Miss., June 4, 1891, opening at ten A. M. It will be conducted by Hon. Geo. T. McGehee. We invite Sunday-school workers and all who feel an interest in the Conference to be present.

The Woodville District Conference will convene at Woodville, Miss., June 5, 1891, at nine A. M.; Bishop Galloway presiding. C. MCDONALD.

To the Preachers of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: It is positively necessary for me to have the names of the delegates to the Brookhaven District Conference as soon as possible; therefore, will you all please send me the names of all of them who will be at all likely to attend, soon as reasonably possible for you to do so, and oblige,

Your obedient servant,

J. G. SIBLEY.

Summit, Miss.

All persons holding funds collected at the Easter service for the Scarritt Bible and Training-school will please forward the same to the agent at once, that a full report may be made through the church papers at the earliest possible time.

If any have failed to receive acknowledgment of money sent to the agent, they will greatly oblige her by a prompt notification of such omission.

Rev. W. R. Lambuth, M. D.

Various places in the Meridian district have enjoyed the presence and ministry of this consecrated man of God. Sunday, April 19, was spent by him in Meridian, where two sermons and two addresses were delivered; Monday, April 20, at Waynesboro, where two discourses gave light and warmth; Tuesday night, at Enterprise; Wednesday, at Vosshurgh; and Thursday, in Binnsville—twelve discourses in all. The results are far-reaching. There are now five male candidates for appointments to mission work, and five young women offer themselves for woman's work. About twenty-five fathers and mothers have consecrated their children to this great mission work. T. L. MELLEN.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER,

A Powerful and the Only Known Solvent of

RENAL CALCULI.

Its Value in Rheumatic Gout.

Case of Governor Thomas M. Holt of the State of North Carolina. He discharges one and a half ounces of Calculi under the action of the Water. His case stated by his family physician, Dr. E. C. Laird.

GOVERNOR THOMAS M. HOLT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

STATEMENT OF DR. LAIRD.

From the Maryland Medical Journal of November 17, 1888.

"The relief afforded by BUFFALO LITHIA WATER to a patient of mine, Col. Thomas M. Holt of this place, a sufferer from RENAL CALCULI, is, I think, worthy of some record. The 1st of May last he came under my care subject to frequent attacks of NEPHRITIC COLIC. Except as to the usual treatment for the relief of present suffering, I put him EXCLUSIVELY UPON BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, SPRING NO. 2, under the influence of which he in a few weeks passed four CALCULI, weighing from two to three grains each, which was followed by a disappearance of symptoms. Notwithstanding, however, the continued use of the water, after a short interval there was a return of these attacks, with increase both of frequency and severity, when he made a visit to the Buffalo Lithia Springs, where he used the water six weeks, with the following results: Ten days after arrival he began to discharge at intervals large quantities of CALCULI and SAND, which continued for several weeks, and afterward gradually diminished, until at the expiration of the six weeks there was only occasionally, and barely perceptible upon minute examination, a slight sandy deposit in the urine. At the same time improvement in the general condition of the patient was very marked.

"The amount of CALCULOUS matter discharged may safely be estimated at from one to one and a half ounces. Under microscopic examination it was evident, I think, that the CALCULI WERE ORIGINALLY PARTS OF LARGER FORMATIONS DISSOLVED BY THE ACTION OF THE WATER. Analysis made by Dr. F. S. Whaley, Resident Physician at the Springs AND CONSULTING PHYSICIAN IN THE CASE, showed it to be URIC ACID.

"Six weeks have elapsed since he left the Springs. Use of the water continued. THE URINE IS FREE FROM SEDIMENT AND NORMAL.

"RHEUMATIC GOUT in a severe form, associated with, and which indeed preceded the CALCULOUS affection, and which had resisted the usual remedies, was also to a great extent relieved by the use of the water. It is proper for me to add that I was in constant attendance upon Col. Holt during his stay at the Springs."

Water, in cases of One Dozen One-half Gallon Bottles, $5 per case at the Springs. Full Springs Pamphlet Sent on Application.

TESTIMONIAL.

LINDEN, ALA.

I. L. LYONS, New Orleans—

Dear Sir: Last winter I had a severe cough, pain in the chest and spitting of blood. I procured a bottle of Dr. Locock's Cough Elixir, and am happy to state that four doses relieved me entirely, and I can safely say that I think it is the best cough medicine I ever saw.

THE LAST DAYS!

A Text-Book on the Second Coming of Christ and Events which shall be Hereafter.

Compiled by JOHN E. RODD, New Orleans.

This is a most captivating and wonderfully instructive little work on this glorious coming event. This event is of such great moment that it is mentioned 318 times in the New Testament, or once in every 35 verses. It seems to have fallen to Mr. Rodd's good fortune to classify these passages under proper headings and in an intelligent manner, and in doing so he has done a great service to the Christian world.

This book contains but fourteen short chapters, and they are all Scripture quotations, prefaced by a few lines, only, of introductory remarks; but, as a convenient TEXT BOOK upon this subject, its value and usefulness can hardly be overestimated.

52 pages; paper cover; only 5 cents each; 50 cents per dozen, post paid.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE LITTLE MAID FOR ME.

I know a little maiden,
Whom I always see arrayed in
Silks and ribbons, but she is a spoiled and petted little elf,
For she never helps her mother, or her sister or her brother,
But, forgetting all around her, lives entirely for herself;
So she simpers and she sighs,
And she mopes and she cries,
And knows not where the happy hours flee.
Now let me tell you privately, my darling little friends,
She is as miserable as miserable can be,
And I fear she's not the little maid for me.

But I know another maiden,
Whom I've often seen arrayed in
Silks and ribbons, but not always; she's a prudent little elf;
And she always helps her mother, and her sister and her brother,
And lives for all around her, quite regardless of herself;
So she laughs and she sings,
And the hours on happy wings
Shower gladness round her pathway as they flee.
Now need I tell you privately, my darling little friends,
She's as happy as a little maid can be?
This is surely just the little maid for me.

Just Think.

The editor has now on hand thirty-four letters from the little cousins waiting for their turn to be published. Now, at the rate of six a week, it will take just six weeks to publish the one that came in this morning. The editor knows you don't want to wait so long as that; but what can he do? If he publishes some and leaves others out, some of you won't like that. If he publishes all in turn, it will be away in June before the last one now in his drawer sees the light, and by that time he may have fifty on hand. Now, suppose all hands agree not to write any more until the questions "Aunt Loretta" asks in her letter to-day are answered. Let every cousin study up the answers, and let the first one who finds the answers write. What say you? EDITOR.

Letter from "Aunt Loretta."

Dear Nieces and Nephews: Did it ever occur to you that there has been three questions asked that have never been answered? Suppose some of you sharpen your wits and hunt them up instead of asking over and over again the simple or easy ones that have been answered so many times. Several years ago Ida Sadler asked where in the Bible is found, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." Our good editor asked where "hot springs" was found. I asked, "Who did the first chivalrous deed?" And now, here comes a little ten-year-old boy with the name of two presidents signed to his letter, and asks one that has puzzled even the theologians. "Who was Melchizedek?" Who speaks first?

A noble gift to the world, Dr. Johnson left in Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Many bless him.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl eight years old. I have left school and am staying with grandma. She is alone. Grandpa died on March 12, and we miss him so much. We know he is happy; he told us that he would be happy. He loved little children. My brothers and I loved him, too; he was so kind to all. I have two brothers. I will ask the little cousins a question: Where in the Bible does it speak of eagles' wings, where of hens' wings, and where of God's wings? In what Psalm is this verse, "He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust." With a sweet "God bless you" and a "Mizpah" (who knows what that means?), to each of you, I am,

Your loving cousin,

KATIE A. HENNING.

Sulphur City, La.

MR. EDITOR: I have never seen a letter in the ADVOCATE from any of the children in this part of the country. It has induced me to write one. I am a member of the Methodist Sunday-school. My father takes the dear old ADVOCATE, and I enjoy reading the children's letters very much. Bro. Keener is our pastor. We all like him very much. I have three pets: a cat and a canary bird and a little chicken. As this is my first letter, I will close for fear it will be thrown into that dreadful waste-basket. I will ask the little folks a question: Where is the word "dog" mentioned in the Bible? Best wishes to the ADVOCATE.

Your friend,

LILLIAN SEYMOUR.

Plaquemine, La.

MR. EDITOR: I want to become a member of the cousins' corner. I am a boy fourteen years old. I live two and a half miles from the village of Gonzales. I haven't gone to school this term, but hope to be able to go next term. We have no Sabbath-school. We have church once a month. Bro. Meador is our minister. I will answer Harrison Hays' and Lillie Dawkins' questions: First, Lillie Dawkins' can be found in Gen. v, 3. "How old was Seth when he died?" 912 years. Second, Harrison Hays' question can be found in Gen. xiv, 18; can only give a supposition, as the editor said it was a hard question to answer, but will tell what I read in the Bible. "And Melchizedek king of Salem, brought forth bread and wine: and he was the priest of the most high God;" but his birth and genealogy are concealed. This is my first attempt, and if it does not find its way to the waste-basket, I will call again. Allow me to ask a question: Who was the father of the seven sons that attempted to cast out devils in the name of Jesus, in whom they did not believe? Wishing the ADVOCATE success, I am,

Yours truly,

SUMNER SPURGEON.

Gonzales, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I have two sisters, one older and one younger than myself. My papa is dead, and my mother, aunt and grandma are all widows, and they live together. I go to school to a sweet young lady named Miss Kate May. I study dictionary, history, arithmetic, physiology, geography and writing. I am a member of the M. E. Church, South. We have a very large and interesting Sunday-school. Capt. E. W. Stafford is our superintendent. Mrs. J. S. Turner is my teacher, and she is such a sweet lady. The juveniles have a society called the Shining Stars. We are a small band, but we do the best we can, and we meet twice a month. Bro. Rayner is our minister for this year, and he is loved by every one. I want to ask the cousins a question: Where is "nitre" found in the Bible? I will answer Jessie Vinson's question: There are 3,601,920 letters in the Bible. I am,

Your little friend,

EMMA HAMBLEN.

Vossburgh, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I go to school every day. We have a good Sunday-school. The pastor is Bro. Enochs. I like him very much. I have six pets—two goslings and two dogs and a little brother and sister. I love to read the letters in the dear old ADVOCATE. My papa takes it. I stay at my grandma's now, and go to school. So I will close for the first time, for fear it will reach that greedy old waste-basket.

Your unknown friend.

MOLLIE B. WILLIAMS.

Kidney troubles, if taken in season, are easily cured with Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Fact.

When Enos was still a youngster, his uncle one day drove a new span of mules into the yard. As the children were standing around admiring them, one of the mules suddenly gave vent to a most terrific bray. The little fellow had never heard such a frightful sound before, and, badly scared, ran screaming into the house. The next day, the mules were driven out again; but Enos refused to go near, and, when asked the reason, he replied, "I'se so 'f'aid Uncle Dazid's mule will laugh at me again."

Kindness.

More hearts pine away in secret anguish for the want of kindness from those who should be their comforters, than from any other calamity in life. A word of kindness is a seed which springs up a flower. A kind word and a pleasant voice are gifts easy to give. Be liberal with them. They are worth more than money. If a word or two will render a man happy, said a Frenchman, he must be a wretch indeed who will not give it. Kindness is stored away in the heart like rose leaves in a drawer, to sweeten every object around them. Little drops of rain brighten the meadows, and little acts of kindness brighten the world.

We can conceive of nothing more attractive than the heart when filled with the spirit of kindness. Certainly nothing embellishes human nature as the practice of this virtue; a sentiment so genial and so excellent ought to be emblazoned upon every thought and act of our lives. The principle underlies the whole theory of Christianity, and in no other person do we find it more happily exemplified than in the life of our Savior, who, while on earth, "went about doing good." And how true it is that "A little word in kindness spoken,

A motion, or a tear,
Has often healed the heart that's broken,
And made a friend sincere."

—Selected.

Have You a Mother?

Have you a mother? If so, honor and love her. If she is aged, do all in your power to cheer her declining years. Her hair may have bleached, her eyes may have dimmed, her brow may contain deep and unsightly furrows, her cheeks may be sunken; but you should never forget the holy love and tender care she has had for you.

In years gone by she has kissed away from your cheek the troubled tears; she has soothed and petted you when all else appeared against you; she has watched over and nursed you with a tender care known only to a mother; she has sympathized with you in adversity; she has been proud of your success. You may be despised by all around you, but that loving mother stands as an apologist for all your shortcomings.

With all that disinterested affection, would it not be ungrateful in you if in her declining years you fail to reciprocate her love and honor her as your best friend? We have no respect for a man or woman who neglects an aged mother. If you have a mother, love her, and do all in your power to make her happy.

How to Be a Happy Old Maid.

To have so much to do that there is no time for morbid thoughts.

To never think for a moment that you are not attractive, and to make yourself look as charming as possible.

To be so considerate of the happiness of others that it will be reflected back to you as from a looking-glass.

To never permit yourself to grow old, for by cultivating all the graces of heart, brain and body, age will not come upon you.

To believe that a life-work has been mapped out for you, that it is near you, and to do that which your hands find for you.

To remember that the happy old maid is the one member of a family who, not having any other claims on her, can be God's own sunshine to those in sorrow or in joy.—The Ladies' Home Journal.

WOMAN'S GREATEST DANGER.—The great element of danger with woman's progress before the public lies in this fact: that it takes women away from home who ought to be there and nowhere else. The public platform is no place for a mother who has either sons or daughters to educate. If woman's progress is going to tend in that direction, then the sooner that advancement stops the better. The first thought of a wife or a mother should be her home; all things, no matter how important, are secondary to that. No matter how rampant may become certain public evils, let her see to it that she keeps the evils out of her home, and she performs her greatest duty to her God, her family, and mankind.—The Ladies' Home Journal.

SCIENTIFIC.

TUNNEL BUILDING.—The art of tunneling may be considered as having been reduced to a science, as no distance is too great and no material too hard to be penetrated if the object sought is sufficient to justify the expense. The building of the St. Clair River tunnel, where iron cylinders were forced through the clay by hydraulic pressure, was a great advance in the art of building tunnels through certain kinds of soil. The tunnel built under the streets of London, where the top of the arch is just below the cobble stone pavement, was built without in the least obstructing travel at the place where the work was being carried on. According to the Industrial World, a tunnel 5 miles long is now being driven through the solid rock under Gray's Peak, 60 miles west of Denver, Col. This tunnel, which is 8x18 feet, is being built primarily to tap the mineral veins in the mountains, which are thought to be quite rich. After the tunnel is complete it will be enlarged and opened for railroad traffic to accommodate an extension of the Utah Central railway, which is to form a through line from Denver to Salt Lake. Thus far about a mile of the tunnel has been driven by hand power, but a plant of ten Rand drills, with Ingersoll air compressors, has just been put in, and an electric light plant is soon to follow, after which it is expected the rate of working will be greatly increased. The excavating of this tunnel is through rock about as hard as any that can be found anywhere.—Scientific American.

PEARLS THAT PERISH.—One peculiarity of pearls is that, unlike other precious gems, they are liable to decay. Occasionally a valuable pearl changes color, seems to be attacked with a deadly disease, and crumbles into dust. Such is reputed to have been the fate of the most magnificent specimen ever known. It was found by an ignorant fisherman, who disposed of it for an insignificant sum. Passing through successive hands, it finally became the property of a Russian merchant, and found a possessor who knew its immense value and prized it accordingly. He kept it carefully in a secluded room of his magnificent mansion, apart from all other of his treasures. It was the wonder and admiration of favored friends who were permitted to look at it. The merchant finally became involved in a political conspiracy and fled to Paris, taking his one great treasure with him. He kept it hidden for a time, but at last consented to show it to some distinguished lovers of precious stones. But when he opened the casket he fell back in dismay and staggered as though stricken with death. The gem had begun to change color. A fatal disease had attacked it. It soon was a worthless heap of white powder, and the once wealthy merchant was a pauper. The death of a pearl is caused by decomposition of the animal membrane which enters into its substance.

CONVICTS IN THE UNITED STATES.—A census bulletin gives statistics of penitentiary convicts in each State in proportion to population. In 1880, out of a population of 50,000,000, the proportion of convicts was 709 to each 1,000,000 of population. In 1890 the proportion was 722 to the 1,000,000. The population of the United States in 1890 was 24.86 per cent. greater than in 1880. In 1890 there were 27.88 per cent. more convicts than in 1880. This shows that the number of convicts has increased 2.42 per cent. faster in a decade than the population. Of the 45,233 convicts in penitentiaries in the United States in 1890, the whites formed 67.53 per cent., and the colored 32.47 per cent. Of the 30,546 white convicts, the native-born represented 75 60 per cent., and the foreign-born 23.79 per cent., while the place of birth of 0.61 per cent. was unknown. The men formed 96 1 per cent. and the woman 3.9 per cent., showing 24.64 times as many male convicts as female.—Scientific American.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

IN THE SPRING

Avoid Sickness by Purifying the Blood and Toning up the System.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with great pleasure because it is so.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never scraps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and arti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

OBITUARIES.

BALDWIN.—As the night gave place to day, in the morning of June 1, 1890, the spirit of our angel mother, Mrs. A. M. BALDWIN, caught the words: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." She had been a great sufferer for years of bronchitis. The disease produced some of the most distressing symptoms. Her sufferings at times were of the most excruciating character, which continued almost to the end. She prayed, and urged us all to pray, that she might not in her last hours have such a struggle to breathe as she had seen in some cases; and for a short time before her death her breathing was comparatively easy, and she passed away sweetly as one going to sleep.

Like her Lord and Master, she was made perfect through suffering; but she bore her afflictions with the most murmuring submission to the divine will. I never heard a murmur escape her precious lips. She was of a cheerful, bright nature, and always brought joy and sunshine around our fireside. It was her kiss and smile in the morning that embued our young hearts with the courage to take up the burden of the day; her kind, loving word fell like the dew on parched leaves when we again gathered around her at the close of the day, when toils and cares would be laid aside, and we could bask for awhile in the sunlight of our mother's love. Her life was one of those quiet, undemonstrative lives that threw out its influence like the aroma of a rose—free to all with whom she came in contact. She was one of those living epistles, known of all that she "had been with Jesus." We who were constantly with her, to whom she was at the same time mother, companion, friend—our all in all—and have felt the power of her quiet, prayerful character, realize our great loss. No, not loss; only gone before, for we feel the benediction of her blessed spirit to-day. She has gone to the city of God, where she stands waiting and watching for her loved ones she left behind. And so, our precious mama, we give you up, knowing that when our dear Savior comes to make up his jewels you will be given in that casket of love; for

"I know she is safe on the other side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river, the mystic river,
My mother stands waiting to welcome me."

HER BEREAVED CHILD.

BROCK—Mrs. SARAH BROCK (nee Sloan) was born in Georgia, April 20, 1821; married to the late David Brock, Feb. 20, 1848; joined the M. E. Church South, and moved soon after from Pontotoc county, Ala., to Clarke county, Miss. Settling near Shubuta, she reared her family of children in a community where she was always looked up to as a devout Christian of the old school. She was well versed in Scripture and was in Methodist doctrine. Though loving all Christians, her warmest affection went out toward those of her own household of faith. Her only husband preceded her to the better land many years. She bore her widowhood and its attendant trials with becoming fortitude. Her great effort was to bring her children up in the way of truth. They now rise up to call her blessed.

For some years she suffered almost constantly with an asthmatic affection. Her disease became complicated with heart trouble. For nine months she suffered intensely, but bore it with an uncomplaining spirit. Many times her pastor asked her of her hopes for the future. The answer was prompt and unequivocal. The pathway had been growing brighter. The earthly house was dissolved on Monday night, March 30, 1891. The Golden City dawned on her raptured vision; the building of God not made with hands appeared and clothed in light and beauty unknown to earthly eye.

J. P. DRAKE.

AUSTIN—Bro. H. D. AUSTIN was born in South Carolina, Dec. 17, 1821; died April 1, 1891. He joined the Methodist Church in Tennessee when about eighteen years old; then came to Mississippi, and settled in the neighborhood of Houston, where, in 1850, he married Mrs. M. E. Graves. Afterwards he removed near Mississippi Springs, where he purchased a home. There was no church in the neighborhood; so he told his neighbors he would give the land to build a church on, if they would help him, which they all did. When it was completed he united with that church—Oak Hill—and lived a consistent member.

He was a loving husband and kind father; was beloved by all his neighbors—indeed, they looked on him as a father. When they wanted advice they went to him; for they knew he always gave that which was good. His many relatives and friends gathered at Raymond to see his beloved remains placed away in the cemetery there. Though Bro. Austin died instantaneously, his life was one of devoutness to the God he adored; so to the bereaved we say:

Mourn not for him, loved kindred here;
Altho' your home is sad and drear.
Remember he is now at rest
With God's redeemed, and truly blest.

A loving wife and seven children still survive the deceased. May God comfort and bless them!

J. C. ELLIS, P. C.

LITTLE—RUFUS W. LITTLE, son of W. D. and A. Little, was born in Smith county, Miss., Feb. 8, 1856; came to Louisiana in 1881, and departed this life near Winnfield, March 29, 1891. The writer became Bro. Little's pastor more than four years ago and found in him a true and faithful servant of God. No one who knew him doubted the genuineness of his religion. At a meeting held last Fall in Winnfield by Bro. Mandeville and myself, Bro. Little was one of the number who obtained the experience of entire sanctification. There was a little change in his outer life, but he held on to his profession without wavering till the Master called him home. We grieve not for Bro. Little, but for loved ones left behind.

J. F. WYNN.

GREGORY—CHARLES ROBB, son of H. J. and Lucie R. Gregory, was born April 12, 1890, and died in Koscisko, Miss., March 17, 1891. Beautiful and bright, without knowing sin or sorrow, he has been transferred to "our Father's house" in heaven. By his removal this world becomes less attractive and heaven more desirable. May the God of all consolation supply the need of the bereaved parents forever!

J. T. MOODY.

JETT—Mrs. LOUISA H. JETT, daughter of John and Vicia Knight, and relict of Hamilton Jett, was born in Halifax county, N. C., April 3, 1819, and died in Claiborne county, Miss., Feb. 22, 1891.

She was cradled in a household of faith, in the lap of domestic piety. In early womanhood she remembered her Creator, and sought his pardoning love and regenerating grace. She attached herself to the church of her parents—the Methodist Church—and lived an acceptable member until the day of her death. She leaves a brother and sister. To each of them she left a message of love, and asked them to meet her in heaven. She was the mother of six children—four having preceded her to the better world. She leaves a son and daughter and many grandchildren and several great-grandchildren to mourn their loss. To each she left a parting blessing, with a request not to grieve for her, but to meet her in heaven. Yes, precious mother; by the grace of God, I will meet you there. Her daughter,

KING—Though inscrutable to us, God has removed from our midst our beloved brother and late recording steward of the Benton charge—AARON KING—and it is meet that we express our deep sorrow and mournful consciousness that his place in the Conference, church and community will be difficult to fill.

With quietness, steadfastness and modesty, he had gone on in the discharge of every Christian duty, and in his noble charities exemplified that admonition of our Savior, "Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth." Possessed with unbounded faith, he joined it with works which rendered his character the model Christian, and entitled him to the Master's welcome plaudit: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Bro. King was born on May 20, 1815; joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. W. B. Lewis in 1867; was married to Miss. Lou Fisher April 3, 1873; died Jan. 31, 1891, leaving a wife, seven children, an aged father, one brother, and a host of warm friends to mourn their loss.

McMILLAN—Miss SALLIE MCMILLAN, daughter of W. A. and E. M. McMillan, was born in Holmes county, Miss., July 25, 1865; united with the Methodist Church, 1883, and died at the home of her mother, in Kosciusko, Miss., April 10, 1891. Miss Sallie was naturally cheerful, kind and considerate of the happiness of others. Her merry spirit and gifted powers of conversation drew to her many friends wherever she went. Energetic, happy and sympathetic, she was a welcome visitor in any home. She knew how to encourage the despondent, console the sorrowing, sympathize with the afflicted and befriend the poor.

She was a great sufferer for several months, but her faith in Christ increased daily as she grew weaker, physically. The Lord gave her a fresh baptism of the Spirit and a foretaste of her future inheritance a few days before her death. She preferred to live, but said, "The Lord's will be done." She said, "The Lord is supplying all needed grace, and I can trust him unto the end." May the bereaved loved ones meet her in the better land!

J. T. MOODY.

KING—MARTHA D. KING (nee Wiggins) was born in Franklin parish, La., March 19, 1846; married John M. King, who survives her, May 17, 1866, and died at her home, near the place of her birth, Jan. 10, 1891.

Sister King joined the Methodist Church at twelve years of age and lived a devoted and consecrated Christian life till her demise. She was a niece of the sainted David M. Wiggins, late of the Mississippi Conference. She was mother of nine children—all of whom are still living except one, who "crossed over the river and rests under the shade of the trees" just two months in advance of her.

Sister King "looked well to her household," and by example and precept "trained up her children in the way they should go." The fact is now being demonstrated that her "work in the Lord" was "not in vain," for those of her children who were not members of the church are coming in. May the Lord bless and save the family!

A. W. MOORE.

SPIVEY—MOSES SPIVEY was born in Bertie county, N. C., Feb. 27, 1816, and died in Lincoln parish, La., April 16, 1891. He moved to Dallas county, Ala., in early life, where he was married to Miss Adeline Simms, Oct. 1, 1845, which happy union was terminated by his death. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1841 or 1845, and remained a faithful member of it through life. His place in the sanctuary was never vacant, unless his absence was unavoidable. Even in old age his feeble steps were directed to the house of God, where he so loved to join with the congregation in prayer and praise to him whom his soul so truly loved. He held family prayer from the first of married life till its close, and he loved to lead his family in devotion to God around his own hearthstone.

He died as he lived; his last words being, "Bless the Lord, O my soul!"

"While You Wait."

"Earth has no sorrows that heaven can not heal." "Every one wants to go to heaven, but every one will take a great deal of nasty medicine rather than go." The second quotation may seem, at first sight, a little irreverent, but this is not the case, and both are strictly true. We all cling to life, and most of us are unwilling to leave it. This feeling is perfectly right and natural, and is sanctioned by the highest authority. For those who have taken a great deal of medicine without avail, and for those who wish to avoid doing so, but still desire to be restored to health, we present a few testimonials showing what has been accomplished by the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I was in a miserable condition from a complication of diseases, the most troublesome of which was bronchitis. Your Compound Oxygen Treatment set me up and made a new being of me." MRS. ANNA F. HOUGH, Morgantown, W. Va., April 30, 1889.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I received especial benefit in bronchial trouble, from the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment." MRS. C. W. HILL, Wilkinsonville, Mass., April 27, 1889.

We have many more of these. If you need more evidence, send for our brochure of 200 pages, containing hundreds of testimonials, and giving a history of this wonderful vitalizing agent. No other genuine. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Pelit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Church Organs.

The following letter was received without any solicitation whatever, and explains itself:

FARRAND & VOTEY, Detroit, Mich.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., Jan. 5, 1891.

Farrand & Votey Organ Co.

GENTLEMEN.—After nearly a year of trial of the magnificent organ you erected in our Church, I feel constrained to write to express my unqualified satisfaction with it in every respect. It is not only the finest-looking organ I have ever seen, being a grand ornament to the Church edifice, but the sweetest-toned instrument of the kind I have ever listened to. While it is fully as large as it ought to be, and fills the large audience-room with tones full of majesty, there is not a harsh or rough-sounding pipe in it. On the contrary, it is so soft and truly musical, that to listen to it is an unfailing joy. All our people concur in the above. Yours truly,

H. L. CHAPMAN.
Pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church.

P. S.—Give my regards to Mr. Wood, whose gentlemanly and genial manners, while engaged in erecting the organ, gave us all great pleasure.

Yours, etc.,
H. L. CHAPMAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Of the 2,105 immigrants landed at New York, last Saturday, 1,428 were Italians.

Earthquake shocks are reported from several towns in New Hampshire, occurring on May 1.

The forest fires in the northeastern part of Michigan have already caused a loss of $125,000 to standing timber and logs.

The Knights of Pythias in Little Rock, Ark., are making a determined effort to rid that city of hunco thieves, and to protect visiting Knights from the local gamblers.

May 1—Labor Day—was celebrated very quietly in the large cities of the United States, except at Cleveland, Ohio, where a riot occurred between union and non-union workmen.

The American Pharmaceutical Association, which was in session here last week, adjourned on May 1. The next session will be held at the Crawford House, White Mountains, New Hampshire.

The deputy surveyor of San Francisco made a seizure last week of 1,200 pounds of opium, valued at $25,000. The opium was found concealed on the steamship China, which arrived there from Hong Kong. The owners of the opium claim it was not meant for entry there, but was to be sent to Mexico.

After two weeks of great suffering Rev. Dr. Bothwell, of the Congregation of the Covenant, Brooklyn, died on May 3. The accident which caused his death was the inhaling of a cork. Several surgical operations failed to relieve the sufferer. While in New Orleans he was professor in Strait University for two years, and afterward president of Southern University.

At a meeting of the National Board of control of the World's Fair, on the first, the question of a distinct exhibition at the exposition of the colored people of the country came up. A resolution was adopted that the Board deem it inexpedient to direct or authorize any distinctions to be made between American exhibitors, and that the matter of installation ought to be left to the direction of the department having charge of exhibits.

A movement is on foot by certain delegates to the American Medical Association, which meets in Washington on the eighth, to bring about closer relations between the members of the profession in the American republics. Their position has the cordial indorsement of the Secretary of State and other officials of the government. Resolutions will be offered at the conference, proposing that the American Medical Association extend to the medical profession of the republics and colonies of this hemisphere an invitation to assemble in the United States in an international American medical conference during the Columbian Exposition at Chicago.

FOREIGN.

Fifteen thousands weavers at Brolitz and 2,000 employees at Pesth have been dismissed for being absent from work on May Day.

The May Day (first) celebrations in Europe were less riotous than usual. Violence was exhibited in Lyons, Marseilles and Rome.

A supplementary ballot for a member of the German Reichstag was held in the Gestemunde district on April 30, and Prince Bismarck was elected by a majority of 5,000 votes.

In a letter published on May 1, Cardinal Manning again attacked the Parnellites, classing their action as suicidal, and as being the greatest blow which Ireland could receive.

It has been decided, from motives of economy, that Italy will not take an official part in the Chicago Exposition, to which Americans should take no exception, as Italy took no part in the French Exposition of 1889.

The first meeting of the Royal Labor Commission, appointed to inquire into the relations existing between capital and labor, and into the causes of strikes and the best means to be taken in order to avoid them, took place in London, on May 1.

The prospect of Prince Bismarck's early reappearance in the Reichstag has given an impetus to the government's plan for the conciliation of the various parties so as to render them ready to coalesce in the government's interest.

The Italian premier, Marquis Di Rudini, in his last note regarding the New Orleans affair, has given instructions that no further action should be taken in the matter. He insists on the payment of indemnity to the families of the deceased Italians, and claims that the violation of the existing treaty needs no further proof.

The attendance at the labor meeting in Hyde Park, London, on May 3, is variously estimated at from 200,000 to 300,000. The procession, in connection with the meeting, included workers at all the trades and was miles long. An identical resolution in favor of a compulsory labor day of eight hours was moved on all the platforms.

At Fourmies, France, on Labor Day, during the conflict between the soldiers and the mob, four women, several children and eight men were killed, while twenty persons were seriously wounded. The soldiers were only exposed to the stone throwing, but they replied with successive volleys from their new Lebel rifles, inflicting frightful wounds on their victims.

An attempt is to be made to unite the German and Austrian railway systems by the enactment of common laws and the adoption of common regulations, especially as to the management of the lines, the tariffs for freight and passengers, time tables for through trains, etc. Special attention will be devoted to the arrangement of military and strategic lines with a view to the rapid mobilization of troops in both countries.

When you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to buy some substitute preparation, which clerks may claim is "as good as Hood's." The peculiar merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla can not be equalled. Therefore insist upon Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Cuticura Soap
FOR BAD COMPLEXIONS RED ROUGH HANDS AND BABY HUMORS.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvel as beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.

A Good Cyclopedia.

"The COLUMBIAN CYCLOPEDIA seems to me to strike a happy medium between the loose, superficial works and the too elaborate and profound ones, which few are competent or desirous of using. Most of the larger general cyclopedias are overloaded with a mass of technical science and official detail that is embarrassing and useless to ordinary readers. The COLUMBIAN is eminently practical, sufficiently full, and carefully compiled, well got up, convenient in form and extent, remarkably cheap, and, as I should judge, admirably adapted to families and general consultation. I think that if properly presented to the public, it will have a very wide sale, and be an exceedingly useful work. There is ample room in the market for a Cyclopedia like this, which combines, likewise, the advantage of being an excellent Dictionary of the English Language."—PROF. JAMES STRONG, S. T. hapter Five in the Experience and Observation of a New Presiding Elder.

TRIPS TO ADAMSVILLE.

It was during the closing days of arch, 1890, that I made my first trip Adamsville, Greene county, Miss. ev. D. C. Rawls, a local preacher pplying the Leakesville circuit, was y traveling companion. We went by e river road—that is, the road which ns out from Slate Line seven miles the Chickasawhay, and thence down e river to Adamsville. It was a fa- ite road with Bro. Rawls, as it led Avera's hospitable home. The ods had not yet recovered from the eze of March; yet there were many wers in bloom, and many curious ings peculiar to the piney woods to ract my attention. We spent the ght at Avera's, and pushed on the xt morning to Adamsville, seven les away. I had expected to find a re or two, a blacksmith shop, and eral residences; but, lo! when we t to our destination, there stood a litary log school-house, used for hool and church! It was a well- lit log-house, however, and had sev- l windows supplied with sash, well- ed with good-sized panes of glass. looked lonesome, however, in the idst of the forest of towering pines. t it was clean.

The congregation, Saturday morning, s small, but attentive; and the at- dance of official members was very mmendable. Sunday morning the hool-house was crowded with eager teners, some of whom had ridden re than twenty miles to hear the w presiding elder preach. Seven ildren were baptized; but the sacra- nt of the Lord's Supper could not administered, because of a failure to ovide the wine.

Along in the summer, on our way to akesville and back again, Bro. Rawls d I passed by Adamsville, driving e slowest mule in America. We rked our passage that time. Two les and a quarter an hour was the most speed made by that mule, ether the sun shone or the rain fell. d I did not blame the mule when I rned that she was, at least, five years when the war began! Thirty-five mmers had thickened her hide, and irty-five winters had stiffened her nts!

Once again, last year, did we take dsmsville in our itinerancy, and that s when returning from the fourth uarterly Conference (which was held Vernal). We—Bro. Rawls and his fe in one buggy, and the promising ung exhorter, R. G. Williams, and rself in another—had left Vernal, onday afternoon, in time to reach akesville for preaching that night. e had quenched our thirst at the fa- ous Vernal Springs, whose waters ntain sulphur and iron and other nerals in healing proportions, ac- rding to a formula of the Great Phy- ian; supper and service at Leakes- lle, and rest that night and breakfast e next morning, and we passed the damsville School-house just in time put us at Bro. Theo. Platt's home r dinner and a cordial welcome. ate Line was reached just as "twi- ght let her curtain down and pinned with a star."

April 11 and 12, of this year, found e at Adamsville again. The congre- gation was not so large as on the first occasion, for nearly all the men in that sparsely settled neighborhood were on "the river," floating timber to Moss Point. But there were enough men to pay their proportion of assessment for the support of the Bishops, the presiding elder's quarterage in full, and give the preacher a start on the third quarter's salary. There were enough men there to agree to build a house in which to worship God, and which shall be set apart from all unhallowed and common uses. Only ten members of our church at Adamsville, and yet they propose and purpose to build a church! One man will give all the lumber, and he is not a rich man, either. Another man, not a church member, gives the land. "Don't write any 'Energy letter' about us," said one brother; "just let us know what we ought to do, and we will do it, or try our best." And he meant it, and so do they all. Only a handful; yet they love the Lord, and they love his cause. In the grace of liberality they abound, and are examples to the membership elsewhere. May God bless them, and give unto them increased prosperity! Like the Vossburgh brethren, they are disappointed when a collection is not taken up; and, like the Vossburgh brethren, they have got religion, and love the church.

Bro. Howse wrote about the high water and some other matters; but he failed to tell how his presiding elder involuntarily "played turtle" by slipping off a log into a spring branch, and had to be dried before he could go to church Sunday morning. There was a c ash und a splash, for heavy was the fall; but no bones were broken, nor dignity hurt.

T. L. MELLEN.

Who Was Melchizedek?

Some one asks in the ADVOCATE, "Who was Melchizedek?" This question has often been asked, and variously answered. Not much has been said in the Bible about this man, and but little about his character. The question may be more curious than profitable, and yet, perhaps, it has been started in the mind of every Bible reader.

Reading between the lines of what is said about him in the Word of God, it appears that Melchizedek was a righteous, peace-loving king, who lived in Salem, and ruled the country lying around that site. It is probably, if not positively, true that Salem, the capital city of Melchizedek's empire, occupied the same site where Jerusalem was afterwards built. In addition to being a king, Melchizedek was also a "priest of the most high God," and this made him a fit representative of Christ, who is, at once, our Priest and our King.

It will be well to note that "Melchizedek was called of God to be a priest," and that, too, long before the Aaronic priesthood had been established—long before Aaron was born. Perhaps there had been many priests after this order before Moses and Aaron came on the stage; but, by character and kingly authority, Melchizedek was the most noted of them all.

When Abraham was returning, or had returned, from the slaughter of the five kings at the valley of Shaveh, the King of Sodom and Melchizedek went out to meet him. The King of Sodom asked for the persons Abraham had taken, and Melchizedek blessed Abraham, and praised God for the great and decisive victory that had been gained. Melchizedek prayed for Abraham, and, doubtless, offered sacrifices for him—at least, he made a thank-offering of "bread and wine." Because Melchizedek was a "priest of the most high God, Abraham gave him a tenth part of all the spoils" taken in that war. It is to be noted, because so stated, that Melchizedek was not a priest by virtue of birth or inheritance, for, so far as the priesthood was concerned, "he had neither father nor mother;" was without a priestly pedigree (see margin), and there was no beginning and would be no end of this kind of a priesthood. He was not born a priest, but was called to be one. In this respect the priesthood of Melchizedek and of Christ are alike. Melchizedek was before the Aaronic priesthood, and "Christ came of the tribe of Judah, of which tribe nothing had been spoken concerning the priesthood." Neither of these priests had a priestly pedigree. They stepped out from among men at the call of God, and entered upon this office and work without orders or ordination. This puzzled the Jews. They could not accept Christ as their priest, because he was not of the tribe of Levi, nor of the family of Aaron. They had so long been accustomed to priests of this order, of this tribe and family, that it seemed profane to talk of a priest from any other tribe or family. They thought that the "most high God" had forever shut himself up to one tribe and to one family, to one order, for agents to carry on his work. Now, Paul in writing, specially for the Jews, shows that Christ is a priest after the order of Melchizedek, and not after the order of Aaron. He was not born into the priesthood, but was called of God to it. Now, if your father Abraham recognized and honored a priest by divine special appointment, will it hurt you to do just what he did? The priesthood of Christ is not Aaronic, but Melchizedekian—not of an order, but by a divine call. The objection made to Christ would not have been raised against John the Baptist, for John was in the line of succession. John's father was a priest. It is worth considering that the forerunner of the new was a successor of the old order, and that the new had the initial washing of water of the old, and thus "fulfilled the righteousness of the law." The divine anointing and words of divine appointing followed immediately after this legal ceremony.

This old family question—this question of order concerning Christ—does not come up among us now; but we have questions of exactly the same kind—questions of succession, of orders, of ordinances, and of ordinations. "You are not a church, because you are not of the right line, have not the right orders, and no factual succession, and no succession of baptism." So say many. Well, we don't want any succession. It is not worth much—not half as much as a divine call to do a special work, and the divine approval and blessing in that work. We don't care anything about the family of Aaron and the tribe of Levi, just so we are called of God after the order of Melchizedek and of Christ. We had rather have the divine call than all the pedigrees in the world. God has not shut himself up to a pedigree, to a tribe, to a family, to an order, to an organization, nor to the mode of an ordinance. The spirit of Judaism may undertake to limit "the most high God" this way; but he calls out a new people now, just as he called Melchizedek and Christ.

Preachers in Debt.

There is an item in the tenth letter to the young preacher, in the ADVOCATE of April 2, which ought to be stressed and emphasized more and more. The evil of a preacher's going in debt is one far too common. It may be he is sometimes deluded into it. For aught I know, the devil sends him strong delusion to believe a lie, that he may be damned. The Board of Stewards apportions to him his salary, and very naturally he proceeds to base his living, his current expenses, upon said salary. The stewards may fail, by a considerable per cent., to collect the amount; but the preacher's debt is made to aggregate the sum total, and he has nothing wherewith to pay. The Board of Stewards may cancel their obligation by collecting to the extent of their ability, and the preacher is left solely responsible for the debt. It avails literally nothing for him to say the church failed to pay him; therefore, he can't pay others. That debt injures the preacher, leaves a blot on his fair name, mars and defaces his character, and leaves defective that which ought to be symmetrical and uniform. Such debt paralyzes the preacher's influence. He may just as well dart straws against the wind as to preach to the man he owes, and has failed or neglected to pay. That man may forget some things, but he will never live long enough to forget the preacher that owes him. The very first thing he thinks of when he hears the preacher is dead is that unpaid debt.

A preacher, leaving Louisiana for Texas, said to a friend: "Lend me another hundred dollars, and you shall have your money if I have to sell the shirt off my back to pay it." When that friend heard the preacher was dead, he said, "Both shirt and money are gone." Furthermore, such a debt throws a gloom over the pathway of the preacher's descending day, like the pall of night, simply horrifying to think of. Furthermore, that debt reflects upon all the other brethren of the ministry.

Long years ago I was utterly at a loss to know why a hostess of a hotel hemmed and hawed and hesitated about taking me and my family to board. Finally, she out with the secret: "Did you know Mr. Jones? He was the preacher here last year, and boarded with me three months; left, and never paid his bill." So I suffered, and so the rest of the brethren suffer. "Whereas one member of the body suffers, all the members suffer with it."

But what is to be done? Is there no remedy? Yes; let the preacher assume the responsibility of his own indebtedness. Let him resolve to live within the limit, not of the stewards' apportionment, but of what is actually collected and paid to him. Paul's example is worthy of imitation. Though he had a model Board of Stewards, being full of wisdom and the Holy Ghost, yet he assumed the responsibility of paying his own debts, and resolved to eat no man's bread for naught. His board-bill must be paid, if at the expense of his own personal labor. This method may cost the preacher a rigid course of economy. It may cost him, now and then, a scant living, and many painful misgivings. It may cost him the embarrassment of a seedy appearance, humiliating to his pride; but all this is infinitely more than repaid in a consciousness that he owes no man anything.

The late Bishop Marvin, always wise in counsel, said, "Better wear patches seven deep than to go in debt." The question is, Can it be done? Yes; there are many faithful men who have traveled circuits—big circuits, poor circuits—on meager salaries all their lives, and have reported at the goal clear of debt. What these did, others may.

In the solution of this problem the preacher's wife comes to his rescue, and renders him help that will never be fully appreciated till the Lord places the star in her crown of rejoicing. When I see the self-sacrificing wife, to save her husband from debt, turning the well-worn dress top side down and inside out, and, by a little touch of art in style, coming from the fiery ordeal as bright as newly refined gold, without the smell of fire on her garments, I feel like saying, "God bless that noble woman!"

The preacher who says debt is inevitable had better quit! If debt prohibits a preacher entering the itineracy, it should prohibit his staying in it. Shall we not wake up to the importance of avoiding this church evil? Let the Board of Stewards resolve to do more. Let the preacher resolve to be faithful to his vows, at all hazards, and let the people, saint and sinner, bear in mind that their quiet homes, their civil and religious liberties, all are blessings consequent upon a preached gospel, and that the preacher is worthy of his hire.

Views of Our Bishops.

The Independent has published the opinions of nearly one hundred Bishops on the question of opening the Columbian Exposition on Sunday. We give below the answers given by our Bishops.

Bishop Keener: As to the question, "whether the gates of the Columbus Exposition should be opened on Sunday," surely there can be but one answer. The marked contrast with other world-famed expositions would enable it to show, by the act itself, that the observance of the Christian Sabbath was the one true basis of our success as a nation, industrial and moral.

Bishop Wilson: My convictions are profound that the best interests of the people of our country require that the gates of the National Columbus Exposition be closed on the Lord's day. Quite enough has been conceded to the godless sentiment of the land and to the reckless spirit which would break down every defense of a pure morality and efface every reminder of our relations to God. It is but little to ask that, in an event of national moment, and which is to serve as an exponent of our character to other countries, there should be a decent recognition of the God whose hand has been so conspicuous in our affairs from the discovery and settlement of the country to the present time.

Bishop Granbery: My conviction is that the National Columbus Exposition should not be open on Sunday, because it would be a violation of God's law, because the observance of Sunday as a day of rest and worship is important to the highest material and moral interests of the people, and because a national disregard of the day would outrage the sentiments of the majority of the citizens of the United States, a majority including a very large portion of the intelligence, patriotism and virtue of the country.

Bishop Hargrove: The Sabbath is an institution established by God for man as man, and, therefore, binding universally and perpetually. Communities, corporations and States can not annul the divine law that applies to all individuals.

For the gates of the National Columbus Exposition to be opened on Sunday would be a sin against God and our holy Christianity.

Bishop Duncan: I am fully convinced that the precious interests of religion and public morality demand the closing of the gates of the Exposition on Sunday. The nation can not afford to have its Christian Sabbath, its holy day, changed into a holiday. For our people to lose the idea of the sanctity of the Sabbath would be an irreparable loss. The observance of the "Lord's day" as a day "blessed and hallowed of the Lord"—as a special season for communion with the Father of Spirits, as a respite from worldly dissipation, work and worry—is demanded by the whole man, spirit, mind and body. Such an observance is a guarantee, a national safeguard not to be substituted by anything else. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy" is indispensable to the integrity of any and every form of government, whether theocratic, monarchic, or democratic. The world can never outgrow the command, its need and consequent benefits. The command can not be obeyed in letter or spirit by the individual or nation and the hours of the Sabbath be employed in running a National Exposition in whole or part.

May these in authority be so graciously guided in their decision as not to offend the public sentiment of the land, which, I feel assured, is largely in favor of closed doors on Sunday.

Bishop Galloway: I most earnestly favor closing the gates of the National Columbian Exposition on Sunday. Public morals, the history and traditions of our nation, the interests of the working people, the respect for the Christian religion—the common law of our country—alike demand it.

I most profoundly believe in the Sabbath as a divine institution of universal and perpetual obligation. It has been aptly and wisely said that the "supremacy of the Word of God and the sanctity of the day of God, are the two keys which command the church's position" in the world and for all ages. But apart from its divine institution as a spiritual agency and verity—a memorial of the world's Creator and Redeemer—a symbol and prophecy of the eternal rest of the skies, the Sabbath has social and civil significance and potency that enthrone it as "the lord of days." For the great moral ends of society in our country the day has been subjected to statutory regulations. Not to make men religious, not to compel attendance upon any church service, not to command the adoption of any particular creed, not to force any one to spend the day in saying prayers and singing psalms, but to conserve the civil interests of government—its moral, commercial, industrial and social welfare. Sunday is a civil day; with its religious observance the law has nothing to do. As a citizen, therefore, rather than a churchman, I believe the Exposition management should close the gates on the Sabbath. Not to do so would infract the statute law of Illinois, outrage the moral sense of the nation, and surrender what the Earl of Beaconsfield called "the cornerstone of civilization."

It has occurred to me also that for the salutary influence our properly observed national Sabbath might have on foreign countries represented here, we should the more carefully guard against its desecration. De Tocqueville once said to an American gentleman: "France must have your Sabbath, or she is ruined." That these countries may have our Sabbath, they must see it.

Bishop Hendrix: It is the Christian Sabbath which makes our land worth coming to a place of residence; and it would be unwise, unpatriotic and unchristian to consent to its violation by the opening of the doors of the Columbian Exposition. We have not a single instance of a successful exposition, from a financial standpoint, which has ignored the sentiments of the American people on the observance of the Sabbath. The St. Louis Exposition, in the midst of a large foreign population, has kept its doors closed on the Sabbath and has succeeded, commanding the respect and support of the very population which at first clamored for a Continental Sabbath in America. The strength of our republic is its conscience on moral questions. Destroy that and we may expect anarchy!

Bishop Key: The Sabbath I regard as an institution of God—a holy day. Its proper observance is of supreme obligation. Hence a Christian nation should scrupulously guard and keep its divinely ordained Sabbath.

God's will is always man's interest. To keep the holy day free from labor and dissipation must, therefore, be best for man and beast.

With these views fixed and dominating, I am from principle and policy opposed to opening the gates of the Columbian Exposition on the Lord's day.

Bishop Haygood: As to the Exposition and Sunday I believe:

1 That the clamor for Sunday opening is not in the interest of the laboring poor, but of gate receipts and of idle people who wish for easy and cheap amusements on the Sabbath.

2. That the laboring poor will constitute the minority of Sunday visitors.

3. That the loss of reverence for the holy day will hurt the laboring poor more than the loss of a thousand expositions.

4. That if the laboring poor can see the Exposition on Sunday only it is due to the greed of employers.

5. And that if the rich give the laboring poor only Sunday to visit the Exposition, then they are mean and criminal.

Bishop Fitzgerald: I think it would be an unwise, hurtful and gratuitous surrender to open our National Exposition on Sunday. This is a Christian nation, and our visitors will esteem us none the less for maintaining a consistent position on this question.

Let us not carry the excitement and security of the Exposition into the Holy Sabbath, but rather let the Christian people of all denominations in Chicago open wide their church doors, make adequate special provision for religious services for the multitudes who will be there, and thus utilize the occasion for the promotion of the glory of God and the brotherhood of man.

Notes.

We want all our young preachers to cut out the following advice, and paste it on the cover of their pocket book:

Buy nothing till you can pay for it, and buy nothing that you do not need.

That pious theologian's advice in regard to preparation of sermons will bear iterated repetition: "Prepare elaborately, thoroughly, as though there were no Holy Spirit to own and bless. Then preach, depending on the Holy Spirit, as though you had made no preparation."

Meditate on this picture from Krummacher: "Unbelief does nothing but darken and destroy. It makes the world a moral desert, where no divine footsteps are heard, where no angels ascend and descend, where no living hand adores the fields, feels the birds of heaven, or regulates events."

Dr. Glenn, of Macon, Ga., rightly remarks:

A Christian who is opposed to missions, opposed to foreign missions, has the wrong name; there are no such Christians. The man who is not in favor of foreign missions is not in favor of Christ and his work, for he was essentially a foreign missionary—the Messiah.

Says Longfellow:

"Live, live in the living present."

To do so seems so sensible. But it is difficult, nevertheless. The young live in the future. The old, in the past. The middle-aged live so fiercely objectively that they are subjectively entombed. Stop, brother. You are better than your affairs.

Claus Harms, the founder of a successful missionary society, supporting now more than a hundred missionaries, says in his "Talks:" "One day, having got prepared a sermon, depending on the general knowledge of the subject, I prayed that God would give me the unction of the Holy One. But ere I reached the 'Amen!' in my prayer, my consciousness perceived divine reply: 'Claus, you're a lazy wight. First prepare a sermon of which you are not ashamed. Then ask me to bless it.'"

Apropos! A number of ministers of different denominations in New York City and vicinity, including Dr. Henry J. Van Dyke (Presbyterian), Dr. J. M. Buckley (Methodist), Dr. J. B. Remensnyder (Lutheran), Dr. R. S. McArthur (Baptist), and Dr. T. S. Doolittle (Reformed Dutch), have signed a memorial to the Committee on International Sunday-school Lessons, asking the committee "to recognize, at least, Christmas, Easter and Whitsunday by the appointment of lessons appropriate to those seasons." Some of the signers limit their request to Christmas and Easter. There is a tendency in all the churches to the observance of Christmas and Easter.

We had hoped that with the introduction of our new standard hymn book the hymnological confusion would cease. That confusion has been worse than Babylonian. But the following note seems to indicate that chaos has not yet been overcome. Here is the note:

MR. EDITOR: I see in the program for May, to be used by the Woman's Missionary Society, that neither of the hymns selected is found in our hymn book. Should not they be selected, in every instance, from our own collection of hymns? Fraternally,

HYMN TO THE FLOWERS.

BY HORACE SMITH.

Day stars that ope your eyes with morn, to twinkle
From rainbow galaxies of earth's creation,
And dewdrops on her lowly altars sprinkle
As a libation!

Ye matin worshippers, who, bending lowly
Before the uprisen sun, God's fidless eye,
Throw from your chalices a pure and holy Incense on high!

Ye bright mosaics that with storied beauty
The floor of nature's temple tessellate,
What numerous emblems of instructive duty
Your forms create!

In the sweet scented pictures, heavenly Artist,
With which thou paintest nature's wide spread hall,
What a delightful lesson thou impartest
Of love to all!

Not useless are ye, flowers though made for pleasure
Blooming in field and wood by day and night;
From every source your presence bids me treasure
Harmless delight.

"Thou wert not, Solomon, in all thy glory
Arrayed," the lilies cry, "in robes like ours;
How vain your grandeur! ah, how transitory
Are human powers!"

'Neath cloistered boughs each floral bell that swingeth
And tolls its perfume on the passing air,
Makes Sabbath in the fields, and ever ringeth
A call to prayer.

Not to the dome, where crumbling arch and column
Attest the feebleness of mortal hand,
But to the fane most catholic and solemn,
Which God hath planned:

To the cathedral, boundless as our wonder,
Whose quenchless lamps the sun and moon supply,
Its choir the winds and waves, its organ thunder
Its dome the sky.

There, as in solitude and shade I wander
Through the green isles, or, stretched along the sod,
Awed by the silence, reverently ponder
The ways of God.

Your voiceless lips, O flowers, are living preachers,
Each cup a pulpit, every leaf a book,
Supplying to my fancy numerous teachers
From loneliest nook.

Ephemeral sages! What instructors hoary
For such a world of thought could furnish scope?
Each fading calyx a memento mori,
Yet fount of hope!

Posthumous glories, angel-like collection,
Upraised from seed or bulb interred in earth,
Ye are to me a type of resurrection
And second birth.

Floral apostles, that in dewy splendor
Weep without woe and blush without a crime,
O, let me deeply learn and never surrender
Your love sublime!

Were I, O God! in churchless lands remaining,
Far from all voice of teachers or divines,
My soul would find in flowers of thy ordaining
Priests, sermons, shrines.

Our Revised Hymn Book.

I have been reading, with some care, our revised hymn book. And I am free to say that the committee have performed their work with judgment and taste. They have not only given us a book of sacred poetry of the choicest kind, but have adapted the hymns, most appropriately, to religious worship. It is certainly a superior edition of our collection of sacred songs, and quite an improvement on our former hymn book; and I considered that an improvement on previous editions. Though changes are not always improvements, experience should develop a hymnal adapted to the best uses of divine worship. Though the work meets with due commendation, yet as I read along I observed some places where corrections might be properly made with advantage to the poetry and to the hymns. In the first copy I received I met with some typographical errors, but they have been corrected in subsequent editions. On first opening the book the titles of the hymns were conspicuously absent, with no index to subjects or text references; but when I had the privilege of examining Dr. Tillett'e annotated edition, these deficiencies were fully met. Dr. Tillett deserved and has received the commendations of the church for his admirable work. Every preacher should have a copy. He should have all the aid possible in order to facilitate his work, and to save time in selecting appropriate hymns for religious service. Inappropriate hymns—hymns not suited to the subject of the discourse or to the occasion—will invariably mar the beauty of the service. A minister on a certain occasion preached a farewell sermon to his congregation, and thought that he had delivered an appropriate discourse with a favorable impression. He called on a brother present to conclude the service, when, opening the book, he selected a hymn for the baptism of a child. This, of course, rendered the service ridiculous. There is much in appropriateness, and I would advise every young preacher to study our hymn book, and not leave his hymns to be selected at hap-hazard. The author's name is most appropriately appended at the close of hymn, and in small type. Another improvement, I will gladly mention, is the putting of the number of the page at the bottom and not at the top of the page, thereby, to some extent, preventing the preacher in giving both the number of the hymn and of the page. This should never be done. It produces confusion, and the number of the hymn only should be announced.

I will now call attention to the notes I made while reading the hymn book.

In No. 41, 2nd stanza, 2nd and 3rd lines, thine should be thy. This is not grammatically incorrect, but the change would render the reading smoother and preserve uniformity in the use of the prenoun.

In No. 49, 4th stanza, 2nd line, and should be or. The line is, "Whence all our hope and comfort springs."

In No. 51, 5th stanza, 4th line, "To celebrate our God" would be improved by writing it, "In honor of our God."

In No. 52, 2nd stanza, 2nd line, thine should be thy to preserve uniformity. For the same reason thine should be thy in 4th line of the 1st stanza of No. 66.

In No. 311, 3rd stanza, 4th line, "Let me learn or help me learn" is preferable to "make me learn," as make savors too much of Calvinism.

In No. 462, 1st stanza, 6th line, "one step enough for me," put step's or make a dash after step. Poetical license may be allowed.

In No. 568, 3rd stanza, 4th line is, "And follow thee where'er thou go," change to "And follow thee where thou may'st go." In the same number, 5th stanza, 3rd line, "Shall I be found," is not a question—if so, the point is omitted. Write it "I shall."

In 589, I do not think the sentiment correct, which reads,

"The dreary regions of the dead,
When all things are forgot."

In 592 is this line correct?—"To meet a joyful doom." The principal meanings of doom are condemnation, judicial sentence, fate, destiny, ruin, destruction, etc. How can such a doom be joyful?

That beautiful hymn of Phœbe Cary—No. 605—is marked as irregular. It might have been altered to make it regular without marring its beauty.

I think No. 648, "O mother dear, Jerusalem," should have been omitted, as No. 649 expresses about the same in sentiment, and is a much better hymn.

In No. 682, 3rd stanza, 4th line reads, "Hew firm our hope, our comforts, stands." It is grammatically incorrect. It may be corrected by omitting the comma after comforts, and write comfort.

In No. 752, 2nd stanza, 1st line reads, "Through thee we now together came." It may be corrected by putting all for now. "Through thee we all together came," retaining came to rhyme with name.

In No. 896, 1st stanza, 3rd line, Father should be Savior, as Christ has gone to prepare a place for us, and especially as Father is used in the 3rd stanza.

The refrain in 900 is quite objectionable. It reads,

"Then palms of victory, crowns of glory,
Palms of victory I shall wear."

It is not to be supposed that a saint in heaven will wear more than one crown, and palms are not worn, but borne. Better thus:

"Then palms of victory! crowns of glory!
Palms of victory we shall bear."

or thus:

"Then crowns of glory! palms of victory!
Crowns of glory we shall wear."

In No. 910, 3rd stanza, 3rd line, put brightest for their bright, as this would correct the measure, and produce smoothness in the singing.

I see that the committee uses O universally, which is proper with but few exceptions. To make a distinction in the use of oh and O, oh! should be used in such expressions as, "But oh! eternity's too short," and O in such as, "When all thy mercies, O my God."

In No. 756, first stanza, third line, "O do not our suit disdain"—to correct the measure and to make it read smoothly, write, "Do not now our suit disdain."

In No. 805, fourth stanza, fourth line, change thine to thy for smoothness and uniformity.

No. 852 should not have a place in our hymn book—

"While on others thou art calling,
Do not pass me by."

This has in it a strong vein of Calvinism. Jesus never passes by anyone; all are invited to come to Christ for pardon.

The refrain to No. 864 is objectionable. In singing the second line the word blest must be sung as if it were two syllables. Substitute bleeding, as this would meet the measure, and be more expressive in connection with the sufferings of Christ. In the third line we have a violation of a rule of our language. It should read, "At thy cross I humbly bow."

I am surprised that No. 865 should have been accepted without some emendations. The expressions, "In some way or other" and "At some time or other," are neither correct nor elegant. It would have been better to repeat, "In some way, in some way," than to have used the words "or other."

I meet with such expressions frequently. It is one of those forms that persons get in the habit of using—one following another. I will give you a few examples:

"Somewhere or other" (Geo. McDonald). If a thing is somewhere, it can not be any other where. "Some how or other" (Irving and N. Ad.) "Some kind of knowledge or other" (McGuffey's Fifth Reader). "Some one or other" (N. Ad.). "In some form or other" (Times of Ref.). "Some how or other" (Scribner's Mag.). "Some accident or other" (Chambers' U. S. H.). "Some day or other" (Nash. Ad.). "Some how or other" (Qr. Review). "Some way or other" (Dr. Watson). "Some form or other" (Christian at Work), etc.

In some of the tune books the chorus,

"At the cross, at the cross,
Where I first saw the light,
And the burden of my heart rolled away,
It was there by faith I received my sight,
And now I am happy all the day," is attached to the hymn commencing, "Alas! and did my Savior bleed." It is not at all appropriate, as the chorus represents a Christian rejoicing in Christ, and the hymn represents a sinner struggling for salvation. It would suit the hymn commencing, "Amazing grace! (how sweet the sound!)," and be very appropriate in that connection.

I have not called attention to the above emendations in the spirit of captiousness, but with the desire to have our hymn book as complete and as perfect as possible. Fraternally,

Grenada District Conference.

The twenty-first session of the Grenada District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Coffeeville, Miss., May 1, nine o'clock A. M. Rev. Dr. Price, P. E., presided and enquired after those interests of the church which are properly reviewed by that body. Not many conversions, since the Annual Conference, were reported. Eight or ten young local preachers were reported who are preparing for the work of the itinerant ministry. The building and improving of churches have not been neglected. The churches in Grenada and Water Valley have been greatly improved, the church in Oxford is being built, three new churches have been built—one on the Charleston circuit, and one on the Carrollton circuit, while many have been improved throughout the district. The parsonages also have had part in the good work of improvement, and Coffeeville has a new one. The Conference collections are as well up as I have known them at this season. One charge—Minter City—reported all paid, and others some paid and "all provided for." Dr. Price said he had made a careful estimate, and the district was twenty-five per cent. in advance of last year, this time, in all its financial interests. Three charges were not represented—one because of the illness of our brother, R. M. Davis. He was remembered in the prayers of the brethren. The preaching of the brethren was of a high order and profitable to all who heard.

Wm. M. Mitchell, R. W. Jones, H. L. Fly and Leven Lake were elected delegates to the next session of the Annual Conference. T. J. Brown and B. F. Saunders are alternates. The Conference will convene at Charleston next year. I send herewith the reports on Church Literature and Education. The hospitality of Coffeeville was charming. I am indebted to Capt. Wynne for a most delightful home. THOS. J. NEWELL, Sec.

CHURCH LITERATURE.

Your Committee on Church Literature beg leave to present the following report for your consideration and adoption:

We point with just pride to the index finger that indicates the pathway of success followed by "the heroic fathers of a heroic past" along the line of church literature. From the halls of Oxford there went forth to the battle as grand an organizing genius as the world has ever known. The stupendous results of a little more than a hundred years of work—results phenomenal to the last degree—were won not by prestige, nor yet by the mere force of a "fortuitous circumstance," but by the wisely-planned and well-directed efforts of our fathers to put the formulas of their creed into the heads as the quickening Spirit of God, the informing and renewing power shaped it—as cast into the moulds of truth—into expressions of life for the hearts of the people.

The history of a people is the history of the literature of that people. If this be so, then it follows as a conclusion of the understanding that a people without literature is a people without a history. This is as true of church people as it is of the people of the State.

Again, the progress of a people is a history of the progress of the thought of that people. The thought of man is the expression of the mind in action. Action speaks of life, and life gives expression to all forms.

Methodism, as the truest and best interpretation of the divine philosophy the world knows of—so we think—repudiates the narrow and superstitious notion that organization produces life; but, on the contrary, she emphasizes with the certainty of consciousness that life makes organization. The Methodist literature, through all its grades, from the standards to the infant catechism, and from the ably edited Review to the simple statements in Our Little People, should be instinct with the life and presence of this divinely articulated law of life. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he," is a statement from a source whose authority to speak will not be questioned by anyone of us. Then, as we look into it a little closer, we see the same truth put in a little different form, viz.: "A man is as his doctrinal belief." If, therefore, we want strong Methodists, we put into them the strong doctrinal statements of what Methodists believe and teach. "Go teach" is our sole warrant of authority for trying to be and to do. Then let our literature express positively and distinctly our creed; then, and not till then, will Methodism be the exponent of an ecclesiastical system whose power equals the sum of all the terms in the equation of the spiritual universe. We are in hearty sympathy with the spirit of our Methodist pulpit of to-day in the stress which it lays on the law of the Spirit of life in the soul, rather than the law of forms of life as expressed in the ritual. We rejoice in the fact that we see no mourners at our altars lamenting the missing links in our chain of apostolic succession. But Methodists, when challenged to present their God-given credentials, answer by the Holy Ghost:

"What we have felt and seen,
With confidence we tell,
And publish to the sons of men,
The signs infallible."

Still, we insist upon our people taking a high stand in all that pertains to the glory and well-being of our beloved church.

We commend our Review, the Nashville Advocate and our own organ, the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, to our people as the best literature for our people. We also commend our Sunday-school literature for its many points of excellence; but ask you to adopt the following:

Resolved, That our Sunday-school literature should be more pronounced in presenting the fundamental doctrines of Methodism in order that our children may be taught the way of God more perfectly.

Resolved, We most heartily commend our Conference colporteur, Rev. G. W. Bachman, to our people, and hope that he may be assisted in his important work in the distribution of our literature among our people.

EDUCATION.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

The Grenada Collegiate Institute, of which our brother, T. J. Newell, A. M., is president, continues to do honest and thorough work. It is not receiving the support from our people which it justly deserves. We are glad to note the generosity of the citizens of Grenada toward this institution, having recently raised the sum of two thousand dollars for the equipping of the school. In the midst of these hard times, and though other causes are being crowded upon our attention, we should not forget the collection ordered by the Annual Conference in behalf of this school.

If our preachers would send to the president the names of all parents having daughters to educate, it would, doubtless, enable him to secure a larger attendance of pupils. This is made the more imperative by reason of the recent establishment of a free school of high grade in the town of Grenada, which has diminished the local patronage to a considerable degree.

We ought always to remember that this is our school, and that we are in duty bound to give its president our sympathy and support; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge upon our people, and especially upon pastors, to redouble their efforts in behalf of this institution, and that we shall not cease laboring in this direction until our school shall reach a high degree of prosperity and be an honor to our Conference and State.

Millsaps College.

We are glad to have had with us Rev. A. F. Watkins, agent Millsaps College, and to hear from him of its favorable outlook. Of the fifty thousand dollars which the Methodists of the State proposed to raise, thirty-four thousand dollars have been paid, and there are subscriptions and notes to the amount of twenty-three or four thousand from which to secure the remaining eixteen thousand dollars. We urge our people to pay these endowment notes, and thus put this money to work for our Mississippi Methodist Male College.

By terms of the compact entered into by us with the Mississippi Annual Conference on the subject of a male college in our State, we are bound to acquiesce in action of Board of Trustees in locating it in the city of Jackson. While some of us did not prefer this city as the site of our college, yet this place having been chosen by the lawfully constituted authority, the only honorable thing we can do is to rally to Millsaps College and strive to make it the pride and glory of our Mississippi Methodism. There should be no friction, no holding back, no indifference; but, on the other hand, a generous and enthusiastic support; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we endorse the action of the Board of Trustees in locating Millsaps College in the city of Jackson, and that we do hereby pledge ourselves to do all in our power in its behalf.

Resolved, That we invite Rev. A. F. Watkins, agent, to visit our charges to present its claims to our people.

Resolved, That we request the trustees to obtain from the Legislature such an amendment of the charter of the college as will forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors within five miles of the college. S. D. LONG, Colportage.

Our projected system of colportage is about as complete a scheme for the distribution of our books and periodicals as can be devised. The only trouble is in getting it into operation. The Discipline provides for—

An Annual Conference Colportage Board.

A general colporteur to each Conference.

A book depository in each Conference.

The maximum rate of discount on the books of the Publishing House to the Conference depositories.

Though not provided for in the Discipline, this scheme contemplated the employment of many sub-colporteurs, or book agents, by the general colporteurs—at least one in every presiding elder's district. The object is to get our publications into the homes of the people, and not to wait for the people to call at our depositories and get them. It is well known that many thousands of people are going from house to house canvassing for books of comparatively little intrinsic value, and that fortunes running into the millions are built up by publishers of books so sold. If this is done with high-priced and comparatively worthless books, it ought to be done with cheap and good books, carried to homes already in lively sympathy with book, publisher, and agent.

Here is our plan, then—to so distribute the books in Conference depositories that they can be delivered to subagents readily and at small cost for carriage, the depositories giving the distributing agents the same discounts that would be given them by the Publishing House; these canvassing agents to take these books into every home, letting none escape. In membership with our church, and co-operating with us, there must be more than a quarter of a million families. Now, suppose we could put one good book and one of our church papers into each of these families, what an immense gain that would be!—a gain not so much in money, though that is not to be ignored, but a gain in intelligence, in awakened interest, and quickened sympathies, that would be felt in every activity of the church.

This is not a new device, but the original plan for carrying our literature to the people. In the early days all our preachers did just what we now want special agents to do. If we get this plan in operation, the preachers, in the main, will be the distributing agents again. But there are places where it is not practicable now for the preachers to do such work. This is the day of the specialist, and we want the book agent with special fitness and fittedness for his work. He is to be had. Other publishers find him. The truth is, other publishers have already trained him to our hand in almost every village and neighborhood in all our borders. We want to use him. We can use him. It is a practicable thing. We hope the brethren in all our Conferences will take hold of this matter at once, and give an impetus to our publishing interests, and through them to all the enterprises of the church, that in a very short time will change the face of our whole table of statistics.

BARBEE & SMITH, Agents.

Our Superannuates, Widows and Orphans.

If we—who are in health and generally paid enough to provide either bread or meat, and sometimes both—need our scanty stipend monthly, it seems to me that those whose lives have been spent in our service, and for whom such meagre provision is made, would need their pay oftener than once a year.

Here is a brother who has received his thirtieth appointment. He goes to one of those works which the wisdom of our church supplies with those who are deemed either too young or too old to be effective. By patient care and rasping economy he and his faithful wife live. The extreme sympathy of his brethren at the District Conference give him his first knowledge that he is, perhaps, serving his last charge. The solemn hour spent around the parsonage fireside on Saturday night of the fourth quarterly meeting strengthened these suspicions, and the tender words of the presiding elder on the second day of Conference assure him that the inevitable has come.

By our present plans the church offers him no aid until the close of the ensuing Conference year. The old man, feeble, broken in health and disqualified for active labors, looks forward to a twelvemonth of wretched suffering, during which every crumb must either be begged or bought on credit.

My brethren, these things ought not to be. Can we not pay the salaries of these brethren quarterly? What say the superannuates? Why say you, my brethren? Give us your views in the ADVOCATE.

The Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference want to be helped to a way of doing the manly thing by these old soldiers of the cross, and the widows and orphans of our deceased brethren. Help us.

Your brother,

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

W. M. S, Grenada District.

The first district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, Grenada district, North Mississippi Conference, was held in Coffeeville, April 30, 1891.

Mrs. A. P. Ball, district secretary, elected at the last annual meeting, had done faithful service in trying to work the sisters up to their duty, and also in urging the co-operation of the presiding elder and pastors.

Our efficient Conference president, Mrs. Hargrove, was with us, and presided over the meeting. Before the business began we had the usual devotional exercises, and a twenty minutes' testimony service.

Miss Ada Eason, of Grenada Collegiate Institute, was elected recording secretary.

Mrs. Durrant read an address of welcome, to which Mrs. Bledsoe responded.

The reports from some of the auxiliaries were very encouraging. A few were not represented by letter or delegate; but the prayers and faithful work of Conference president, district secretary, and other good women and bright children, surely will be rewarded by an increase in the number of workers and growth in the work.

A gratifying feature of the meeting was the reports by our delegates from the juvenile societies, and many hearts responded to the hope that little Oscar, the missionary boy, might grow to be a missionary man.

Water Valley Lilies have the banner.

Some of the sisters who were expected to have part in the afternoon session failed to be on hand; but Sister Hargrove, equal to the emergency, gave us good service in lieu of theirs, and placed before us our duty to the parsonage and home missionary work as well as the foreign. The delegate from Eden read a paper on "Missionary Work Develops Christian Character."

At four o'clock the children from school came in, and, after one of those talks Sister Hargrove is so well adapted to making, she organized a number of them into a society, giving them the name, "Coffeeville Forget-Me-Not."

At the evening service Master Oscar Bledsoe gave a nice recitation; the indefatigable Sister Hargrove gave us a good address that will not soon be forgotten; little Ethel Durrant, in a "well-done" recitation, regretted her empty red box; but had something to rattle in it after passing it through the well-pleased congregation.

Sisters and children, let us each one do our part, and may the work produce abundant fruit!

CARRIE E. COGDELL.

Not Forgotten.

Mr. E. G. Cook, Hazlehurst, Miss.:

Dear Sir: In reading the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of April 16, I saw your communication, "A Forgotten Preacher." It revived pleasant recollections as Bro. Houghton and his wife were very dear friends of my husband and myself. In the early '50's his health became so broken he concluded to try some seashore resort, and came in from his swamp home with his family to our house on the river (Mississippi) to take a boat. He and his family remained several days with us. While with us his friends gathered around his bedside (for he was too weak to sit), held service and administered the sacrament. He went to one of the resorts near New Orleans, and we never saw him again. Respectfully,

ADELINE N. LARCHE.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

MEMOIRS OF TALLEYRAND. VOL. II. By Due De Broglie. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, 130 Canal St., New Orleans. Price, $2.50.

The first volume of this interesting work we have already noticed. The second volume goes over one of the most important periods in the history of modern Europe. It is divided into three parts: First, Napoleon's marriage and his contest with Pope Pius VII.; second, the Fall of the Empire and the Restoration; third, the Congress of Vienna. A great deal of the "inner workings" among kings and diplomats can be seen in these memoirs. "Affairs of state" are seen frequently to be nothing more than affairs to bolster up the ambitious schemes of men who had the reins of government and wanted to hold on to them. These memoirs are exceedingly interesting in matter and pleasing in style.

INTRODUCTORY.

Hosea was a native of the northorn kingdom, Israel, and his prophetic ministry immediately followed that of Amos, and was, in its latter stage, contemporary with Isaiah's. Tho prophet Hosea was a man for tho times. The age was one of great national sinfulness; and we see a band of faithful men raised up to stem the great tide of iniquity. Of these our present writer takes the foremost place. His trumpet gave no uncertain sound; he bewailed the general profligacy of his times; he moralized over the decay of righteousness, and, in flaming denunciations, rebuked the widespread wickedness. He did not seek to hide himself from the current hatchy dealing in generalities; but his voice proclaimed aloud the direct indictment of Israel for his sins. There was conrageous; but his courage was not the animal kind. It was the bravery born of a firm faith in the righteousness of his cause. What is the greatness if it be not the unswerving devotion of the soul to truth? In the midst of the prevailing practice of ungodliness, he appears upon the scene to seek to stem the onrushing flood of vice and irreverence. With a fearlessness of spirit, which modern prophets might do well to imitate, he is about to perform his allotted task. He cried aloud and spared not; but, though mindful of judgment, he never forgot mercy. He never lost confidence in the love with which God looked for signs of penitence from his wayward children. So the preacher does but half his work, that simply proclaims the terrors of the law as it flings down the unerring sword of justice upon the sinner; he must also show forth the cheering, life-giving influences of the gospel. He must declare not only the wages of sin, but also the gift of God.

I.—ISRAEL'S SINS.

"You speak of the sins of Israel; and what, pray, do they differ from our own? In no way but in degree, and that, too, with the balance in their favor. If the remonstrances and faithful messages of God's holy prophets had have saved Israel, he would have repented of his evil; if the earnest entreaties and faithful ministrations of the teachers could save the people today, our places of worship would not be so sparsely seated nor would our moral institutions be so crowded. The fault is not in the gospel. Christ's lament over Jerusalem was not only true of that present circumstance, but went backward and embraced every lost soul, and looked forward and pronounced the words that will condemn all that reject his salvation, crystallizing the tears of Infinite Love in the sentence that makes the heart of God yearn: "Ye would not." Would you know the cause of Israel's sin and of every man's sin? Here is the clue to the problem—"He bringeth forth fruit unto himself." These are they that lay up treasure for themselves and are not rich toward God. All the energies of their being and the opportunities of their station of life are made to bend in the direction of their own personal advancement. Take from twenty-four hours the time devoted to money-getting plus the hours given up to society plus the period for worldly amusement plus a portion for necessary bodily recuperation, and how little there or, indeed, inclination is left for the Lord's service! These are only "empty vines." Having spent their strength in leaves and branches, there remains no vitality for producing fruit. But not alone this. They had not only brought no fruit as God's husbandmen, but they had even perverted the blessings that had been purchased from his hand. Outward prosperity was figured by the vine; and this, instead of being utilized as a blessing, was allowed to become a snare to wean Israel from Jehovah. Rapidly advancement does not argue spiritual growth, though some such false idea seems to have its followers now. It can never be so; it was not the case in the time of Hosea. He saw plainly that the breach between God and his people was proportionate to their temporal glory. To see the connection notice the following propositions. 1. Few men can pursue wealth without regarding it as an end to be gained. 2. Anything so looked upon must necessarily become supreme in the hearts, and gradually stifle all higher aspirations, maturing finally into the predominant incentive to covetous desire. 3. But "Covetousness is idolatry" of the most debasing type. "Their heart is divided." But a heart divided against God and idols shall not long stand. The old, but utterly impossible feat—that of serving two masters. "He shall break down their altars." Who does not recognize the eternal fact of retributive justice. For these idols Jehovah's altars had been desecrated and desolated, and now, in just retaliation, this insult is to be requited. No half-hearted service can get the approbation of God. He will have all or none. "He is a jealous God."

Not only idolatry and lack of zeal in Israel to answer for, but also he was guilty of untruthfulness. "They have spoken words, swearing falsely," and the indictment. Their conversation is mere words; no thought of plighting or honesty there. Hence judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field." Oh, what an opportunity lost! Had justice prevailed, there had been a field of bounteous blessing; but, justice trampled under foot, there have grown in the place of life-nourishing plants, deathdealing poisons.

II.—ISRAEL'S SORROW.

Just as individual sin is followed by individual calamity, just so surely will national wickedness meet with national disaster. Sacred and profane history abound in illustrations. And yet tho nations of to-day are committing the same sins for which the peoples of past ages have met their national ruin. The message of the prophet is full of exultation over the coming destruction of idolatry. Israel's golden calf, so assiduously worshipped, is to be her curse; its place of worship even has lost its honorable distinction of the "house of God," and is become the "house of vanity." Jacob's pillow has become material for an idol's altar! But the prophet saw the time when that idol which had caused Israel such multiplied sorrow would be carried into Assyria, and its worshippers with it. Frail and helpless, as the foam is severed from the crest of the wave, so Israel, under the galling title of Samaria, is to have her line of royalty cut off. The "high places" shall be destroyed, and on their site shall grow up thorns and thistles. Learn a lesson: It is better for God's thorns and thistles to thrive than idols, which are the work of men's hands! In the consternation and widespread terror incident to the foreign invasions, Israel will be constrained to cry out to the hills and rocks to cover them from their enemies. Their prayer was: Let inanimate mountains fall and crush us rather than be delivered into the hands of our foes.

III.—ISRAEL'S SENTENCE.

Before sentencing the guilty people, God sums up the charge in the fearful statement: "O Israel, thou hast sinned more than in the days of Gibeah." "The days of Gibeah" were seven centuries before! Seven hundred years of experience, of long-suffering on the part of Jehovah; manifold exhibitions of his tender mercy had failed to soften Israel's heart! What a responsibility to assume! If Israel merited this scathing rebuke for failing to learn the lessons of seven dimly-lighted centuries, what denunciations will be poured out upon him, that, in spite of nineteen centuries all ablaze with gospel grace and privilege, goes to the judgment with sins to which there is affixed the awful appellative—"More than in the days of Gibeah!" Will the everlasting hills be able to cover him or the bottomless pit suffice to hide him from the wrath of the Lamb?

"When they are bound to their two transgressions" (R. V.)—namely, their apostasy from God, and the schism they brought about in rupturing the tribes. Sinners are truly "bound" to their sins. "Bound" with fetters so powerful that the only instrument able to effect their severance cuts the very heart-strings of Infinite Love. The only available means for the separation of a sinner from his sins is the blood of Christ, which atones for the one and purifies the other from his evil deeds. The picture of Israel's captivity grows darker. "Ephraim," though but a heifer and accustomed to no labor, shall bear the yoke; her fair neck, unused to toil, shall feel the weight of unsupportable burdens. "Judah shall plow and Jacob (Israel) shall break his clods." Oh, to learn this lesson in moral agriculture! "Sow in righteousness." "Break up your fallow ground." You have not only sown the wrong seed; but, through indolence, you have allowed your field to lie idle. Unappreciated opportunities, unappropriated promises, unheeded warnings, unkept pledges—these recall to your minds! If you break up this "fallow ground" with hearty contrition and penitence, and then sow it in righteousness, the Lord will rain his love upon you and you shall reap the joyful harvest of his mercy.

Such had been the promise; but, like a great many that we have, it went unheeded. Then came the inevitable result: "Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity." "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Therefore, judgment is come upon you; the noise and tumult of hostile arms, the bloody experiences of horrible war; the cruelties inflicted upon helpless women and children; the excruciating tortures of captives—these shall be your lot. Speedily shall the king, the glory of the nation, be cut off. Israel's sin had found him out. He had brought forth fruit unto himself!

It was Mr. Emerson who said "the first wealth is health," and it was a wiser than the modern philosopher who said that "the blood is the life." The system, like the clock, runs down. It needs winding up. The blood gets poor and scores of diseases result. It needs a tonic to enrich it.

A certain wise doctor, after years of patient study, discovered a medicine which purified the blood, gave tone to the system, and made men—tired, nervous, brain-wasting men—feel like new. He called it his "Golden Medical Discovery." It has been sold for years, sold by the million of bottles, and people found such satisfaction in it that Dr. Pierce, who discovered it, now feels warranted in selling it under a positive guarantee of its doing good in all cases.

Perhaps it's the medicine for you. Your's wouldn't be the first case of scrofula or salt-rheum, skin disease, or lung disease, it has cured when nothing else would. The trial's worth making, and costs nothing. Money refunded if it don't do you good.

Criticism and Archæology.

Certain professors of the higher criticism have arrived at the conclusion that the so-called historial books of the Bible are unhistorical, that they are mythical and legendary, and some go so far as to say that they are tainted with literary fraud. They have accordingly proceeded to evolve the Hebrew history from they own consciousness, aided by the proof of things that the Hebrew books do not contain, but which they are morally certain that they would contain if they were genuine. With the confidence of the men who proposed to build a tower that should reach to heaven, they have built up their critical fabric high enough for those standing on it to look down on believers who still confide in the assurance that "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," and that the God of truth can not be the author of baseless fables.

The unbelieving critics have pretty nearly done their utmost and worst. And now another authority asks to be heard. Archæology has something to say on these questions, and archæologists have to do with very solid facts. They have discovered monuments that furnished records reaching back to the age of Moses, and even to the age of Abraham. The campaign of Chedorlaomer, who was defeated by Abraham (Gen. xiv), has been set down by the critics as a Hebrew myth. But it is a matter of ancient record, the lines of which have been traced and translated. Prof. Sayce, of Oxford, communicates to the Sunday-School Times certain discoveries at Tel-el-Amarna on the site of a former capital of Egypt. Among its ruins a number of cuneiform tablets were found, which proved to be letters and despatches sent to the Egyptian court by the Kings of Babylonia, Assyria, and Syria, and the Egyptian governors and vassal princes in the subject province of Palestine. In the collection are a number of letters from the south of Palestine, including some from Jerusalem, in which the person of Melchizedek distinctly appears, as priest and king, who declares, "Neither my father nor my mother has exalted me in this place; it was the prophecy of the mighty King that has caused me to enter the house of my father."

The "higher criticism" has assumed that the Israelites were ignorant of the art of writing, and that the literary epoch was not earlier than the time of Samuel. This notion is utterly discredited, now that we have letters and records dating from the time of Abraham, and point by point confirming the scriptural testimony. Job wished that his words might be written, printed in a book, graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever. That has been fulfilled in inscriptions that ages have not dimmed and that have come forth to refute unbelieving critics of the Divine Word.—Watchman.

How to Study the Bible.

An exclusively critical study of the Scriptures leads to spiritual barrenness. The life of the soul, even in the preacher, needs other nourishment than grammatico-historical interpretations, archæological discoveries, sacred geography, theological subtleties, or even ponderously argued orthodoxies. These are husks—useful, perhaps indispensable, in their place; but it should not be forgotten that the husk exists not for its own sake, but for the sake of the kernel. The real nutriment of the spirit is found only in the inner body of truth, and this must be spiritually apprehended. The life of the Bible does not pulsate in a complex congeries of doctrines, it does not kindle in the eye of speculation, it does not glow in the withered and shrunken cheek of archæology, it does not stir with eloquence the dead tongue of comparative philology. Its mystic power must be experienced rather than handled, felt rather than studied. Moving with invisible fingers over the cords of life, it evokes a sweet and solemn music that quiets the troubled spirit, and thrills the soul with a vivid sense of the nearness and power of the world to come. This power resides not wholly in the dogmatic affirmations of the Bible, in its legislation, or in its ethics; but more largely, perhaps, in its sublime poetry and consoling promises, in its prophetic anticipations and apocalyptic visions. Does not this explain why the unlettered negro in his plantation cabin, as well as humble believers everywhere, turn with a true instinct to these portions of Scripture, as travelers to the desert spring beneath the shade of Elim's palms? They find here a life that responds to their own innermost life, a divine inspiration that kindles enthusiasm, that consecrates the service, and that lifts the soul above the grind and grief of earth. Such transporting foretastes of heavenly joys are not attained by microscopic study of daghesh fortes or Greek particles. And yet it is sadly true that this devotional study of the Bible, this vital contact with its spiritual essence, is that which the preacher is most prone to neglect. Too often in feeding others he starves himself. The homiletical tendency tyrannizes over his spiritual needs. He is like an Alpine guide whose anxiety for the weak and inexperienced under his charge hides from his own eyes the magnificent vistas on every side.—Old Testament Student.

Briefs.

Pentecost next Sunday.

The people were delighted with your Easter service. Add to their pleasures by suitable sermons next Sunday. On what subject? Here: The personality, co-equality with God the Father and God the Son; nature, titles, offices and work of the Holy Ghost.

"When the day of Pentecost was fully come, the disciples were all with one accord in the temple. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

"Oh! that I were filled with the Holy Spirit!" Wishes are vain if the means for the accomplishment of the desired end are not employed. Do what the disciples did. 1. They had a protracted meeting at that famous upper room. It was continued for ten days. 2. They met with one accord. Peace and good-will manifest. Quietly, wisely and prayerfully remove acrimony existing among the membership. 3. Men and women wrestled with God in prayer and supplication.

The natural affection between parents and offspring is one of life's greatest boons. It is a rarity, though possibility, that a woman abandons her own child. But as regards God's affection for his children, such possibility is precluded. He himself declares: "I will not forget thee." The hungry child may possibly ask in vain for food; but never will God refuse to vouchsafe unto us the Holy Spirit, if we fervently and perseveringly pray for its bestowal. Some boons we crave may be refused; their receipt would, perhaps, prove a curse: but God always grants the request of those who enthusiastically solicit the impartation of the Holy One.

The reason why only few acquire the craved-for impartation of the Holy Spirit will be discovered in the fact, that the hearts of the petitioners had not been previously emptied of Satan, sin and the world. Without their exclusion the acquisition of the Holy Spirit is impossible. He will not occupy a caravansary where Arab and camel find shelter beneath the same roof. A tenement-house he'll not occupy. Such houses contain ten and more separate domiciles—all beneath one roof. A French dancing-master occupies one of the compartments, a German vender of beer another, a Kentucky distiller of whisky a third. Then follow extortioner, the dishonest bankrupt, the lascivious, equivocator, etc. Just one compartment left. And you pray, "Come, Holy Spirit, dwell with me." No; he'll not come. He'll not dwell with you. He disdains fractional occupancy of the human heart. He insists on all, or none at all. Conversion invariably precedes the acquisition of the Holy Spirit.

Rev. Francis L. Ferguson, formerly of New Orleans, compliments his (the Presbyterian) church upon the multiplication of evangelists and the encouragement given them of late by the churches and pastors. Well, brother; experience is a dear school. Acquire it, if you will. With Methodism the evangelistic furor belongs to the past. We are content now with our pastors, presiding elders, bishops and connectional officers. These are our evangelists, and we mean to stand by them.

Editorial Correspondence.

Traveling by rail has its drawbacks and its compensations. In the first place you go, and you go faster than by any other method of travel. Nor does the rapid transit seem to increase the danger. A man traveling at the rate of forty miles an hour is as safe apparently as he who travels at twenty miles an hour. The elegance and luxury of a Pullman Sleeper are somewhat counterbalanced by your being curtained for the night in a box, 6x3, full of heat and mosquitoes, and for which blessing you pay $2 a night. The price paid for lodging in a Pullman Palace is enough to insure a good breakfast, and yet leave a margin for the company to make a handsome profit. Such extortion is an imposition upon the traveling public.

The trip to Wilmington was made by "easy stages," with abundant opportunities to rest on the way. The sleeper to Montgomery, where I breakfasted; thence the chair car to Atlanta, where I got dinner. Here I had a lay-over of four hours. Improving the opportunity, I called at the Wesleyan office, where I found Bro. Glenn deep in the mysteries and pleasures of editing one of our best religious papers. I enjoyed an hour's chat with him. Atlanta has much improved and enlarged her borders since the last visit. The new State House is one of very imposing appearance. It occupies a whole square, and is in the form of a quadruple T, if the reader can imagine such a figure. A curious thing happened when I left Atlanta. I left exactly at six P. M., and just as soon as the car began to move it was seven P. M. The explanation is, that the line between Eastern time and Central time is at Atlanta, and the difference between the two is one hour. So my watch was one hour behind time during the whole time I was in North Carolina. A sleeper on the Piedmont Air Line brought me to Charlotte by five o'clock in the morning. Here I was permitted to enjoy eight hours' rest. I not only rested, but saw the town while so doing, and I have scarcely ever looked at a prettier one. The churches and other public buildings are beautiful to behold, and the principal street of the town is one to be imitated everywhere for its width and adorning shade trees. From Charlotte to Wilmington by the Carolina Central road is a pleasant ride of about six hours.

Along the route, all the way from home, the crops appeared to be much behind, and the drouth extended as far as I traveled.

I arrived in Wilmington in time for the public reception given to the Board by the Methodists of the city in Grace Church. Dr. Peterson, vice-president, presided in the absence of E. W. Cole, of Nashville. The church was most beautifully decorated, and a large choir of singers and "players on instruments" discoursed beautiful music. The addresses of welcome were made by the pastor of Grace Church and the presiding elder of Wilmington district. In behalf of the Board, Bishop Keener made the response. A large audience greeted the Board, and everything passed off pleasantly. So far so much. C. W. C.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans, recently gave an elegant reception at the parsonage which had been purchased mainly through the liberality of Mrs. Jones, who contributed $1,100, and Mrs. W. W. Carre, who gave $500. Almost the entire congregation were present; also members from other denominations. Nearly all the resident Methodist ministers were in attendance, and were cordially welcomed by the pastor, Rev. Wm. H. LaPrade, and his accomplished lady.

Weary in Well-Doing.

So much to do. Misfortune, misery all around. Hearts lacerated. Hoads aching. Bodies wasting away. Few eyes tearless; few bosoms unoppressed with grief; few mouths not overflowing with lamentations. Most men are but

> "Footballs of adversity,
> Poor nurslings of the storm."

We are enjoined to bring relief. The gospel offers goodwill to man. Benevolence must mature in beneficence; philanthropy in charity; magnanimity in deeds of kindness. The fallen must be raised, the lost found, the hungry fed, the benighted brought to light.

When we first set out on our Christian career there was no sacrifice too great, no task too onerous, no duty too irksome. Like the first converts to Christianity, who laid all their earthly goods at the feet of the apostles, we consecrated ourselves—our time, our influence, our money—our all to our Master. As St. Paul said to the Galatians, we could have plucked out our eyes, if that had contributed to enhance the well-being of God's people.

But a sad change has taken place with many. The romance of our Christian youth has passed away. The sultry days of practical life superinduce depression. Are weary; yes, weary in well-doing. We will enumerate a few of the causes of this deplorable weariness:

1. Unbelief takes the lead. When first the love of God was shed abroad in our hearts we rapturously exclaimed with Thomas: My Lord and my God!

> "Jesus all the day long
> Was our joy and our song."

But soon declension, retrogression set in. When alive in Christ, sin appeared hideous; when lukewarm, only ugly; when fallen from grace, simply natural.

The apparent lack of God's discrimination in his providential dealings with men, the discovery of hypocrisy in those whom we had firmly believed to be true Christians, the palpable rarity of genuineness of the professed and published conversions, the seeming inability of the grace of God to conquer national, social and ecclesiastical prejudice in the best of Christians, the acrimonious wrangling among the different Christian denominations—that, and more, tended to uproot the tree of life and to plant in its place the deathly night-shade of unbelief.

Beware! Think of the sad doom of the king's officer in the gate of Samaria. With living faith to actuate, weariness in well-doing can not exist.

2. Ingratitude on the part of our beneficiaries causes weariness in well-doing. Were hospitable, charitable, kind. The indigent found ample aid; the homeless, shelter; the naked, habiliments; the weak, support; the distressed, relief; the disconsolate, comfort. But in most instances the recipients of our benefactions proved ungrateful. Some of us endured treatment akin to that of our friend who was severely kicked by a mule whom he had fed. Some whom we had befriended, as we thought, by our labors of love, avoid us; do not wish to be reminded of our kindness by our presence. Young men whom we rescued from the mass of social debris, educated, elevated, raised to office and renown, pretend to know us not. Many shrink not from traducing their benefactors.

No wonder that incipient misanthropy absorbs the "milk of human kindness." Away! No more assistance. Will no longer add to the long list of base ingrates. Weary in well-doing. But, bethink yourself! The servant is not more than his master. The Savior relaxed not in his beneficent endeavors though the beneficiaries maliciously maltreated him. Furthermore, in our labors of love we should heed neither gratitude nor ingratitude. We do our duty. The love of Christ constrains us. Gratitude is a species of remuneration. But where remunoration is rendered there is quid pro quo, rendering the term "charity" a misnomer.

3. Deceit on the part of those who with us are enrolled beneath the same banner. We exulted in our avocation. Though the battle was fierce, we were of good cheer. We believed in the sincerity of our comrades—believed that they were true to us, as we were true to our Master. Imagined that, like ourselves, they were seeking the things which are Christ's. Happy delusion!

Then came painful revelations. As Paul of old, we suffered from false brethren, brethren who sought to make use of us as building material for their aggrandizement. Discovered that efforts had been made to undermine and injure us.

It was then that a woful reaction set in in our religious life. Sullenly we repeated the dolorous couplet:

> "The smiles of joy, the tears of woe
> Deceitful shine, deceitful flow."

Duped, betrayed. Weepingly we buried our face in our hands and wished, with Elijah of old, to go down to our grave. With unspeakable sadness we turned away from our fellowmen, determined forever to keep our hearts, hands and purse fully closed to mortals.

We move a reconsideration. Our associates' faithlessness does not relieve us of sacred obligations. Of yore, in well-doing, merry song leaped from our lips; we will now be no less zealous in well-doing though our eyes are bathed in tears. Not weary in well-doing! In due season we shall reap if we faint not. A.

Church Extension.

Among the proceedings of the last meeting of the Board of Church Extension, there appears the following: "A resolution was adopted favoring large lots for church-buildings. This will weigh much in granting appropriations."

To one, at least, this is not only wise, but gratifying. I had begun to fear that I was a crank on this subject (having expressed myself freely whenever opportunity presented), and, therefore, concluded to hold my peace. To have the support of so nice and respectable a body is encouraging indeed, for, in my humble judgment, this is a much-needed step in the right direction, and should apply not only to church-buildings, but to parsonages and all other buildings used for church purposes. It is no hidden secret that in many instances our churches are built on lots distressingly small; and this, no doubt, accounts for the absence of many of our children from the services of the sanctuary. In the interim between Sunday-school and services they must either stay in the house, go out upon the streets or go home—the last of which they choose. Once at home they remain.

Large church lots with comfortable seats and other conveniences, with teachers of tact, would, I believe, do much toward solving this problem of children at church.

Again, in most of the smaller places a good percentage of our people live in the country; yet in a pastorate over six of this class of works I have found but two possessed of ground enough to erect hitching-posts and plant trees to protect and comfort the faithful horse. With the merciful man this necessarily has its weight. In our country places, too, with which I have had some experience, it is not uncommon to find a church located on some narrow out-of-the-way place, and that, too, when land is worth a mere song. I recall two just now (over which I had the charge) in communities of wealthy Methodists, and where land was no object, that to find places of safety and comfort for hitching was a question of no small import. In a populous community, drawing from a radius of five to eight miles, we would say that for cemetery and other purposes ten acres is little enough, and in our small towns one-fifth of an ordinary square. It is to be hoped that the Conference Boards will act upon this timely suggestion of the parent Board.

If I may be excused for the seeming presumption, I would suggest that the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society would do well to adopt the same resolution, and that every Board of Trustees would act wisely to be governed by the same principle in securing lots for parsonages.

Homes where the pastors' families can have about them space necessary for the comfort and freedom of the ordinary home. Where gardens, lots, flower-beds and playgrounds may be enjoyed by the itinerant boy and girl. Of all the parsonage homes of this itinerant, none have ever been so loved and none so often referred to by the little ones of the home as that where space was not stinted and freedom for all these things was enjoyed to the full. Having never lived in a city, I know nothing of what may constitute an eligible lot therein. What I write refers to smaller places.

Louisiana State Sunday-School Convention.

Place of meeting: Carondelet Street Church in New Orleans. Time: May 5-7. Attendance excellent. Interest intense. Result eminently satisfactory. In honor of the occasion the pulpit had been very beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens, and an odor of fragrance and freshness pervaded the church.

The president of the convention elected last year, and re-elected at this time, Mr. R. H. Browne, of the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, displayed much tact in conducting the business of the convocation. Rev. H. H. Waters (Episcopal) led in fervent prayer. Rev. Dr. R. Q. Mallard (Presbyterian), appointed to deliver the opening address, being absent, Rev. Dr. B. W. Bussey proved a very efficient substitute.

His address began with a cordial welcome to the delegates. He said that the open doors of the homes were typical of the open hearts that were waiting to welcome them; that the delegates had not come unheralded; the news of their good works had preceded them. He deplored the absence of those who were unable to come, because this meeting gives emphasis to one of the most fruitful departments of the Christian work. He spoke of the demand for Christians in the great field—what they needed were not men, but giants—and that there were at present 20,000,000 of people engaged in the Sunday-school work.

He compared the relative church attendance of other cities to that of New Orleans, much to that city's detriment, showing that only four per cent. of the population attended the Sunday-schools and churches, appealing to the convention for help in the matter of influencing better attendance, and closed with eloquent words of welcome to the delegates.

Mr. Wm. Reynolds, of Peoria, Ills., and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts, of New York, delighted the audience with appropriate addresses. Dr. C. F. Evans pronounced the benediction after the morning session; after evening session, Rev. J. A. Parker

Rev. B. F. White, of Monroe, conducted the religious services at the opening of the second day's session. At evening session, Rev. A. E. Clay. Hon. W. H. Jack, of Baton Rouge, has been appointed to deliver an address on "Value of Organization in Sunday-school Work;" but, in a polite note which was publicly read, he regretfully remarked that official duties prevented attendance. Hence the lectures mentioned above occupied the floor most of the time during both sessions of the second day. In her address on "The Model Teacher" Mrs. Crafts said, among other interesting matter:

Poor teachers degrade Christianity and create false impressions of the Scriptures in the minds of the scholars that can never be eradicated. We must do careful teaching. The pupil must have correct ideas of the Bible. Teachers will sometimes attempt to teach a lesson with which they are perfectly familiar. The Bible is an inspired book, but it does not inspire ignorant teachers to teach or ignorant scholars to learn. After we have begun to study how we can teach the Bible we learn to love it. Then we become able to interpret it. So the Bible inspires us to teach under some conditions, but not under others.

We must not teach so that the scholars will compare us unfavorably with their day teachers. . . . You must not be discouraged by the high standard placed before you. It is something that can be acquired by hard study and industry. Gifts you may not have, but grace you can attain to. We have so many opportunities to better ourselves in the way of teaching. In this convention you may receive impulses to teach that will never be lost. . . . Long ago I learned to love this work better than anything else, and I feel I owe all the brightness and sweetness in life to the Sunday-school work. The motto, "Only that is important which is eternal," inscribed in the cathedral at Milan. You will find it beneficial to study and apply.

The collection after night session resulted in the acquisition of cash and subscription, of $824. Benediction at close of afternoon and evening session by Rev. Mr. McLaurin and Rev. Mr. LaPrade.

Rev. J. Y. Allison conducted the religious services of Thursday's afternoon session.

The resolutions adopted provided that the Executive Committee should consist of fifteen members, five of whom shall constitute a quorum; that the operation of this association shall be pledged the American Bible Society; an indorsement of the resolution of the International Sunday-school Convention in 1887 in regard to temperance instruction in the Sunday-schools; a communication be addressed to the Louisiana commissioners of the World's Fair, and through them the Board of Management, protesting against the opening of the fair on Sundays.

A resolution opposing the recharter of the Louisiana State Lottery was introduced. An amended resolution inserting the words "Mexican National Lottery" in the resolution was carried unanimously by a rising vote. The usual resolution of thanks for courtesies extended, to the press and to the press was unanimously adopted.

The evening session was consumed by a Sunday-school experience meeting. The election of officers, to serve during the ensuing year, resulted as follows: President, R. H. Browne; vice-presidents, J. N. Pharr, W. A. Goodale, and one to be supplied by the Executive Committee from each other Sunday-school district; recording secretary, A. Parker; treasurer and corresponding secretary, John A. Rodd; statistical secretary, A. Parker; Executive Committee, R. H. Browne, S. S. Prentiss, Rev. H.H. Waters, W. L. Jarvis, J. S. Talmage, Jas. E. Rees, E. P. Mackie, J. G. Grant, Brownlove Smith, M. O. Aldrich (Baton Rouge), and five to be supplied by the committee from the parishes.

The convention adjourned sine die, Rev. J. A. Parker pronounced the benediction. A.

Bro. Sawyer's meeting is still progressing. Third week. Services morning and evening. Good attendance. A goodly number of conversions.

Personal and Otherwise.

Dr. D. C. Kelley's six months' suspension terminated on April 19.

Dr. Messick, of St. Louis, has been visiting his old friends of Louisville, Ky.

Rev. H. A. Bouriand, D. D., of Waco, Texas, will preach the commencement sermon for Howard College, Fayette, Mo., June 7.

Rev. Wm. H. LaPrade, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, will deliver the commencement sermon for Mansfield Female College, June 14, 1891.

Rev. Sam P. Jones says, in a letter to Rev. R. R. Moore, of Little Rock, that fully 20,000 persons had been present at his last meeting at Aberdeen, Miss.

The Rev. H. M. Dubose, editor of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, will deliver the commencement sermon at Pacific Methodist College, Santa Rosa, Cal., May 17.

Bro. Ware, of Pass Christian, gave us a pleasant call. Was just in from Brookhaven. Denominated Dr. D. C. Kelley's sermon, on Sunday before last, "a noble effort."

Bro. J. A. Bowen writes from Aberdeen, May 9, that his meeting, led by Rev. Sam P. Jones, terminated on April 26. Results more than satisfactory. Report in next issue.

Dr. W. C. Black will preach the commencement sermon for Port Gibson (Miss.) Female College on June 14, and Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, president of Centenary College, will deliver the literary address.

Augusta, Ga., had a good share of Bishops, Sunday, May 3. Bishop Key preached at St. Johns, and Bishop Haygood at St. James. Their sermons were of high order, and impressed the people, it is said, profoundly.

A telegram from Morgan City—Bro. B. F. Alexander, pastor—gives gratifying intelligence. It says: "Thirty-three seeessions. Fifty persons at altar last night (May 6). Bro. Wimberly is with me. Grand meetings."

Bro. White, of Monroe, represents his charge as in a very fine condition. Quite a number of people have recently moved to Monroe, among whom are several Methodist families. The strength of the church has been largely increased by these additions.

Bishop E. R. Hendrix, says the Wesleyan, preached to large congregations in Atlanta, Sunday, May 3, and delighted his hearers. He dedicated Hendrix Mission Church in the morning, attended the dedicatory services at the prohibition hall in the afternoon, and preached at First Church at night.

We endorse Bro. LaPrade's opinion of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate. He writes to that paper:

The Wesleyan is, to me, a most welcome visitor. You deserve fifteen thousand subscribers, and will have them.

The Methodist Times, of London, says of the lamented Dr. Osborn:

He imitated the practice of Dr. Bunting. He always kept his opinions to himself until everybody else had shown his hand; then he came in at the end with decisive effect. His statements were always very lucid, and it was exceedingly difficult to continue the discussion after he had spoken.

The Rev. E. B. Chappell, of Austin, will deliver the literary address at the commencement of Coronal Institute, San Marcos, Texas, and will also preach the sermon before the meeting of the General Board of the Woman's Missionary Society, at Fort Worth, in June.

Dr. W. A. Candler, president of Emory College, says:

Give the people a chance, brethren. Adopting a figure made famous by Dr. McFerrin, don't be afraid to milk the cow often. That increases the flow. "Stripping" her is necessary. Some careless milkers make cows "go dry." There are timid preachers always standing between their people and a collection, or making appeals cautiously and apologetically, who really repress the liberality of the church.

Bishop Key, through the Texas Christian Advocate, informs the Methodists of Texas that the three missionaries who volunteered for foreign service from that State have all been declined by the Board of Missions, and that the special funds raised in Texas will go to the support of Rev. W. B. Burke, of Georgia, who has been four years in China, and has learned the language and can preach to the people.

"I Am So Tired"

Is a common exclamation at this season. There is a certain bracing effect in cold air which is lost when the weather grows warmer; and when Nature is renewing her youth, her admirers feel dull, sluggish and tired. This condition is owing mainly to the impure condition of the blood, and its failure to supply healthy tissue to the various organs of the body. It is remarkable how susceptible the system is to the help to be derived from a good medicine at this season. Possessing just those purifying, building-up qualities which the body craves, Hood's Sarsaparilla soon overcomes that tired feeling, restores the appetite, purifies the blood, and, in short, imparts vigorous health. Its thousands of friends as with one voice declare "It Makes the Weak Strong."

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. R. H. B. Gladney reports from Belen, Miss.: "We have organized an Epworth League of twelve members. The first Methodist Church in the county is well under headway. One-fourth of salary has been paid. Outlook for a prosperous year hopeful."

—Rev. W. G. Backus, P. C., writes from Heidelberg, Miss.: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Paulding, April 25 and 26. Our presiding elder, Bro. Mounger, was with us and gave us five excellent sermons, which were good to the use of edifying. The meeting was a success, financially and spiritually. Two members received and the church greatly strengthened. The church at Paulding is in good condition, with a live prayer meeting, Sunday-school, and Woman's Missionary Society. We have bought a neat-finished parsonage at Heidelberg for this new circuit at a cost of $800; furnished well and everything paid for. Our lot has fallen among an excellent and appreciative people."

—Rev. P. Howard writes: "We have just closed a most delightful meeting at Greensburg, La., resulting in eighteen accessions to our church and nine to the Baptist, besides a general revival of the memberships of both churches. The meeting was held in the Methodist Church, and continued for eleven days. The preaching was done by Revs. W. W. Simmons and G. D. Anders, of the Mississippi Conference; but Bro. Shillings, pastor of the Baptist Church, and other members of that church, took great interest in the meeting and made themselves very agreeable and useful in the service of song, prayer and counsel. We have three prayer meetings a week—a young women's, a young men's and a public prayer meeting. One feature of the meeting I would note is, that nearly all that joined were Sabbath-school pupils. Another fact of interest is, that only one out of the class of eighteen received at one time had to be baptized; all the rest having been baptized in infancy. Is not that Methodism? May they all prove faithful!"

Light Hearts and Plenty Money.

I have completed my first week with my Plater, and have $21.25 clear money. I am charmed with the business. I bought my Plater from the Lake Electric Co., Englewood, Ill., for $3, and feel confident if people knew how cheap they could get a Plater, and how much money they could make, we would see many more happy homes. It is surprising the amount of tableware and jewelry there is to plate; and if persons now into would get a Plater, they would soon have light hearts and plenty money.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER,

A Powerful and the Only Known Solvent of

RENAL CALCULI.

Its Value in Rheumatic Gout.

Case of Governor Thomas M. Holt of the State of North Carolina. He discharges one and a half ounces of Calculi under the action of the Water. His case stated by his family physician, Dr. E. C. Laird.

GOVERNOR THOMAS M. HOLT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

STATEMENT OF DR. LAIRD.

From the Maryland Medical Journal of November 17, 1888.

"The relief afforded by BUFFALO LITHIA WATER to a patient of mine, Col. Thomas M. Holt of this place, a sufferer from RENAL CALCULI, is, I think, worthy of some record. The 1st of May last he came under my care subject to frequent attacks of NEPHRITIC COLIC. Except as to the usual treatment for the relief of present suffering, I put him EXCLUSIVELY UPON BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, SPRING NO. 2, under the influence of which he in a few weeks passed four CALCULI, weighing from two to three grains each, which was followed by a disappearance of symptoms. Notwithstanding, however, the continued use of the water, after a short interval there was a return of these attacks, with increase both of frequency and severity, when he made a visit to the Buffalo Lithia Springs, where he used the water six weeks, with the following results: Ten days after arrival he began to discharge at intervals large quantities of CALCULI and SAND, which continued for several weeks, and afterward gradually diminished, until at the expiration of the six weeks there was only occasionally, and barely perceptible upon minute examination, a slight sandy deposit in the urine. At the same time improvement in the general condition of the patient was very marked.

"The amount of CALCULOUS matter discharged may safely be estimated at from one to one and a half ounces. Under microscopic examination it was evident, I think, that the CALCULI WERE ORIGINALLY PARTS OF LARGER FORMATIONS DISSOLVED BY THE ACTION OF THE WATER. Analysis made by Dr. F. S. Whaley, Resident Physician at the Springs AND CONSULTING PHYSICIAN IN THE CASE, showed it to be URIC ACID.

"Six weeks have elapsed since he left the Springs. Use of the water continued. THE URINE IS FREE FROM SEDIMENT AND NORMAL.

"RHEUMATIC GOUT in a severe form, associated with, and which indeed preceded the CALCULOUS affection, and which had resisted the usual remedies, was also to a great extent relieved by the use of the water. It is proper for me to add that I was in constant attendance upon Col. Holt during his stay at the Springs."

Water, in cases of One Dozen One-half Gallon Bottles, $5 per case at the Springs. Full Springs Pamphlet Sent on Application.

THE LAST DAYS!

A Text-Book on the Second Coming of Christ and Events which shall be Hereafter.

Compiled by JOHN E. RODD, New Orleans.

This is a most captivating and wonderfully instructive little work on this glorious coming event. This event is of such great moment that it is mentioned 318 times in the New Testament, or once in every 85 verses. It seems to have fallen to Mr. Rodd's good fortune to classify these passages under proper headings and in an intelligent manner, and in doing so he has done a great service to the Christian world.

This book contains but fourteen short chapters, and they are all Scripture quotations, prefaced by a few lines, only, of introductory remarks; but, as a convenient TEXT BOOK upon this subject, its value and usefulness can hardly be overestimated.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

A MORNING CALL TO SALLY.

BY MRS. GEORGE ARCHIBALD.

Come, my little dearly one,
Up, my little cheery one,
Open wide your twinkling eyes
And see the sunny day!
Hear the whispers of the breeze,
Hear the answers of the trees,
O, what blooming—O, what beauty
Makes the morning gay!

Do not be so dozy, sweet;
Run to me, my rosy feet;
Come, my dear and dimpled hands,
My tangled, curly head;
Come, O lips—you pretty pair!
Come—I want my lawful share,
And I will not yield you longer
To that drowsy bed.

Up! It breaks the heart of you
When we get the start of you.
Here's your gown, your apron's here
All gay and smooth and neat;
Here are slippers, here are socks,
And I'll comb your shining locks,
Till no fresher lovely darling
Shall the morning greet.

This is summer's fairest day,
This is summer's rarest day
If we will but do our duty,
My own little one!
And at evening when we mark
Round us the descending dark,
We shall feel the peace that lulleth
After day is done.

John Liked Fun.

A HORSE THAT MADE SPORT OF HIS FOUR YOUNG MASTERS.

John was tricky. Those who thought him a "beauty," smart and obedient, knew that he was mischievous and full of his "jokes."

John certainly did have a love of fun in his "make up," which made him a jolly companion for four boys who in turn did like to "plague the poor old chap," the family horse.

John was black-coated, strong and intelligent. His tricks were not vicious ones. He never kicked, balked nor ran away, being sober and well conducted when driven or ridden by the senior members of the family.

He had a fondness for his master who petted him a great deal. The women could drive him. He brought them home in just the same condition they started out.

It was only with the boys of the family that John ventured to "joke."

There were four of them—Ernest, Walter, Henry and Albert—bright young fellows who delighted to tickle John's nose with a fragrant smelling apple, snatching it away when he prepared to enjoy it.

John was a pig in his love for mellow ripe apples. The boys thought it fun to tease him a little and make him anxious to get it before giving it up to him.

They really did teach him to play "hide and seek" with them.

One of his tricks was to sigh and swell up his body when being saddled, if one of the little boys was about to ride him.

Of course the saddle was invariably turned after they had ridden a little distance.

Another trick was snatching a cap from their heads and galloping away with it to the furthest corner, whinnying defiance to the capless youngster.

One May afternoon as I sat beside a window some boyish voices called: "We are going to ride out to Muddy Fork. John is lazy—don't have enough to do."

John looked at me, and I plainly saw fun in his eyes. He made a nip at an apple geranium and then went along as sober as judges are said to be.

His expression plainly said to me: "These four boys seated upon my back are hunting for fun; I'll help find it."

Ernest and Albert whistled gayly. Henry and Walter urged "lazy bones" along.

"Such a good horse as he is. It isn't every one that would carry such a load of restless boys," was my thought, as John slowly crept along, head down, apparently meditating deeply.

In an hour; four boys, wet and muddy, walked in at the gate, angry and ready to "have it out with that sly old horse."

"What has he done?" I inquired.

"Done!" chorused an indignant quartette of boyish voices. "He poked along as if he was almost asleep until we got into the water. All at once he laid down, spilled us off his back and just galloped back home."

"He did it on purpose; of course he did. He thinks he can play tricks on us little boys. He don't dare try them with the men."

"I'd like to pound his back," said one.

We went to the back gate and saw him standing there, looking meek and subdued; only—I detected a twinkle in his eyes.

He received a scolding which he did not heed. A few minutes afterward I saw him in the stable-yard with four boys perched upon his back.—Ella Guernsey, in Prairie Farmer.

"Go Away, Satan! Go Away!"

A little girl sat upon the large stone door-step of her father's house, and beside her was a boy of about the same age. He had been eating a fresh, rosy apple, and had thrown the core in the gutter beyond the walk, and watched it as the muddy water carried it from his sight; then, turning back to his playmate, who seemed absorbed in the pictures of a new book, he said:

"Give me your apple, Katie; mine is all gone."

"Not now; wait a little," was the reply.

But the greedy little fellow, not willing to wait, took the apple up, turned it round and round, smelled it, and then tossed it up lightly in his hands, each time catching it again. I expected his teeth would go into it, but he was too honest for that.

His cry brought the eyes of the little girl upon him. The blood mounted to her brow; she was at once upon her feet with one hand raised, apparently to strike the shrinking form beside her. But the hand did not fall; and as she stood, her face and form showing the struggle within, I prayed that she might not be too—strongly tempted. A moment more, and her voice fell on my ear—

"Go away, Satan! go away!"

The mother within the door heard the words too, and, coming out, asked what they meant. A blush was upon the brow of the child, but it was humility and shame that caused it, while with drooping head she answered, "Satan wanted me to strike Freddie, but I didn't."

The mother drew her within her arms and kissed her, saying, "That is right, my child; resist him and he will flee from you."

Would that all might learn in childhood to resist the power of temptation by the help of the Holy Spirit! Truly, the world would be better for it.—Words of Love.

PERSEVERANCE.—Long ago a little boy was entered at Harrow School. He was put into a class beyond his years, and where all the scholars had the advantage of private instruction, which was denied to him. His master often reproved him for his dullness, but all his efforts failed to raise him from the lowest place in the form. But nothing daunted, he procured the grammars and other elementary books which his classmates had gone through in previous terms. He devoted the hours of play, and not a few hours of sleep, to the mastering of these, till, in a few weeks, he gradually began to rise, and it was not long before he was ahead of all his companions, and not only became the leader of that division, but the pride of Harrow. You may see the statue of that boy, whose career began with this fit of energetic application, in St. Paul's Cathedral, for he lived to be the greatest scholar of modern Europe—it was Sir William Jones.—Selected.

"Papa," inquired a Congressman's little daughter over a French lesson, "what is the French for a battle horse?" "A war horse you mean, don't you?" "I guess so, papa." "Of course you do, daughter. The French for that is hors du combat," and the member stroked his whiskers with prideful dignity and went on with his newspaper.

HOUSEHOLD.

Do You Sing at Home?

There is perhaps no pleasanter occupation in the family circle than sacred song. Many a home where there is little of beauty, or ease, or luxury, is made pleasant by "thanksgiving and the voice of melody." If there be joy in the heart and music on the tongue, many rough places in life are smoothed and made plain, many dark spots are brightened and made cheerful.

Those families which know nothing of sacred song miss some of the purest pleasure that falls to the lot of mortals. Family prayer is a duty and a privilege, but family praise is none the less so, and there is nothing that binds hearts more closely to the home than those "songs which mother sang;" and old tunes in which the voices of parents and brothers and sisters join form a bond of union which unites hearts when mountains rise and oceans rolls between them. Sometimes the wayward son, wandering in a far-off land, hears the song his mother sang, and is charmed by its music to know and serve his mother's God.

Careful and melodious singing in the home fits persons for singing elsewhere, especially if persons are taught to sing correctly, gently and tenderly, and without much instrumental accompaniment. Then the hymns learned by the young linger long in memory, a precious heritage against days of darkness and sorrow.

Let parents set the example of song, and the children will be sure to follow. Take time now and then, and enjoy an evening of sacred song. Let the voice of rejoicing be heard in the tabernacle of the righteous, and prayer and praise ascend to the throne of God. Let each child have his hymn book, and he will learn to prize it next to the Bible, and will from it gather many precious truths which will go with him to life's latest hour. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth God. Let us have more praising and less murmuring, more song and fewer complaints. Instead of fretting because of evil doers, let us pray; instead of repining at our lot, let us leave our burden at the Cross, "and bear a song away."

"Hast thou no words? Oh, think again—
Words flow apace when you complain
And fill your fellow-creatures' ears
With the sad tale of all your cares!
"Were half the breath thus vainly spent
To heaven in supplication sent,
Our cheerful song would oftener be,
'Hear what the Lord has done for me!'"

—The Common People.

A GREAT MISTAKE.—Certain people have a habit of appropriating to themselves all that belongs to other members of the family, walking into their houses if not at home, and awaiting their return, etc. No greater mistake can be made in families than dropping all the courteous civility which would be paid to strangers. The reason for it is difficult to discover, but it exists very widely.

Common attention and little acts of kindness do much in keeping up a really happy state of affairs, whether among blood relations or those connected by marriage. People are apt to expect too much, and to think that the promises of devotion so often professed in the moment of family excitement over a marriage will stand the wear and tear of further acquaintance.

It is ridiculous to expect that, because two people have fallen in love and determined to meet the joys and ills of life hand in hand, all the mutual relations on either side must amalgamate into friendship and affection as a natural sequence. This leads to much disappointment, as the falling off becomes apparent by slow degrees. A remark once made by a very happy woman was that she believed that a large portion of her happiness in married life was due to the fact that neither her husband nor herself had a single relative.—New York Ledger.

A LOVING WORD.—A loving word is always a safe word. It may or may not be a helpful word to the one who hears it; but it is sure to be a pleasant memory to the one who speaks it. Many a word spoken by us is afterward regretted; but no word of affectionate appreciation to which we have given utterance finds a place among our sadly-remembered expressions.—Selected.

Precious Stones.

A very interesting report prepared for the purposes of the census is furnished by Mr. George F. Kunz, the special agent who had charge of statistics as to precious stones and diamond cutting in the United States. This is a field which never before has been covered by the census, and Mr. Kunz is an expert in it.

Mining for precious and ornamental stones has been carried on in this country at irregular periods only, and the supply discovered has not been great, though in it are included many varieties. The number of diamonds found has been very limited, and their discovery is rare and purely accidental, the places where they are met with being certain well-defined districts of California, North Carolina, Georgia, and recently in Wisconsin. In the statistics of the production of precious stones for 1889 presented by Mr. Kunz diamonds do not appear at all.

Sapphires and rubies are found near Helena in Montana, but they are not of the standard blue and red shades so much prized. They have never been mined systematically, though within the last two years companies have been formed to mine for them either separately or incidentally to the search for gold. Emeralds have been mined to a small extent in Alexander county in North Carolina, and some beryls have been discovered in Colorado, at New Milford in Connecticut, and at Stoneham in Maine. The turquoise is now systematically mined near Los Corillors in New Mexico, but it lacks the softness of color distinguishing the Persian turquoise, though it is fully equal to it in hardness. The finest garnets in the world, rivalling those from the Cape of Good Hope, are collected by the Navajo Indians and by soldiers of the adjacent forts from ant hills and scorpion nests in New Mexico and Arizona. The Indians trade them for stores, and they are sent to the market in parcels weighing sometimes as much as thirty or forty pounds.

This about completes the list of the better known and more important precious stones found in the United States. The small amount obtained of each and their respective frequency are suggested by Mr. Kunz's statistics of the value of the native gem production in 1889: Sapphires, $6,725; emeralds, $450; turquoises, $23,675; garnets, $2,308.

Accordingly, all except an insignificant part of the precious stones bought in this country are imported, and the demand is increasing. The value of the imports from 1870 to 1879 was less than $27,000,000; and between 1880 and 1889 it was more than $87,000,000, or more than three times as great. The increase has been steady. The value of the gems imported in 1889 was nearly twice that in 1880, and more than six times the importation of 1870. In no other country of the world is the use of these ornaments so general as here.

Diamond cutting is extensively practiced in the United States. In New York alone are sixteen firms pursuing the business, much of their time being expended in recutting stones previously cut abroad, for our workmanship is superior. From the latter part of 1888 to the end of 1889 the price of rough diamonds advanced from 80 to 100 per cent. The great reduction in weight due to cutting is shown by the fact that diamonds or diamond material which weighed 54,344 carats before cutting weighed only 25,005 carats afterward. Nine-tenths of this work is done in New York, which is the great centre of the American trade in the precious stones, while London is the chief market of the world for rough diamonds. Nothing, by the way, is bought and sold on a closer margin than the rough diamond. The amount of cutting done here increased by 94 per cent. in the ten years from 1880 to 1889.

The value of the diamonds and other precious stones imported into this country in 1889 alone was $11,705,000.—Sun.

1, A. C. Hallefinger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer

Does this more pleasantly, more safely and more surely than any remedy known to medical science.

These Five Things

in which it differs from other medicines account largely for its wondrous popularity:

1. It does not taste like medicine. It is as pleasant as lemonade, and, sweetened, makes a most refreshing drink. Persons who object to all other medicines take this with real pleasure, because it is so.

2. It never nauseates. The most delicate stomach finds in this a perfect remedy without a single objection.

3. It never wraps off one disease for another. It does not set up one form of disease in order to relieve another, as is the case with so many deadly drugs.

4. It does not patch simply. It cures. It reaches, as nothing else does, to the hidden sources of disease in the blood, and removes the cause. It does this with an ease and power that have never been equaled.

5. It is harmless, and may be safely given to a babe one day old. It is free from Alcohol and Opium.

All persons living in a malarial district should keep this great family remedy on hand. It will break any fever in half the time required by quinine and anti-pyrine, and leave none of their unpleasant and hurtful effects.

For Malaria, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Sick Headache, Kidney Trouble, and Blood and Skin diseases, there is nothing to be compared with it. For Ladies and Children it is far the best.

OBITUARIES.

BROWN—Sister MARTHA A. BROWN (nee Aldridge) passed out of our mortal sight, "through peace to light," Jan. 29, 1891. She was born in Jefferson county, Miss., near old Spring Hill Church and Camp Ground, in 1815. She spent most of her earthly pilgrimage in that vicinity, always within a half day's ride of her birthplace.

Hers was no ordinary life and experience. Her parents poor and hard-working, could still find time to hold family prayers. It was at his altar that she was brightly converted when only nine years of age. Ever after "prayer was a well-spring of joy" to her. Whether in prosperity or adversity, she delighted in the mercy-seat, where Jesus answers prayer. She was soon received into the Methodist Church by Rev. John C. Johnson, and remained within the pale till called to the church triumphant. By the same revered minister she was married to Mr. Jamerson Liddell, Sept. 26, 1836. Six children were born unto them, of whom five still remain this side the river. (A truer mother never was entrusted with this sacred responsibility. The children and grandchildren knew it all the time. Now they realize it.) She became a widow in 1856. She was married, April 17, 1858, to Rev. T. C. Brown, M. D., a local preacher of unusual gifts and consecration. At this time the ceremony was performed by her pastor, Rev. Wm. B. Johnson, the worthy son of a noble sire. In conjunction with this man of God, his consecrated wife and his mother, her sister carried forward a Sunday-school at old Bethel, where many young souls were happily brought to Christ. Dr. Brown died before many years of their happy married life had elapsed. Left a widow for the second time, she sent the remnant of her days far removed from church privileges, but holding sweet communion with God in her heart. Dwelling most of the time in a neat cottage with a single daughter the sons had all married and built homes for themselves), she had the utmost quiet. The Prince of Peace seemed to overshadow that cottage on the hill.

For many years she suffered, and at times death seemed very near. Visiting her during such times I found her soul not only at peace, but rejoicing in the prospect of a translation to higher sphere.

She delighted greatly in flowers, and, perhaps overworked herself to see them bloom in perfection. In these she found something to speak to her of the "beauty of the Lord her God."

Besides her pastor and other friends who visited her during the final illness, her venerable son, Rev. W. B. Johnson, came. With him by her the gates of the city were opening wide and she could take the message, "I am coming too, very soon," to the sainted wife she went on high a few years ago. This dying mother called each son by name, leaving for each a charge—"Meet me in heaven." To the silent, sorrowing daughter: "Dear child, you are a part of my life." The kind physician, J. McNair was not forgotten in her messages of confidence and affection. May all these dear friends meet her where parting is not known.

J. P. D.

CHAPMAN—Mrs. LAURA EDWARDS CHAPMAN was born in Sumpter county, Ala., in 1811; married to Dan T. Chapman in August, 1836, coming him to his home in Richland parish, near Alto, where she resided to the day of her death April 26, 1891. Monday night, the twentieth she was attacked with pneumonia, which did its work so quickly that she "fell on sleep" the following Sabbath, just as the darkness was being dissipated by the approach of the "day-goal."

She early gave her heart to God, uniting with the Methodist Church at Meridian, Miss., several years before her marriage. The young couple immediately erected a family altar, and not only lived a consistent Christian herself, was a continual strength to her husband, a well as a living epistle to the Lord to all who knew her. She was a strong Methodist, and thought it her duty to make her own money to contribute to missions and other church enterprises instead of calling upon her husband. Her greatest pleasure was to entertain God's saints and all who have ministered to these people of the old Richland circuit, as they of these times will readily recall the kindly, free and generous hospitality of Sister Chapman of Little Creek Church.

As she lived, so she died, triumphing in the glorious assurance of eternal life with her Lord. Perfectly conscious of approaching death her composure was grand. No fear, no doubt, but blessed assurance. After quietly giving directions and commands, and bidding husband and children and other loved ones good by, urging all to meet her in heaven, the light of life leaped up and expired, and without a pain, without a sigh, her soul stood at the mercy-seat—her end, peace.

Her only daughter, married and living in Texas, upon being telegraphed for, arrived in time to receive her blessing; but her darling son, Bascom, a student of Centenary College, was not permitted that painful joy. She remembered him, and thanked God to know he had been converted a short time since when a revival wave swept through the grand old college, and left word for him to be faithful unto death and meet her in heaven.

To our stricken brother and his four motherless children we offer our deep sympathy in this hour of sorrow.

The immense gathering at the church, as we came to lay the dead reverently away, was at once a touching tribute to her worth and of the fatherly and love for Bro. Chapman, who is one of God's chosen vessels. As the pastor announced the text—"She hath done what she could"—and proceeded to unfold and apply it, we felt how singularly appropriate it was to those whose remains were hidden away in the earth, itself almost concealed by the wealth of flowers laid thereon by loving hands.

G. A. MANDEVILLE, Pastor.

COWART—Bro. JOHN COWART was born in South Carolina, Aug. 26, 1806; moved to Jackson county, Miss., with his parents when quite a small boy. He spent the whole of his life in this county. He served this county several years as supervisor. He was married to Miss Mary Holder, Feb. 9, 1832. There were given unto them twelve children—seven living now—to mourn his death; but they are encouraged in the belief that he is in a better world. Their hope is founded upon the life he lived, which was faithful and true.

Bro. Cowart has served the church as steward, which he did faithfully and well, looking well after the support of the preacher. As class leader he did well, holding this place until one year before his death. He was the most faithful man we ever knew (considering his age). Since I have been here I have never missed him from Mt. Zion Church until last Sunday. (Probably he is now attending church in the world above.) Bro. Cowart raised a large family, and gave them the best education he could. The church will be blest by his children.

He spent the last day of his life thus: He ate dinner with his son, and spent part of the evening with him. Went a short distance to visit his daughter and son-in-law. When he was leaving was very lively and playful. Ate supper. He was the last one to retire to bed. In a few hours a call for help was given; but it did not avail anything. In a few hours he died without fear. Death had a sting. Thus ended the pilgrimage of a good member of the M. E. Church, South (which membership was about sixty-five years). He was a true man, devoted neighbor, husband and father. He died on the night of April 6, 1891, aged eighty-four years eight months and twenty days. God bless the aged companion and the bereaved children!

M. L. WHITE, P. C.

STREET—VALLEY, son of M. S. and E. J. Street, was born July 13, 1887, and died Feb. 25, 1891. Dear little Valley's death occurred under most distressing circumstances. While his mamma was away from home visiting my own precious mother during her last illness, little Valley got up in the morning as usual and went to the fire. While playing on the hearth his clothing ignited, and soon he was wrapped in flames. He bore his intense suffering so meekly for twenty-one long days, and then God took him to live with him in heaven, where the beautiful bud will become the full-blown angel-flower beneath the smiles of Jesus.

May God sanctify this sad affliction to the good of his family! He was the only son of his mother, and the hearts of all fondly cling to this bright, sweet boy. But we know God is too wise too err, too good to be unkind; so we bow in humble submission to his will, for "all things work together for good to them that love God."

EMMA FOSTER.

Christ's Challenge to Unbelievers.

When Christ said, "If any man is willeth to do God's will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God," it gives Mr. Grattan Guiness an opportunity to say a few words:

When I was in California last year, I came across a remarkable case of the conversion of an infidel by means of a text which may be described as "Christ's Challenge to Unbelievers." Astonished at the wisdom displayed by the teachings of the Lord Jesus, the Jews asked the question, "How knoweth this man letters—or learning—having never learned?" or studied in any of the great Jewish schools. In answer to this question our Lord affirmed the doctrine which he taught was not of man, but of God. "My doctrine," he said, "is not mine, but his that sent me." Then he added, "If any man will do"—or is willing to do—for such is the force of the Greek expression used—"If any man is willing to do his will"—that is, the will of God—"he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God." Here, then, is a challenge addressed by the Lord Jesus Christ to unbelievers.

The expression which he uses in describing those to whom the challenge is addressed is broadly inclusive, yet definite. If any man, he says—any man, in any country or time—is sincerely willing to do the will of God, willing to do what he knows in his own soul, in his own God-given conscience, to be morally right, or in harmony with the divine will—that man shall receive light as regards the teachings of Christ; he shall understand the character and source of those teachings. If they are false, he will be conscious of their falseness; if they are true, he will be conscious of their truth; if they are of man, he will be conscious of their merely human origin; if they are of God, he will be conscious of their divine origin. Let any man, then, be but willing to do the will of God, and the question of the divine origin of Christianity will settle itself in his mind correctly and finally.—Southern Churchman.

THE MISSION OF JESUS.—The one statement which goes to the heart of the story, and lays bare the secret of the presence of Jesus on this earth, is: "He came to seek and to save that which was lost." He was not here for wealth; he was not here for political power and honor; he was not here for social enjoyment; he was not here to win renown in the realms of war or art or science or scholarship; he was not here to revel in the beauties of nature, and to see how much delight he might find in stars and flowers and mountains and sunny ravines and rivulets and seas; he was here "to seek and to save that which was lost." All the majesty of his being; all the glory of his sublime personality; all his vast powers of thought and expression; all the love which welled up out of the depths of his divinity; all the stainless purity he brought with him out of the heavens when he came down from God, were consecrated to the end of seeking and saving the lost. For this he lived; for this he suffered and died on the cross; for this he rose from the dead.—F. A. Noble, D. D.

And weep and pray and hope,
Till others with some common sense,
Come like a blessed providence,
And throw a saving rope.

If you are diseased, a word concerning the remedy for your trouble will be a saving rope to you. Observe what the rescued have to say:

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

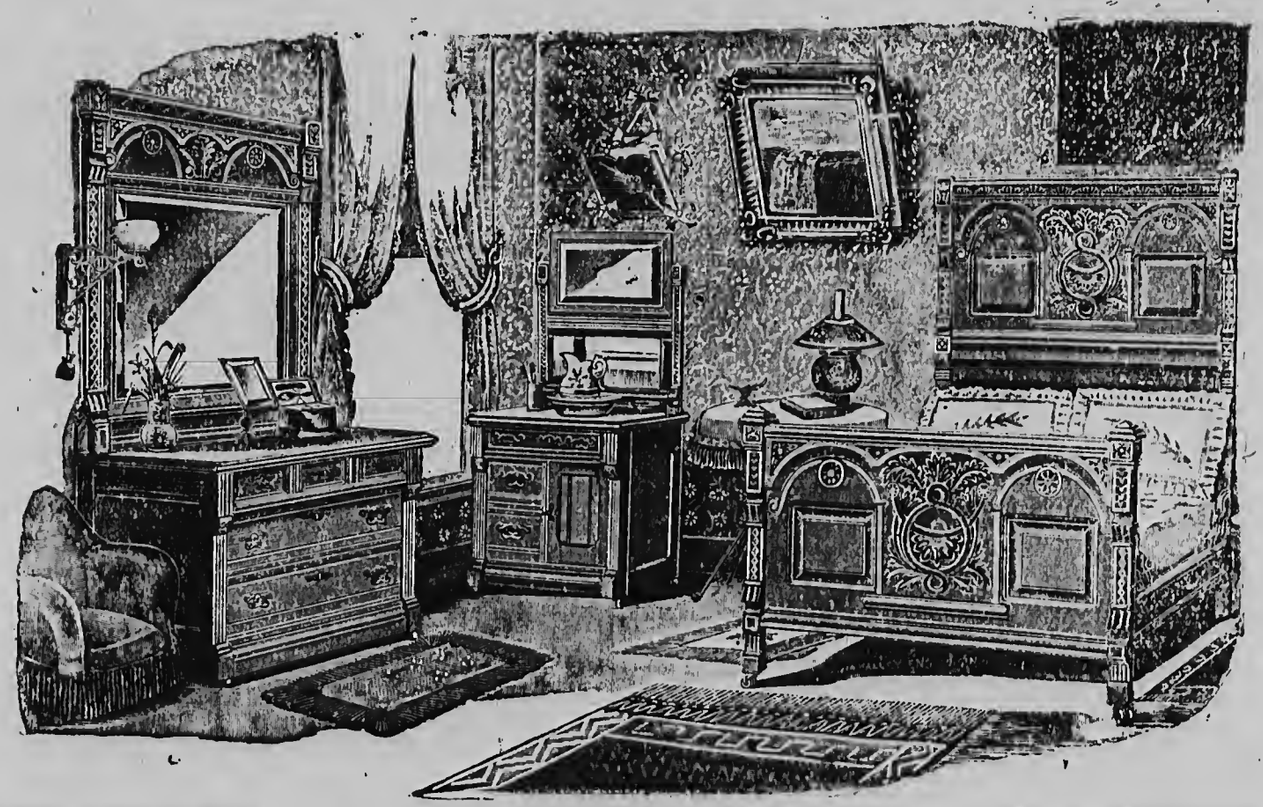
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatello or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Church Organs.

The following letter was received without any solicitation whatever, and explains itself:

FARRAND & VOTEY, Detroit, Mich.

JOHNSTOWN, PA., Jan. 5, 1891.

Farrand & Votey Organ Co.

GENTLEMEN.—After nearly a year of trial of the magnificent organ you erected in our Church, I feel constrained to write to express my unqualified satisfaction with it in every respect. It is not only the finest-looking organ I have ever seen, being a grand ornament to the Church edifice, but the sweetest-toned instrument of the kind I have ever listened to. While it is fully as large as it ought to be, and fills the large audience-room with tones full of majesty, there is not a harsh or rough-sounding pipe in it. On the contrary, it is so soft and truly musical, that to listen to it is an unfailing joy. All our people concur in the above. Yours truly,

H. L. CHAPMAN.
Pastor of Methodist Episcopal Church.

P. S.—Give my regards to Mr. Wood, whose gentlemanly and genial manners, while engaged in erecting the organ, gave us all great pleasure.

Yours, etc.,
H. L. CHAPMAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A monument erected to the memory of Gen. Pat C. Cleburne, in Helena, Ark., was unveiled on May 10.

A district convention of the Epworth League, comprising the Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Ohio and Kentucky, is to meet at Cincinnati, June 9, 10 and 11. Arrangements are being made to entertain 500 delegates.

As a result of the grand jury's investigation into the affair at the Parish Prison, in which the Italians were killed, the action of the citizens is declared justifiable, and, as the movement is considered a general uprising of the people, no indictments are made against individuals.

Forest fires prevail throughout north Wisconsin, and immense damage has already been done to standing timber and logs. Michigan is also suffering from forest fires, especially in the peninsula. Unless heavy rains come, the fires will prove more disastrous than those of previous years.

Recent statistics published by the Mexican government show that the exports from Mexico into the United States have increased so rapidly that the people of this country take all but 20 per cent. of the merchandise exported from Mexico, although the manufacturers of the United States do not furnish more than half of the imports of that republic.

The Navy Department is still in sore straits to find able seamen enough to man our ships. Nearly all of the recruits that the law allows have been taken on, and yet there are not enough to go around. It is said at the Navy Department that there must be a pro rata scaling down of the complement of all our ships—at least until Congress meets and enlarges the force.

The $800,000 steel plant for Birmingham is a certainty. The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has subscribed $300,000, the Elyton Land Company has agreed to take $100,000. Ionman and associates $100,000, and individuals have applied for the balance. It will be erected at Ensley, five miles west of the city. It is said that the work of erection will commence in ulnety days.

An immigration convention will be held at Raleigh, N. C., May 27, of all persons of Northern birth now residing in that State and interested in immigration and in the development of its resources. The convention will decide what steps should be taken toward co-operating with the Southern Interstate Immigration Bureau, to call, at an early day, a general convention of Northern settlers in the South.

Complaints against the street cleaning department of Cincinnati have been both numerous and loud. On May 8 affairs reached a crisis on Wade street. The women who reside on that thoroughfare resolved to act. At a given signal women and children swarmed out of their houses with brooms and other cleaning implements, and the work of cleaning the street was pushed vigorously. In an hour all was ready for the city carts. Not satisfied with cleaning the street, the women took a hand at the sewers. Later in the day the Board of Aldermen appropriated $10,000 additional for special street cleaning purposes.

Gov. Boyd, of Nebraska, who was elected last November, has been ousted from office and replaced by Gov. Thayer, his predecessor. Mr. Boyd has never been naturalized, and though he has resided in this country forty years, he still is a subject of Great Britain. The Constitution of Nebraska declares that "no person is eligible to the office of governor who has not been a citizen of the United States and this State (Nebraska) for at least two years next preceding the election at which such officer is to be chosen." A suit to oust him was brought in the Supreme Court of Nebraska, and the decision was against him.

FOREIGN.

Emperor William, in a speech at Bonn, justified students' duels, saying they were greatly misunderstood by the public.

The German government has officially accepted President Harrison's invitation to take part in the World's Fair, and an appropriation has been made.

The expulsion of Jews from Moscow continues. Harsher measures are expected with the approach of the Easter holidays. Neither baptism nor appeal to foreign consuls avail to secure escape.

Costa Rica has given assurance of hearty co-operation in the World's Fair. The government will erect its own building at Chicago, and appoint five commissioners. The national museum of Costa Rica will send a valuable exhibit.

The lower house of the Prussian diet has voted 165,000 marks for Prof. Koch's institute. Prof. Virchow opposed the grant and denounced Kochism, declaring it had proved a failure. He warned the doctors who were using the lymph that they ran a great risk if they continued to treat their patients with the alleged remedy.

The Italie says: "The Italian government is about to express a circular to the European powers submitting the conduct of the United States government in the New Orleans affair to their judgment. Italy will thus be the initiator of an international agreement to compel the United States to find means to guarantee the protection of foreign subjects."

The McCarthyites have received overtures, proposing to them not to contest a number of seats, in consideration of the Parnellites abstaining from contesting other seats. As this arrangement is a trick to allow Mr. Parnell to return to the next Parliament at the head of a secure traction of probably twenty, the McCarthyites will not assent to it. Every Parnellite candidate will be opposed.

ASLEEP AND AWAKE.

BY FANNIE MINOR MONTGOMERY.

"I must work the work of him that sent me, while it is day: the night cometh, when no an can work."—John ix. 4.

Sleeping, resting 'mid life's duties,
Though the race was scarce begun;
Heeding not the solemn warning,
"Lo! the day will soon be done."

"Comes the night of death on swiftly;
Rise, awake to life, and see
All the good thou shouldst be doing;
Lo! the Master calls for thee."

Long he called; so deep the slumber
Scarce my soul stirred to be free,
Till the spirit whispered clearer,
"Lo! the Master calls for thee."

"Lord, I come," my heart responded;
"Let me now thy servant be.
See, I yield a willing service,
Glad my Master calls for me."

Winona District Conference.

The twenty-second session of the Winona District Conference met in the historic and beautiful city of Lexington, Miss., May 8, 1891. Lexington is situated on the I. C. branch railroad, midway between the Big Black and the Yazoo river. It is the county site of Holmes county, one of the largest counties in the State, being one of the few that escaped being carved when so many of our counties were cut up into smaller counties, not for the convenience nor for the good of the people, but to make more offices to be filled. Lexington is a quite pretty town, and is situated upon a lofty plateau.

The first thing that impresses a visitor upon entering Lexington is the size of the residence lots, which, like Holmes county, are large. This is quite refreshing in these days, when almost everything is sought to be compressed into the smallest possible space. While the size of these lots is in consonance with the size of the county, it is also typical of the generous hospitality dispensed by the citizens in their elegant homes.

Our pastor there, Rev. J. C. Lowe, makes a good Conference host, and had everything in readiness.

The Conference met on Friday, at nine o'clock A. M. The District Woman's Missionary meeting had just closed, leaving a good religious influence. Sister Streater's ease and grace in the chair and Sister Hargrove's most excellent address had won the approbation of all. God bless these noble women in their work of faith and labor of love! The absence of Bishop Galloway was cause of universal regret. Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E., presided. J. R. Bingham and Rev. W. B. Hargrove were elected secretaries. The attendance was large. Rev. J. D. Worsham and Rev. W. H. Sanders were absent on account of sickness, much to the regret of those present. Resolutions of sympathy with Col. O. J. Moore, that staunch layman of Winona, who was detained at home by sickness, were passed. Col. Moore has rarely missed a District Conference since they were incorporated into our economy. His habit is to attend every church meeting of which he is a member. The pastors, in reporting their works, used the blanks prepared by Bishop Hargrove; hence the reports were fuller than any ever heard before in District Conference by your scribe. Committees were appointed on the various subjects, and their reports, based on these full reports, show the work to be in good condition. From these reports, by the kindness of the secretary, your correspondent learned some interesting facts about the district.

The Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church, while regretting that our people, as a whole, are not as faithful as they should be, report: "We are glad to state that we believe the district to be in a hopeful condition. There are hundreds of true, devout and deeply pious men, women and children within the bounds of the district. We think there is quite a hopeful sign in the young people and children of the country."

The report of the Committee on Financial Plans says: "The sixteen pastoral charges represented by their pastors report the total amount assessed for the support of the ministry to be $9,858, of which only twenty-seven per cent. has been paid to date. Winona station is the only charge that has paid its assessment in full to date. The average salary of the district is $616. The assessment for the general collections amounts to $3,649.23, of which eighteen per cent. has been paid to date. Greenwood station and Richland circuit are the only charges which have paid as much as fifty per cent. of their assessments. We offer for adoption the following resolutions:

"Resolved, That we believe it possible for every preacher in charge to bring up his full assessment; and, therefore, he ought to do it.

"Resolved, That we believe it possible for the stewards to raise every dollar of the preacher's salary, and that they should do it."

The Committee on Sunday-schools reported 58 schools in the district, 31 of which do not suspend during the winter; 270 teachers, 2,453 scholars—an increase of twenty-five per cent. over last year.

The Committee on Parsonages says: "It is very gratifying to your committee to be able to report that there is only one charge within the bounds of the Winona district where there is no parsonage, and there is no urgent need for one in this charge at present, it being served by a brother who has no family. (We refer to the Belzona work.) We find that nine of the parsonages are in good condition, and need no repairs, while there are eight that need more or less repairs. And in view of this fact, and the further fact that our district is much more fortunate than many of the other districts in the North Mississippi Conference, where there are comparatively few parsonages, we, your committee, would urge the preachers in charge to give all the aid and encouragement in their power to the organization of Parsonage and Home Mission Societies within the bounds of their various charges."

This certainly is a good showing for the district. But the bad feature is, there is no parsonage for the presiding elder. However, the District Parsonage Committee has about $200 in hand for the purpose of procuring one. The committee was continued, and urged to take necessary steps for the speedy securing of the parsonage, which they will do. J. R. Bingham was elected treasurer of that committee, and all persons having money for this enterprise were requested to forward it to him at Carrollton, Miss.

The Committee on Temperance reported that there are saloons in only four of the eighteen pastoral charges. Reaffirming our opposition to buying, selling and drinking intoxicating liquors, they also condemned the indiscriminate sale of narcotics, such as opium, morphine, etc.

I make the following extract from the report of the Committee on Education: "We reaffirm our pride and interest in the important question of Christian education, the handmaid of our beloved church. It affords us very great pleasure to note the steady and satisfactory advancement of the Methodist Church—aye, of the people of Mississippi—in education generally; and especially do we point with pride to the stress and emphasis which Christian education, denominational training, is receiving. We urge on Methodists the wisdom and propriety of patronizing Methodist institutions. The Grenada Collegiate Institute, presided over by the Rev. T. J. Newell, is the property of the North Mississippi Conference, and is worthy of the highest commendation. The pastors of the several charges in this district can do no better than to send their girls, who are going away to school, to Bro. Newell at Grenada. Your committee is highly gratified at the prospect of having at an early day in Millsaps College an institution for the higher education of our boys and young men. We are pleased to have with us at this session of our District Conference the agent, Rev. A. F. Watkins; and we pledge to him and the Board of Trustees our hearty co-operation. We rejoice at the report of the continued success and prosperity of Whitworth Female College, and are pleased to have with us Dr. W. B. Murrah, its vice-president."

The preaching during the session of the Conference was good—a full gospel to full houses.

Among the visitors to the Conference was Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Greenville, who was eight years in this district, the first three of which were spent at Lexington. Rev. G. W. Bachman, our successful colporteur, represented the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

F. M. Glass, J. B. Streater, J. R. Bingham and F. A. Howell were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, with J. G. Irving and S. C. Conley as alternates.

The next Conference goes to Durant.

On Sunday evening a memorial service was held, at which memoirs of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Rev. G. W. Brown and Bro. M. L. Harmon were read. The memory of Bro. Ramsey and of Bro. Brown is as ointment poured forth. Bro. Harmon is remembered for his devotion to the church.

When the District Conference meets again in Lexington, may I be there.

JUNIOR.

"A Short Explanation."

The language Bro. "B." quoted from my article, of March 5, as "an assumption," I least anticipated would be criticised. How he finds anything in it contradictory to God's omniscience, or what there is needing "a short explanation," is hard for me to make out. He says: "I can not conceive how God could need to become acquainted with man, or he brought into sympathy with him. From the beginning he has been familiar with the nature, condition and necessities of the human race, and gave his only begotten Son in attestation of his sympathy and love."

This is eminently true; but it by no means precludes the possibility nor necessity of God becoming acquainted with the nature, conditions and needs of man, in the purely human phases of life, "by an actual human experience."

The physician knows his patient is dangerously ill with pneumonia; he knows it to be pneumonia; he can name every symptom, locate every pain, and tell the exact stage it has reached in its malicious work on the human system. He knows, has, and can skillfully administer, too, the necessary remedy to relax its tenacious grip on the vitals of life, and restore the suffering victim to health. This is knowledge far superior to that of the patient—knowledge he had scarcely dreamed of; yet he knows something of pneumonia by suffering its unmerciful ravages that the physician is in total ignorance of, having never experienced it himself. For him to gain this knowledge, it is prerequisite for him to be afflicted with this fatal disease in his own person.

So God knew the deep depravity of the human heart; the sorrows, afflictions, temptations and sufferings of our race, and the remedy necessary to "heal our wounds and drive away our tears;" but he did not know and feel them in the blessed fellowship of a communion-inspiring, fraternal experience. For God to know and feel our sufferings as we know and feel them, it was necessary for the divine nature to interpenetrate humanity at every point of contact, and draw our nature up into the divine nature, so as to make them one in the intimate union and companionship of suffering. That the glorified Savior might have a "tender human-heartedness" that would reciprocate ours in a loving, joyous sympathy, and a feeling, touching sensitiveness of the hopes and fears and misgivings that tempt and battle and scourge the soul "with a scorpion-lash," he had to be "tempted in all points like as we are," and feel the burden of our sorrow and weight of grief in all the phases of their humanness. Unless Bro. "B." can prove from the holy oracles of inspiration that "an actual human experience" is comprehended in the vast reaches of "God's omniscience," as one of the constituent elements of its illimitableness, I shall contend that there is marginal space enough in the universal knowledge of God for him to become acquainted with the "environments and needs of our race by an actual human experience, that the divine nature" might be "brought into absolute and eternal sympathy with man in all his sufferings."

But is the language in question "an assumption," posited on nothing higher and truer than the mythic flight of a fitful imagination? Bro. "B." thinks so. He says it is "an assumption that violates no principle of the Christian religion, nor stands in the way of no man's salvation." The great apostle of the Gentiles, however, seems to have entertained quite different views. With him it involved some of the nobler principles and heavenlier truths of the Christian religion that lie deeply embedded in the conscious experience and unctuous devotions of God's spiritually begotten children. He says: "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings." (Hebrews ii, 10.) The question I wish to ask Bro. "B." is this: Did Paul, by the use of the above language, intend to convey the idea that it became God, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make them (the sons) perfect through the sufferings of the captain of their salvation?—or did he mean what he said, "make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings?" Doubtless he meant what he said, for he immediately adds: "For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one: for which cause"—because of his human equality and suffering with them—"he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee." If Paul did not intend to teach the doctrine that Christ was brought into sympathy and fellowship with us while learning "obedience by the things which he suffered," he made a very inapt selection of language when he uttered the expression: "Wherefore in all things it behooved him" (Christ) "to be made like unto his brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people." Ask the question, Why did it behoove Christ to be made like unto his brethren in all things? and the only answer that can be given in consonance with the doctrine of Paul is, "that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people."

D. M. GEDDIE.

Shuqualak, Miss.

P. S.—I see nothing objectionable to Bro. "B.'s" paraphrastic quotation of my language. I believe the doctrine is equally true, though not so explicitly stated. Nemine contradicente, it is the correlative of the other. D. M. G.

Some Thoughts.

Meditation is often wonderful in its productions: sometimes sweet, sometimes otherwise; now satisfactory, now perplexing. Of late we have been thinking, thinking; meditating on things read and observed in our contact, and in experiencing our experience with the world. In all our cogitations and cognitions questions, rare and puzzling, present themselves for solution or recognition. Many men of many minds, and we pass on to the next, still questioning, still wondering. As we read, one talks to us of old men and old sermons; another of old men and new sermons; again, others of new men and new sermons, of lost powers and acceptability, of fresh men; of zeal, enthusiasm, and power; of small salaries and large; of ancient and modern churchisms, institutions and administrations, and of "songs triumphant," and otherwise. Is it well? Let us hope for the best, and make the best of all we see and hear. They may prove beneficial, at least, in giving exercise to the mind, and thus develop activity and powers which would else lie dormant. As to the "songs," would that we might re-name them "vanquished songs," forever vanquished by the old Wesleyan standard hymns! Possibly we "don't know much;" but we have been thinking.

I was talking with a brother, not long ago, who remarked very emphatically on the lack of zeal, unity and fraternity among the various denominations. He takes no church paper, rarely reads any other; but "has heard men talk;" prays eloquently at the church, but has no family altar. Is it well to have him lead the public prayer? What do his neighbors, his children, think? What will be the effect? Others, some in the midst of revivals, or elsewhere, with the same stereotyped prayer, varying not one hair's-breadth, either in tone or sentiment. Of what use are these? How can they be made effective?

Characters, various and many, we meet with in the church. Men who accept the office of steward hold it through the year; yet neither pay themselves, or collect from others, for the support of the gospel, who can not be persuaded into subscribing for an Advocate, or buying a Discipline. Teachers who ask, mechanically, the questions on the lesson for Sunday, but are "too busy to look over the lesson through the week;" men who are seldom absent from the "club" or "lodge," yet are too tired to "come" to prayer meeting; others who can not afford to give to the cause of Christ, yet invest continually in "shows" and lottery tickets. Is it wise? We are just thinking. Others, whose "stocks" and "bonds" are counted by the dollars, and not by hundreds and thousands, yet, to them, a hint is sufficient, and presents an opportunity in which they delight to give of that which, to them, has been given of the Lord, and who may be counted in all the enterprises of the church. The women—well, might it not be better, in some respects, if all our church members were women?—or, maybe, if the men would not hamper them? Others, again, who "set store" by the administrations and ordinances more than all love and spirituality, forbidding men to labor or "cast out devils," because "they follow not us."

Is the transfer system Methodistic? Then why so much ado? Is it because another gets the coveted place? Are not our disappointments oftentimes proven to be God's appointments? Though a Son, did he not learn obedience by the things which he suffered? How grandly sublime is humility! As we give place to others, forgetting self, stooping to raise a fallen brother, to what heights of peace, joy and usefulness are we exalted by him who made himself of no reputation, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross! W. F. HENDERSON.

Sunday-School Anniversary.

The forty-fourth anniversary of the New Orleans Sunday-school Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was celebrated last Sunday afternoon in Carondelet Street Church. We have rarely seen such a crowd as assembled in the old church. The audience-room was packed from the doors to the pulpits; many chairs and benches being placed in the aisles, and, by actual count, there were three hundred people in the galleries. It was a notable gathering, representing largely the hope and possibilities of the future Methodist Church in New Orleans. We believe that all our Sunday-schools were well represented. The secretary's report showed that excellent work had been done during the year past. Membership and attendance and collections were all reported, and then a general average was struck, and the school having the largest general average was declared to be the "Banner School." The average ran well up; but the Algiers school, having reached a general average of 121 per cent., was declared the winner of the banner. This is not the first time that school has taken the prize, and Pastor Johns and Superintendent Daniels and his teachers and scholars deserve honorable mention. Carrollton school was next, and Carondelet next. Louisiana Avenue school has the largest number on roll and raised the largest amount of money. The other schools did well, but not so well as these mentioned. The exercises of the anniversary consisted in songs and recitations by the children, and a short address by Pastor LaPrade. Bro. LaPrade gave a good twenty minutes' talk; the recitations were commendable and the singing was refreshing and uplifting. We have only one adverse criticism. In a Methodist anniversary it ought not to be possible to sing seven songs and not one of them from the Methodist Hymn and Tune Book. Such a slight is inexcusable.

Methodism and Local Option.

In order to correct a misapprehension, which may lead to unnecessary and unfortunate differences among the temperance workers of our church, I ask space for a short note. Among the resolutions adopted at the recent meeting of the W. C. T. U. State Convention at Brookhaven, Miss., is the following:

Resolved, That while local option has been of service in the preliminary struggle against alcohol, we believe it to be ineffectual as a temperance measure, false in principle, and a compromise with the liquor traffic. Therefore, we align ourselves squarely with the Methodist General Conference at St. Louis, with the Mississippi Baptist State Convention and other bodies which have declared for prohibition of the saloon, and that we will join our brother prohibitionists in asking for legislation that will protect the State in its homes.

That resolution does not correctly state the action of the General Conference or the attitude of the Methodist Church on the subject of temperance and prohibition. The General Conference at St. Louis adopted a strong report endorsing prohibition, but nowhere said or intimated that local option, which is one form of prohibition, was "false in principle and a compromise with the liquor traffic." The Mississippi Conference, at its recent session, commended in plain and vigorous tones the principle and policy of local option. In fact, the principle is precisely the same and the purpose identical—the suppression of the saloon and the complete overthrow of the liquor traffic. I write this specially for the brave and true temperance workers of our great church, which has ever stood in the front in every fierce struggle with the matchless evil of the age. CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Millsaps College Notes.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees, to be held in Jackson on the twentieth of this month, will settle the question as to which of several proposed sites in the city and its vicinity will be selected for the college.

The notice calling for plans and specifications for buildings, to be submitted by the first of June, indicates that the Building Committee have not been idle. The friends of the college will soon see some brick laid.

Ten thousand dollars would build a beautiful dormitory, and it might be called "—— Hall," or "—— Memorial Hall," in honor of the generous builder. This isn't what has been done, but what might be done if some wealthy Mississippi Methodist would make a good investment of that much money.

The agent visited Jonestown recently, where a small collection was taken up, and $125 given as the nucleus of a "W. H. Watkins' scholarship."

Crystal Springs reports a "Clara Chrisman scholarship" collection, amounting to one hundred and thirty-two dollars.

This writer will not soon forget the pleasure of a recent visit to Carlisle, Miss., where several days were spent in the hospitable home of Bro. E. D. Jones. On Sunday we had service at Bartouton, four miles distant, and received in cash and subscriptions two hundred dollars on our college endowment fund.

The friends of the college must not forget that the payment of the second $25,000, subscribed by Major Millsaps, depends upon the payment of the second $25,000 by the church. We have endowment notes covering this amount, but many of these notes are long since past due, and ought to be taken up. Many of the notes maturing on the first of last December could be paid now without effort; and even where personal inconvenience would follow, the payment should not be delayed, for the success of the college depends upon the paying of these notes. A little self-denial upon the part of our people would place beyond a peradventure the collecting of the balance of the $100,000 by the first of December next. A. F. WATKINS.

Emulation is a handsome passion; it is enterprising, but just withal: it keeps a man within the terms of honor, and makes the contest for glory fair and generous. He strives to excel, but it is by raising himself, not by depressing another.—Collier.

APPRECIATION.

Thrice blest is he whom God endows
With truest gifts of seeing,
Who feels each beauty day by day
Throughout his unmost being;
Who reads the language of the breeze,
The brooklet's rippling laughter,
Who hears the whispers in the trees
And bird songs coming after;
Who notes each blossom on the ground,
Each grass-plume graceful bending,
Each happy floweret all around
Its incense upward sending

The myriad voices of the night,
The insect's drowsy humming,
The wind announcing through the leaves
The tempest-chariot's coming;
The gentle music of the waves
The ocean's varied voices,
The zephyr which o'er toilers' graves
For peace and rest rejoices;
Who sees the sunbeam through the cloud,
The hope through gloom or sadness,
The deep soul-murmurs low or loud
Of nature in her gladness.

Who knows each beauty half revealed
In every dell and dingle,
And every vision half concealed
Where night and morning mingle;
Knows well each grace and marvel caught
By moonbeams softly shining,
And loves the pictures deftly wrought
By shadows intertwining.

Begin at the Beginning.

Is there a reason why the inculcation of religion in its primary principles should be delayed awhile? May not Christianity begin at any period of life? Is there a good, or even a plausible, reason for the common delay until youthhood or adult years are well set in, or somewhat advanced? Is Christianity proper—not theology—impracticable, or even difficult, at an early period in life, however early? Is it naturally possible to begin a Christian life too early? Is there such a thing in the human constitution as ineligibility to Christianity for lack of years, or for any other lack? Is not true religion exactly adapted to the particular circumstances and condition of every living person? Is there anything in the Bible that gives the slightest warrant for the common practice of postponing the inculcation of the true fundamental Christian principle until a more convenient season?

Noticing that the above questions make no inquiry about theology as a science, I do not see how any thinking man or woman can hesitate as to the proper answer. And I confess I do not know how to write for the thoughtless, who imagine that they know without thinking.

The more I see of mankind, the more and the more I am convinced of the popular error touching the moral and mental character of infant children. Indeed, it is remarkable that our men of brains and tongues and pens have had so little to say about the true philosophy of life's beginning. Is there a more promising field for the best thoughts of the best men? The common practice of family life, that a child needs nothing but a supply of his physical wants, and be kept from crying, is as thoughtless as it is popular. And near of kin to this is the notion that most young children are very bad; they are born of satanic rottenness, and are incapable of anything but wickedness. And some people even go so far as to prove it by Scripture! Scripture is the scapegoat for no little folly and crookedness. A bad child is the best evidence the nature of the case admits of, of bad parents. Bad parents make bad children.

If Christian parents have not yet learned it, it is high time they had—that children are born, not bad, but good; but, nevertheless, with a powerful tendency to disobedience, which, if suffered to grow—which is uniformly the custom—will soon grow into every form of criminality. And, furthermore, they ought to know that they, themselves, are placed there in commission by divine authority, first of all, to repress, curb and stifle this evil tendency. If they say they could not do this, they should be reminded that they never tried—that is, it was a child's effort: too feeble, and applied too late. But they say this was a very bad child. That may be so; but the parent sat idly by and suffered it to become so. No child was ever born beyond the mother's control. But some mother will say she began almost with a determined resolution to control her boy before he was a year or two old.

There now! What a poor, pitiful mother! Began to control him at one or two years old. With such utter mismanagement—such gross ignorance of the first and most important principles of human nature, and at such an important point of control—how can we expect Christianity to grow? Are we not doing well to keep it alive? Here are, say, an average of two hundred mothers with no more knowledge of the way human character is formed than to talk about beginning to control a child at one or two years, furnishing a congregation to each pastor every twenty-five years. How is it possible for Christianity to prosper?
